Nats Whip Yanks, 7-6, In 10th on Coan's Hit

Nagy Goes Route, Blanks Champs in Last 5 Innings For 1st Victory

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, April 22.—The Yankees felt a draft today and had their necks bowed by the Nats. Steve Nagy, drafted for $10,000 from the Coast League, pitched a million-buck ball game and licked the Yanks, including Joe Page, 7 to 6, in 10 innings.

Nagy, the diminutive, curve-balling southpaw, outlasted three Yankee pitchers, survived some dumb baseball by his supporting cast, and held the Yankees runless after the fifth inning until he was rewarded by Gil Coan's game-winning hit.

Bucky Harris disdained a pinch-hitter for the left-handed Coan with two out in the tenth and Coan broke up the ball game with a solid single to center to confound Page and his 18,295 Yankee fans.

Yost's Hit Starts It

Eddie Yost opened the tenth with a single to left, and Al Kozar sacrificed him to second, but the threat apparently evaporated when Grasso popped up. But Nagy persevered and drew a walk from Page. Coan connected on 2-2 count.

Nagy had to ride out some fearful breaks to post his first major league victory. He saw his team blow a 5-1 lead, among other things, but from that point he grabbed hold, and allowed the Yanks only two hits in the final five innings.

He held Joe DiMaggio hitless, and in the Yanks' half of the tenth he defanged 'em in one-two-three order for a rare Washington victory—rare because it was merely their sixth in their last 34 games in Yankee Stadium, covering three seasons.

Dente Pulls Beaut of Boner

Until Nagy and Coan teamed up in the tenth to win the thing, Sam Dente was well on his way to being the goat of the game, with an unconscionable brainstorm that gave the Yanks the tying run in their five-run fifth inning.

After vainly chasing a bat-handle double by Yogi Berra that fell safe in short left field, Dente picked the ball up and for no reason at all forgot to return it to the infield. Tommy Henrich, who went from first to third on the blow, calmly raced all the way home while Dente was engaged in his reveries.

The little southpaw had to rise above a couple of misplays by Al Kozar, too, one of which presented the Yanks with two runs in the fifth inning, when Kozar muffed an easy grounder off Henrich's bat.

In the eighth with the score tied at 6-6, and Nagy in trouble with one out after Johnson walked and Coleman doubled him to third,

Lawford Denies 5 Goodbyes Mean He'll Wed Sharman

New York, April 22 (U.P.).—Movie Actor Peter Lawford said today Sharman Douglas is "one of the nicest girls I have ever met," but insisted he does not intend to marry her.

He said he and the blonde daughter of the United States Ambassador to Britain "never even talked of marriage."

"I never intended to get married and I never intended to ask her," he said. "I am playing the field as always."

But last night at the London airport, he told her goodbye five times.

They held hands and Lawford told her: "I can't kiss you here."

Suspected Leader Arrested

$200,000 Dope Ring Smashed; 11 Seized; Warrants Out for 11

By Jean Reiff and Robert Thompson
Post Reporters

Metropolitan police and Government agents began yesterday afternoon a roundup of what they termed "the biggest narcotics ring in town," which netted seven arrests on dope charges before midnight. Four other persons were held for investigation, and warrants were in police hands for 11 more.

The roundup started at 3 p. m. with warrants for 15 men, of whom four were arrested, and one more man and six women taken without warrants. Police said one ring-leader was among those arrested.

They said he did a business of more than $200,000 yearly.

Lieut. H. H. Carper, head of the police narcotics squad; Detective Sergt. William Taylor, Precinct Detective Joseph A. Gabrys, Thomas Andrew of the Federal Narcotics Bureau and Deputy United States Marshal Edward J. Geraci, were making the arrests.

The first three arrested were John Hannon Levister, 38, described as the head of the ring; Harry Lee, 51, and William Francis Corridan 53. Police said the men would not give correct addresses because they do not want their residences searched.

Levister, police said, gets narcotics from New York. They said he sells heroin for $4 a dose and cocaine for $2.50 a dose.

Police said that Levister had 30 customers who averaged four purchases a day. They said he was convicted of narcotic law violations in 1938 and served two years in an institution at Lexington, Ky.

Lee has a long record of narcotic law violations here. Records showed he was conditionally released on February 15 from the Lorton Reformatory, and has eight months more of his original sentence upheld, to now, pending good behavior.

The next arrests came in a mass, about 8:30 p.m., at Thomas circle. Working on a tip, the policemen picked up Fred Gray, 38, for whom they had a warrant. But when they found him, they said, he was leaning in the window of an auto, talking to Mrs. Virginia

Master Minds Blamed for Bottle Clubs

Fay Calls After-Hours Spots Flagrant Evaders Of D. C. Liquor Laws

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

"Certain masterminding individuals" have set up Washington's after-hour bottle clubs as a highly organized business, United States Attorney George Morris Fay charged in a brief on file yesterday in District Court.

The document summarizes the reasons why the Government seeks to drive out of business the bottle clubs as a mushrooming menace to the community. It recalls the recent testimony in the Congressional investigation of Washington's crime and points to bottle clubs as perhaps the most flagrant "evasion of the laws" of the city.

In the last week, District Court judges revoked the charters of four clubs and authorized receivers to effect their formal dissolution. Other club operators were enjoined from transferring assets pending trials in the next fortnight.

A "Sham," Prosecutors Say

The brief prepared by Assistant United States Attorneys Bruce G. Sundlun and Ross O'Donoghue says that the club incorporators used the "sham" of calling the organizations charitable, social, educational or scientific in order to evade liquor laws.

"After-hours clubs are nothing new," the brief says. "They represent in Washington just another attempt by society's criminal fringe to use the device of a social club to evade a local liquor statute . . . In substance the scheme practiced here is the same that has been used over and over again in many parts of the country in successive fruitless attempts to circumvent the law."

The clubs are founded, the Government says, by the device of creating a private club permitting drinking only by its members. In reality, the brief says, they are an attempt to "evade the laws controlling liquor sales and consumption in licensed public places."

The brief goes on to say:

"The particular scheme currently in vogue in Washington is a little more sophisticated than some which have existed in the past. Sometimes members would buy tickets and in return for punches made in such tickets the bartender would deliver the liquor. At other times people would buy a membership and as a return for the dues would be furnished liquor. Here

Woman Arrested On Suspicion of Bribe Attempt

An alleged attempt to bride a District Grand Jury witness in an abortion case was brought to light last night following the arrest of a Washington woman in Baltimore.

The woman was booked by Baltimore police as an "Alice Galuska." She was arrested after United States Attorney George Morris Fay notified Baltimore authorities of the reported bribe offer. He asked that the witness, who lives in Baltimore, be protected by police.

The witness, an unmarried woman in her 20's, was under subpena to appear before the grand jury last week in conection with the abortion case. She complained to police that she was approached by a woman who displayed $600 in cash and suggested she "take a nice, long vacation."

Strike Monday Held Possible

Indiana Dispute May Set Off Nation-Wide Phone Tieup

New York, April 22 (AP).—An isolated dispute in the Midwest threatened today to spark a coast-to-coast tieup of telephone installation services on Monday.

The threat came from Ernest Weaver, president of Division 6, CIO Communication Workers of America, representing 10,000 installation workers in 43 States and the District of Columbia.

He said the strike would be called unless Western Electric Co., manufacturing and installation unit of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., adjusted a dispute in Indiana.

If it comes, the strike would be two days before the end of a 60-day truce obtained by President Truman in an over-all wage fight between various CMA divisions and A. T. & T., parent company of the Nation-wide Bell System.

Because of the truce, Weaver said his union would not do any picketing before Wednesday, thus precluding the likelihood that the rest of the CWA's 200,000 members would be kept off their jobs Monday.

The sudden strike threat, temporarily overshadowing over-all telephone contract negotiations, stemmed from a relatively minor disagreement at South Bend, Ind.

There, 104 telephone installation workers struck on March 27 when a crew, according to the union, was

All Trains On Southern May Be Idled

Shutdown Planned By System Early This Week If Strike Threat Continues

By The Associated Press

The Southern Railway System announced plans yesterday to close down its entire 8000-mile system by Wednesday to meet a strike threat of locomotive firemen.

The Southern is the largest rail system in the South. It serves every State and major city in the area east of the Mississippi River and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, except West Virginia. It has 38,000 employes.

[The railroad employs about 1000 persons in the Washington area, a spokesman said. This includes workers in shops and yards in Washington and Alexandria as well as white-collar help. He said he did not know if the office workers would be furloughed if the railroad shuts down.—Editor's Note.]

Ernest E. Norris, the Southern's president, said an embargo will be ordered Monday if the strike threat for Wednesday by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen is still pending.

The union has called the strike for 6 a. m. Wednesday (local time) on the Southern and three other major railroads to back up a long-standing demand for assignment of a second firemen to help run multiple-engine Diesel locomotives. The strike would also apply to steam locomotives.

Norris said the Southern's embargo will bar acceptance of any freight or passengers unable to reach their destinations or clear the Southern system's lines by the strike deadline.

The demand for an extra fireman on diesels has been turned down by two White House fact-finding boards.

The strike applies also to the Pennsylvania system, west of Harrisburg, Pa.; the entire Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe system, and the New York Central west of Buffalo, N. Y..

Session Set for Today In Chrysler Deadlock

Detroit, April 22 (AP).—Apparently still far apart, Chrysler and CIO-United Auto Workers negotiators decided early tonight to put over until Sunday further talks seeking to end the 88-day-old strike.

The parties, after meeting four hours, agreed to convene at 10 a. m. Sunday.

Mediators said they called the sides back in the hope one might come up with a "new approach" to disputed contract issues.

The decision for a Sunday session was regarded with mild optimism in view of earlier indications that a recess of several days might be called to allow tempers to cool.

Survey Links Slum Laxity To Child Ills

232 Sick Youngsters In 211 Poor Homes Here; Regulations Held Badly Enforced

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Washington Housing Association yesterday presented one by-product of the District slum housing story—a case study of 232 sick, slum-raised children.

It was stated in bald terms.

The "sick children" report seeks to underline the association's drive for a tightened health enforcement program that would force owners of substandard dwellings to "keep them in proper repair or to demolish them."

The present enforcement process, the report concludes, "is woefully weak and lags far behind that of many other cities of comparable size."

Survey by 21 Workers

The survey of the 232 sick children in 211 families, living in the southwest and southeast sections, was conducted by 21 volunteer workers who made personal visits to the homes.

Gallinger Hospital furnished records of children under 12 years old from the two areas who were hospitalized there in the past 2½ years.

The investigators then visited the families represented by the hospital cases [152 families had moved since their children were released from Gallinger] and filled detailed questionnaires on housing conditions and occupants.

The survey showed:

1. Twenty-six percent of all youngsters under 12 in households investigated needed hospitalization during the last 2½ years.

2. Nearly half the families had to use outside toilets and 39 families got their water from cold water hydrants in backyards.

3. Of the 211 families forced to send one or more children to the hospital, 111 lived in houses needing "major repairs and/or lacked indoor sanitary facilities." Only 62 lived in structurally sound houses with access to indoor private toilet and water supply. Thirty-eight families lived in structurally standard houses but shared indoor toilet and water supply.

4. A high percentage of overcrowding was reported in all three classes of housing listed above.

More Rats Than People

But despite the "miserably overcrowded conditions . . ." the association commented, "the rat population still exceeds human population."

Said the survey: "One of the babies was bitten on the hand by a rat. When she began to cry, her

Every Citizen Has Role In Winning Cold War, Acheson Tells Editors

Threat to American Civilization Demands 'Total Diplomacy' by All, Secretary Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Acheson said last night that because of Russia's "threat . . . to our civilization," every American has a part to play in this Nation's "total diplomacy."

Foreign questions and domestic questions, Acheson said, now are all parts of the same thing, the problem of this country's security and well-being.

The United States, he said, is not judged abroad by what one of its ambassadors tells a foreign office, as was the case in the old days; it is judged by what the whole country says and does.

Speaks Before ASNE

Secretary Acheson spoke at a banquet ending the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the Statler. Picking up a line from B. M. McKelway of the Washington Star, retiring president of the society, he addressed the pundits in the audience as "my fellow Secretaries of State."

Acheson, whose department has been under the fire of Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) and other Republicans, was applauded vigorously when he finished his prepared speech. He was applauded even more vigorously at the end of an off-the-record talk that followed. One editor yelled, "Pour it on Mr. Secretary!"

The State Department will release off-the-record remarks of Acheson for publication as soon as the stenographic transcript can be made ready, possibly in time for tomorrow's newspapers.

Acheson told the assemblage that there could be no American-Soviet agreement until the Russians dropped their threat of aggression. And the word "aggression," he emphasized, included not only military attack, but propaganda warfare and the secret undermining of free countries from within.

Stresses Determination

The United States, he said, did not propose to undermine Soviet independence. Then, amidst applause, he continued:

"And we are just as determined that Communism shall not by hook or crook or trickery undermine our country or any other free country that desires to maintain its freedom. That real and present threat of aggression stands in the way of every attempt at understanding with the Soviet Union. For it has been wisely said that there can be no greater disagreement than when someone wants to eliminate your existence altogether."

Two newspapermen just returned from Europe, who spoke

Allied Authorities Report:

Machine Guns to Halt Red Berlin March, if Necessary

By The Associated Press

Allied authorities in Berlin were reported by high Government sources last night to be ready to use machine guns, if necessary, to prevent a massed march of young Communists from the eastern zone of Germany, occupied by Russia.

A march of 500,000 youths into West Berlin has been scheduled for May 27-30.

American officials were said to regard Berlin as a "crossroads" in the cold war and resolved not to be dislodged from the German metropolis.

If young Communist demonstrators attempt the proposed march across the East-West zone line, Allied authorities will resist firmly, it was stated.

Relatively "peaceful" means will be used if a march is begun despite refusal of permission by the Allied governments. These might include fire hoses, tear gas, and the like.

But if these fail, the western authorities are prepared to use machine guns or such other weapons as may be needed.

The Allied Command, which includes France and Britain, was declared to be resolved that West Berliners shall not be subjected to the terrorization of marching columns, in the style of Nazi demonstrations.

American officials were said to be convinced that Russian efforts are being concentrated on driving the Allied powers from the former German capital. When the blockade was thwarted by the air-

Truman Impressed by Display Of Latest Air, Land Weapons

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., April 22.—President Truman today concluded a two-day inspection of America's latest land and air weapons greatly impressed with the "precision and coordination" of the impressive military demonstration.

Here at the Air Force's proving ground, he saw jet-assisted B-36 bombers and the latest 600-mile-an-hour operational fighters go through their paces. Rockets, napalm and high explosive bombs blasted and burned targets with pin-point accuracy.

The display, like a similar demonstration of new Army weapons at Fort Benning, Ga., was also witnessed by every member of the top military command.

Secret Missiles Shown

Before flying back to Washington in the Independence, Mr. Truman also took a look at some secret guided missiles and the USAF Climatic Hangar where weapons of all the armed forces are under test, simulating Arctic 60 below zero temperatures.

(The President arrived at National Airport at 4:44 p. m. yesterday.)

Mr. Truman, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and the other civilian and uniformed chiefs of the armed services watched the aerial exhibition from bleacher seats at this Gulf Coast firing range.

A highlight was a contrast in the destructive power of the World War II bombing mainstay—the B-17 Flying Fortress—and the giant postwar B-36. The former dropped its maximum load—a dozen 500-pounders—while the B-36 loosed nearly 12 times as many bombs of the same size.

Speaking later at a luncheon at the base noncommissioned officers club, the President paid tribute to the "noncoms" of the armed forces.

Johnson Boasts Of Weapons, Equipment

Some U. S. War Tools Most Destrutcive Ever, Report Says

Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson said in his semiannual report to the President and Congress yesterday that the Nation's military establishment is:

1. Getting equipment superior to any in the world.

2. Developing war tools, some atomic, which are more destructive than any ever known.

3. Preparing for any eventuality in biological or radiological warfare.

The Defense Department report for the last half of 1949 heavily accented the importance of new means of destruction. It also highlighted the conservation of military manpower and the elimination of activities "not strictly necessary" for national defense.

Johnson released on February 28 the chapter of the report dealing with the economy program which he said would enable the Defense Department to cut approximately $1,200,000,000 from the President's defense budget for the year ending June 30.

At the end of 1949, armed services manpower totaled 1,551,000, a net decrease of 2000 officers and 63,000 enlisted men in six months.

At year's end, the United States had 36,000 military airplanes, with 5400 more being obtained with funds already authorized. Johnson also reported that 11,000 of the existing aircraft were fighters, 2000 of them jet powered.

Johnson noted that Russia's achievement of an atomic explosion "came earlier than expected" and forced the United States to

Bullet-Riddled Raft Reported Found in Baltic

Stockholm (Sunday), April 23 (AP).—The newspaper Dagens Nyheter today quoted a Swedish police officer at Visby, on Gotland Island, as having said a second rubber life raft picked up in the Baltic last Thursday appeared to have been hit by bullets.

American naval officials are examining it and another found in the Baltic last Sunday to see if they belonged to a United States Navy patrol bomber plane missing since April 8.

The United States has accused Russian fighter planes of shooting down the unarmed Privateer, with a crew of 10, and has demanded damages.

In addition to a large hole in the middle of the raft, apparently caused by fire, the policeman said he noted several other holes of a type that caused him to remark the raft "appeared to have been hit by bullets."

Earlier the official Swedish News Agency quoted Fred Nordgren, captain of a Swedish fishing vessel which picked up the second raft, also as having said the center hole appeared to have been caused by fire

'Off-Record' News Censorship Denounced Here by Editors

Censorship of news, especially under the guise of "off the record" information, was denounced yesterday by the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The editors, meeting at the Hotel Statler, unanimously adopted a resolution expressing disapproval "of any attempts at withholding news to which the public is entitled and particularly if such attempts are made under the guise of providing information in confidence."

Judge Aubrey Fennell of Washington Municipal Court was commended for his ruling that newspaper reporters were entitled to admission to trials from which the public had been barred at the request of the defense. The resolution was offered from the floor by J. R. Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, after Marvin H. Creager of the Milwaukee Journal suggested that the society take official notice of Fennell's ruling.

Wiggins' resolution commended Fennell for "his enlightened opinion upholding the right of the press to have access to judicial proceedings." The judge's ruling was made last week in an indecent exposure case in which the defense requested that the public be excluded. Reporters for three Washington newspapers asserted their right to remain and Fennell, after

Nation-Wide Crime Syndicate Charged

Missouri's Attorney General charged yesterday that his investigations prove a national crime syndicate operates race news services throughout the Nation.

Farrell

He made the assertion in a telegram to the Senate Commerce Subcommittee that on Friday heard details on the Nation-wide operations of Continental Press Service and how its wires feed gambling information to the country's bookies.

The Missouri official J. E. Taylor, said it is impossible to control "this Nation-wide racket on a State-wide basis." The need for Federal legislation is apparent, he told the committee.

Service Not Mentioned

Taylor did not mention Continental in outlining Missouri's five-year fight to stop operations of two race news services in Missouri—the Harmony Publishing Co. of Kansas City and the Pioneer News Service of St. Louis.

"From my experience and investigations," Taylor said, ". . . information transmitted (to the two news services in Missouri) applied solely to persons engaged in the unlawful activity of receiving, recording and registering bets on horse races and other sporting events.

"It is my opinion a national syndicate does exist to transmit rapid news of racing and other athletic events to establishments such as Harmony and Pioneer in all parts of the United States and that this syndicate has a monopoly of such business obtained by force, threats and intimidation . . ."

Taylor said the syndicate "is controlled by vicious criminal elements who use their power and money to control other rackets and to corrupt public officials."

No reference was made directly by the Attorney General to the recent slaying in Kansas City of Charles Binaggio, a factional Democratic leader, and his strong-arm man, Charles Gargotta. They were cut down by pistol bullets in the First District Democratic Club the night of April 5.

Resignation Announced

In Kansas City, Police Commissioner Sheridan Farrell announced he had resigned from the Kansas City police board because "the abuse and incorrect statements made by certain persons isn't worth it."

A dapper hotel manager, Farrell is one of four appointed members of the board, which has been under fire since the killing of Binaggio and Gargotta.

The Kansas City Star has reported Farrell was favorable to Binaggio's plans for "opening up" Kansas City.

Attorney General Taylor said it was his opinion that rapid race news now is provided by a Chicago service that, he alleged, is controlled by the "Capone gang of Chicago."

Taylor said the Harmony Publishing Co. supplies race news information to bookie joints in Kansas City and St. Joseph in Missouri; Sioux City, Council Bluffs and Des Moines in Iowa; Omaha and Lincoln in Nebraska; Leavenworth, Wichita and Topeka in Kansas and Tulsa and Oklahoma City in Oklahoma.

Many Special Probes

Meanwhile, an Associated Press roundup showed that special crime investigations are being pressed in many parts of the Nation.

In Hot Springs County, Ark., adjoining Garland County, in which is situated the city of Hot Springs—once known as a mecca for under world big shots—a grand jury has turned up conditions that Circuit Judge Roy Danuser compared to the "gangsterism of prohibition days."

So far, 31 persons, including three law-enforcement officers and a Malvern, Ark., city alderman, have been indicted on gambling, bootlegging and bribery charges in the legally dry area.

Bribery charges also have been lodged against a former city alderman in Milwaukee, Wis., where a grand jury is pressing an inquiry into alleged misconduct by city and county officials. The former alderman, accused in connection with issuance of tavern licenses, quit his job before the grand jury was called.

In California, a stormy political feud erupted as an upshot of a Sonoma County grand jury probe into a huge Statewide punchboard racket. Three men—one a former Los Angeles policeman—have been indicted for conspiracy.

Spots Closed Down

In Helena, Mont., gambling has been closed down since last July—the longest shutdown in recent years.

A special grand jury, its investigation backed by a $40,000 legislative appropriation, has indicted 17 persons on various charges, including extortion under threat to expose alleged gambling, and conspiracy to operate slot machines.

The "heat" also was on in New Mexico, where nine counties have called grand juries in recent months. Gambling raids have produced indictments against four Dona Ana County officials.

In New York City, Brooklyn's district attorney is directing a hush-hush grand jury probe of gambling, racketeering and possible police corruption. In two raids, notations showing payoffs of thousands of dollars have been found.

Kings County District Attorney Miles F. McDonald has politely rebuffed overtures of New York City's William O'Dwyer and of New Jersey authorities to take a hand in the investigation.

In Kansas City, Mo.—perennial hotspot for crime hunts and political shenanigans—a Federal grand jury has been busy since last September prying into underworld activities. Recently, the probe has focused on persons surrounding the slain Binaggio.

Five witnesses summoned by the Kansas City grand jury have died, one a suicide. Another died under mysterious circumstances. Both were linked to Binaggio's gambling and political operations.

Another witness, a close friend of the slain Gargotta, has been cited for contempt for giving evasive answers. Two more have gone to prison. Both had alliances with political bosses; one was convicted of vote frauds.

Decision Likely This Week on Special Senate Committee for Crime Probe

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A showdown is likely this week as to whether the Senate is going to have a special crime investigating committee or leave the matter to a subcommittee already at work on the subject.

The question may be settled at a Senate Democratic Policy Committee meeting on Monday. Majority Leader Lucas (Ill.) said earlier last week that the policy group could determine just when to bring up the special probe committee resolution drafted by Senator Kefauver (D., Ill.) after the Democratic leaders approved the special unit idea.

Kefauver said last night he hopes for quick action and will be on hand this week to press for floor consideration if there is any lull in debate on the Economic Cooperation Administration bill. The Senate already has taken time out to consider District daylight-saving time.

The crime resolution is likely to take as much as a day or two of debate, if Republicans carry out their promises of a fight to block the special committee and approve instead a regular Judiciary Committee group on which Republican Senators Ferguson (Mich.) and Donnell (Mo.) might serve.

May Bring It to Head

Activities of the Senate Commerce Subcommittee, now holding hearings on a bill to ban use of wires, phones and radio for transmitting gambling information, are likely to bring the special crime probe question to a head.

The Commerce unit, headed by Senator McFarland (D., Ariz.), last week heard witnesses mention such names at Frank Costello, Frank Erickson, Joe Adonis and Mickey Cohen, all reputed gambilng world figures. And Senator Capehart (R., Ind), a committee member, called on the committee to subpena big-time gamblers, race-wire operators and others.

When McFarland began the hearings, he indicated to reporters he had no intention of calling the big names in the racketeering world. In addition, he told Kefauver he planned to take testimony on "technical" aspects of the bill drafted by the Justce Department at the suggeston of the Attorney General's February crime conference.

Last week, however, McFarland said his group would decide in executive session whether to call such big-name witnesses. It appeared likely that the group might do so unless the special committee were authorized by the Senate to make an over-all Nation-wide inquiry into crime and its corruptive influence on politics.

Evidence Held Abundant

In a radio speech yesterday, Kefauver said that there is "an abundance of circumstancial evidence" of a national "crime ring or rings" and that "we propose to find out if they exist." He said it had been reliably reported that the gamblers' take is nearly half the Federal budget annually, about 20 billion dollars.

'One of the main purposes of my proposed investigation," he said, "will be to explore how far organized crime has gone in corrupting law-enforcement officials. It is inconceivable to me that criminals can operate wide open unless officers of the law, to some extent, look the other way."

It is this political slant to the proposed investigation that appears to worry some Democrats in this election year. It is apparent the special committee with a $150,000 appropriation to hire high-powered staff could dig far deeper than the Commerce unit with a tiny staff.

Referring to this political worry, Kefauver said:

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Suppose we just wait and see how the investigation is conducted without making any predictions. However, I have participated in noncriminal investigations which might have hurt or helped either Democrats or Republicans, and we were able to get the facts without regard to politics. I hope that is what we shall be able to do in this situation."

Meanwhile, from New York, Associated Press General Manager Frank Starzel issued a statement in reply to testimony Friday before the McFarland group by Florida's Attorney General Richard W. Ervin. Ervin said the AP had refused a State request to stop sending flash race results into Florida.

Starzel said:

"The Associated Press has repeatedly offered to cooperate with the Attorney General and other Florida authorities to determine if there is the slightest connection between our transmission of racing information and its availability to bookmaking establishments. An exhaustive investigation failed to disclose any evidence of a 'leak.' In the absence of the slightest evidence that transmission of flash results 'leaked' to any illegal operation, we decline to submit to censorship. We will welcome any evidence the Attorney General can produce."

the scheme generally works as follows. A customer entering an after-hours club is taxed about $1.25 admittance. This entitles him to "membership" for the night. He is sold only the "setups" to go with his own liquor, which he must bring. If he has no bottle, the owner or manager of the club will send him outside to buy a bottle from a bootlegger in the street. After a person has been to any after-hours club a few times he can generally purchase his liquor directly from the bar by the drink. The after-hours clubs open at about 12 midnight and remain open until about 6 in the morning.

"Customers are directed to the clubs by waiters at licensed places which must close early, by bellhops in hotels, and by taxicab drivers. These people forwarding customers to the after-hours clubs are paid so much a head for each person forwarded.

"Masterminding" individuals finance the organization and take all the profits, it is said. Most clubs have no bank accounts and hold no meetings.

The prosecutors then apply to the local situation the language of a Missouri court which called an operator a "man of energy, smart, shrewd, possessed of some education at least and able to keep the books and records of his club in such shape and to so arrange and direct its affairs as to make it appear somewhat, although not entirely, bona fide."

The same language about that "genius" is in the brief, applied to "Glickfield of the Gold Key Club, Meserole of the Stagecrafters' Club, Wiman of the Turf and Grid Club, Quinn of the Atlas Club, Goldstein of the Players Guild, Thorpe of the United Family Club, Nickels of the United Nations Social Club, Cleftagianis of the Acropolis Club, Roey of the Villa Bia, etc."

"When the community passes special license and control laws regulating a special type of business, a corporation doing that type of business does not have to be licensed in order to violate said licensing and control laws. Furthermore, such a corporation cannot, of course, escape the law by remaining unlicensed.

"Yet, that is the paradoxical position the after-hour club corporations would claim for themselves. They cannot qualify for the appropriate license under the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act because they are already operating in a manner which would disqualify them from gaining a license. To permit the defendant after-hours clubs to continue would be to put a premium on remaining unlicensed."

Hainan Capital's Fall To Reds Is Reported

Hongkong, Sunday, April 23 (U.P.) Communist armies breaking through the defenses of Hainan Island, southern bastion of Nationalist China, were reported today to have occupied Hoihow, Hainan's capital city.

The Communist amphibious forces that landed on Hainan a week ago broke out of their confined beachhead Friday — only hours after the Nationalists had reported their total defeat—and surged along the island's north coast toward Hoihow.

A Defense Ministry communique and Nationalist press dispatches reported "fighting continuing with unabated fury" at Hoihow's outskirts, but persistent reports from other sources indicated that the Nationalists had surrendered the city without firing a shot.

"At Variance" With Facts

The ministry announcement said only that Friday's Nationalist victory reports were "at variance with the actual conditions," and that "up to the present moment, fighting is still continuing." It gave no late details. Nationalist Air Force had abandoned the Hoihow airfield.

The Communist radio early today said the Communist invaders had routed six Nationalist divisions since landing last Monday, killing or wounding about 700 soldiers and capturing 1084.

The broadcast said the Red attackers had shot down two planes, damaged two ships and captured 35 artillery pieces and 600 rifles, machine guns and carbines during the week's fighting.

The Nationalist Central News Agency admitted last night that its Friday report that the Red invaders had been killed, captured or "trapped" was premature.

Drive Toward Hoihow

The agency said that some 4000 Communists, previously reported to have "surrendered" early Friday, "resumed fighting after noon the same day and started a drive toward Hoihow. Fighting is continuing today (Saturday) on the outskirts of Hoihow, with both sides sustaining heavy casualties."

The sudden Communist thrust toward Hoihow came as a rude shock to residents of the city, who rejoiced Friday night over reports of the Nationalist "victory."

As late as 11:30 Saturday morning, pro-Nationalist reports of the big clean-up on Hainan were still current here. The first discordant note was sounded late yesterday afternoon, when the Hainan correspondent of a local paper reported the Red drive toward Hoihow.

Van Zeeland

Agreement On Leopold Strikes Snag

Brussels, Belgium, April 22 (AP). The Liberal Party agreed in principle today to a compromise on the royal question that would make King Leopold's son, Prince Baudouin, the ruler of Belgium for an undefined period.

However, the Liberals opposed Paul Van Zeeland as premier of the government responsible for administering the solution.

Van Zeeland is premier-designate. He is an outstanding pro-Leopoldist among the Social Christians, a pro-Leopoldist Catholic party. The Liberals are in a balance of power position between the Social Christians and the anti-Leopoldist Socialists.

The Liberals want the present caretaker government of Liberals and Social Christians maintained in power, with Gaston Eyskens as Premier. Eyskens and his ministers resigned five weeks ago, but consented to serve until a new regime was formed.

Adm. T. C. Kinkaid To Retire April 30

New York, April 22 (AP). — Admiral Thomas C. Kincaid, 62, who commanded naval forces in the Battles of Leyte Gulf, the Coral Sea and Midway, will retire April 30.

He has spent 46 years in the Navy and now commands the Eastern Sea Frontier and the Atlantic Reserve Fleet.

His successor in those commands will be Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger, now commander of naval forces in the Western Pacific.

King Farouk Already Wed, Paper Says

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

NARRIMAN SADEK

Reported wed to King

Damascus, Syria, April 22 (AP).—A generally reliable Arabic newspaper in Beirut, Lebanon, published a story last Tuesday saying that King Farouk of Egypt and Narriman Sadek already are married. Up to today there has been no denial or protest about the story from any official Egyptian source.

King Farouk

The newspaper, Beirut, said the beautiful 17-year-old Egyptian girl has become the King's legal wife and added that it had learned, "from sources very near to King Farouk," that there will be an official announcement May 6. That day is observed in Egypt as Accession Day, the anniversary of the begining of Farouk's reign.

The headline on the story said "Farouk and Narriman Married." A picture of the girl accompanying the story was captioned "The New Queen."

Persons familiar with the policy of the foreign office said the lack of any denial or protest in this case seemed to indicate the story could be true.

[The weekly Egyptian newspaper Akbar Elyom today said King Farouk will not be married in 1950. It attributed its information to "a high Egyptian source," the United Press reported from Cairo.]

Bulgars Jail 14 as Spies

London, April 22 (U.P.).—Two Bulgars have been sentenced to life imprisonment and 12 others to 1 to 15 years as spies for Yugoslavia, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported today from Sofia.

2 Czechs Given Death Penalty As U. S. Spies

Prague, April 22.—Czechoslovakia sentenced two of her nationals to the gallows today on charges of high treason and spying for the United States.

Another defendant was sentenced to life imprisonment and three others were given prison sentences ranging from 18 to 25 years.

The Czech news agency said the six were only the spearhead of a widespread espionage network that was smashed last fall. At the trial, witnesses declared four former United States Embassy officials had direct contact with the ring. In addition, the present air attache, Col. Andre Dechaene, was said to have made use of it.

(United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson last fall said the charges against American officials were trumped up).

Supplied With Information

The defendants testified they had supplied embassy officials with information about changes in the foreign ministry, impending currency changes, shortages of materials and political opinion among working classes.

Maj. Jarmoir Nechansky, 34, a British-trained parachutist, and Veleslav Wahl, 28-year-old law student who said they were "twin heads" of the network, were sentenced to death.

They had testified they operated regional espionage centers supplied with radio sets by the United States to be used in event of an East-West war.

Nechansky also was stripped of his military decorations and dishonably discharged from the army.

Other Defendents Sentenced

The other defendants and their sentences:

Milos Sprysl, 20-year-old bookkeeper, life imprisonment.

Jiri Dohnalek, 43, a lawyer and former civil servant, 20 years.

Miss Zdenka Vackova, 25-year-old clerk, 18 years.

Karl Loris, 51-year-old glass factory manager, 25 years.

The property of all defendants was confiscated.

(Prague dispatches to London said two United States Embassy officials, Martin S. Bowe, military permit officer, and Alexander Manchesky, assistant general services officer, were held by Prague police for a short time Friday. Bowe was arrested while taking pictures of several thousand Czechs who crowded to the library to receive the last books and other reading material distributed by the United States Information Service, which has been ordered closed. He and Manchesky were released when they were identified.

Sforza Hints Italy Prefers Treaty Break to Trieste Loss

Rome, April 22 (AP).—Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza hinted to Parliament today that Italy might break her peace treaty rather than forfeit "Italian lands" at Trieste.

He accused Soviet Russia of blocking the 1948 proposal of the United States, Britain and France to hand over to Italy all of Trieste Free Territory, including that occupied by Yugoslavia.

Declaring many states behind the iron curtain already have violated their peace treaties, Sforza told the Chamber of Deputies:

"That which the others have violated for evil we are ready, if necessary, to repudiate for good."

He also declared failure of the three western powers to live up to their 1948 pledge would weaken Italy's participation in the Atlantic Pact.

The Italian Foreign minister spoke at the end of a two-day debate whose importance was highlighted by Russia's demand on the three western powers for withdrawal of British, American and Yugoslav occupation forces from the strategic territory at the head of the Adriatic.

Communist and leftist sympathizers, timing their tactics with Moscow, demanded that Trieste be abandoned as an "imperialist" navy base. They said the government's reliance on western pledges was a failure.

Communists in three Italian cities last night attacked student demonstrators demanding the return of Trieste to Italy. Communist and anti-Communist unions joined in a 30-minute general strike in Trieste today to protest what they called the "terror" methods of last Sunday's elections is the Yugoslav zone.

Sforza indicated he did not believe Italy would have to resort to drastic action. He said he was confident the three western powers would yet fulfill their proposal of 1948.

Bonn Cabinet May Quit Over Tax Cut Issue

Bonn, Germany, April 22 (U.P.)—West Germany's occupation chiefs were believed today to have vetoed a proposed cut in German income taxes, and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's cabinet was reported ready to resign in protest.

Neither German nor American sources would disclose the contents of a note sent to the government by the Allied high commissioners, but it was said to express disapproval amounting to rejection of the tax plan.

The commissioners reportedly opposed the income tax reduction, approved recently by the West German Parliament because they felt taxes should not be reduced at a time when government expenses and the budget deficit are growing rapidly.

The Frankfurt newspaper Allgemeine Zeitung reported the cabinet might resign "because a final disapproval (of the tax reduction) by the high commission would mean the government would no longer be able to carry out the economic policy demanded by the majority of the people."

The reported tax veto was the second in a week. Earlier, the commissioners disapproved a civil service law on grounds it merely prolonged the life of Germany's "official aristocracy."

The Germans, led by Adenauer, attacked the decisions as undemocratic.

Crashed C-54 Found; No Signs of Life

Tokyo, Sunday, April 23 (AP).—Wreckage of a missing Air Force C-54 transport plane was found today scattered over the south slope of nearby Hirugatake mountain. There was no sign of life among the 35 Americans aboard.

A brief Army announcement said the wreckage—identified by a number on the plane—was spotted at 12:20 p. m., Tokyo time. It said a helicopter was hovering over the scene, directing ground rescue squads to the spot.

The mountain is about 35 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The big four-engined plane carried 27 passengers and a crew of eight.

The passengers included Frank E. Pickelle, head of the occupation's foreign trade division, and three other occupation officials. They were returning from a trade conference in Manila.

The plane was flying to Japan from the Philippines when it ran into a storm last night.

Pickelle, 40, from Chicago, became General MacArthur's foreign trade expert after the occupation began. At the time of the Japanese surrnder he was a major with the Philippine Civil Affairs team.

The Army said others in his party included James G. Torrens, 43, occupation trade area coordinator, formerly of Boston; Bernard W. Adams, 40, chief of the occupation Trade Procedures Branch, of Enderlin, N. Dak.; and Mrs. Teresa Tonole Krossner, 45, deputy chief of the Trade Arrangements Branch.

Other occupation officials aboard included F. J. Scarr, 56, of the occupation's GI Management, Organization and Manning Section formerly of New York and Marietta, Ga.; and Franklin I. Rash, 53, of the occupation's G-4 Planning and Policy Division.

Others aboard were:

Robert F. Tarleton of International Business Machines, Tokyo.

George C. Sellner, no further data.

Chief Warrant Officer Frank Calahan, Col. Casper Minty, Pvt. Grover H. Summers, Corpl. William Maechtel, Lieut. Charles Ransom, Lieut. Col. 2d Torso Found In 8 Days Spurs Hunt for Killer

New York, April 22 (U.P.).—Evidence of New York's second torso murder in eight days spurred a police hunt today for a butcher-killer.

The dismembered body of man was pulled today from a trunk sunk in a Jamaica Bay mud flat. The head, arms and legs had been severed from the torso, but they were packed with it in the trunk. A foot and all 10 fingers were missing.

On April 14, four packages containing 23 parcels of human flesh totaling about 45 pounds and wrapped in cloth and brown paper were found on a street in Brooklyn.

Police still have not found the skeleton or the rest of the body in Brooklyn, and it is unidentified.

Full 'Amerasia' Probe Demanded

By The Associated Press

Hinting at new evidence, Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) yesterday demanded a thorough investigation of what he called the "very mysterious" 1945 Amerasia case involving secret Government documents.

"I think there are some elements of evidence which heretofore have not been known publicly," Hickenlooper declared.

He made the statement after being told by reporters that Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) had predicted that the Amerasia case is about to break wide open and would disclose an important Soviet espionage ring.

The case first came to light five years ago with the arrest by the FBI of career diplomat John S. Service and five other persons. They were charged with illegal removal of Government documents for use in the magazine Amerasia, a publication devoted to news of Far Eastern affairs.

Service later was exonerated and returned to duty in the State Department. A grand jury also refused to indict two others. Two of those arrested were fined, and there was no action against the sixth defendant.

Hickenlooper declined to discuss just what he has in mind in the way of possible new evidence. He is a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee which is looking into McCarthy's charges of communism in the State Department.

McCarthy has said his charges will stand or fall on the outcome of his accusations against Far Eastern expert Owen Lattimore. The Wisconsin Republican has called Lattimore Russia's top espionage agent in this country—a charge Lattimore has called a "contemptible lie."

Lattimore also has denied Louis Budenz's testimony before the Senate group that he once was a member of a Communist cell. Budenz is a former Communist.

Bipartisan Policy

GOP Wants Delay on ITO As 'Gesture'

By The Associated Press

Republicans proposed yesterday that Secretary of State Dean Acheson delay action on the International Trade Organization charter as a goodwill gesture for the bipartisan foreign policy.

The implication was plain in statements by Republican Senators that if Acheson persists in pushing the ITO charter issue in this session of Congress, GOP members will regard that as a sign two-party cooperation doesn't exist.

Their complaints came after Acheson — without consulting Republicans—urged a House committee to speed action on the charter, signed in Havana in 1948. It is aimed at reducing trade barriers and ending international trade wars.

Senator Ives of New York gave the general Republican viewpoint on Acheson's move in these words:

"I don't think we are going to have any bipartisan policy worthy of the name if that is the kind of tactics the Administration is going to employ."

On the question of international trade, Ives said he had not made up his mind whether to support or oppose the charter.

Chairman Millikin (Colo.) of the conference of all Republican Senators said there would be "strenuous" Senate opposition to the charter, which requires majority approval of both houses before it can become effective so far as this country is concerned.

Senator Brewster (R., Me.) said Republicans expect the issue of tariff reductions to loom large in this year's congressional campaigns. He said he assumed that under the charter the United States would be asked to make many tariff concessions.

Stassen Asks Hearing On U. S. Asia Policy

NYHT News Service

One of the Nation's leading Republicans said last night he is "gravely concerned" over American foreign policy in Asia and asked the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to hear his "constructive proposals" for United States action there.

Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, telegraphed Senator Tom Connally, chairman of the comittee, asking for "an hour" to discuss his proposals because of "the urgency" of the situation.

revise the timetable for improving its defense.

The defense chief stressed that germ warfare is a potentially grave threat to the Nation's security but that "defense measures now in effect or in preparation should prevent disastrous damage" from such an attack.

He added that the research and development board, aided by special scientific panels and consultants, had supplied the Joint Chiefs of Staff with "a complete study and report upon the capabilities of biological warfare and a comparative evaluation of chemical, biological and radiological warfare."

These, he said, covered various diseases with which men, domestic animals and food crops could be infected; aircraft and other means for their dissemination, and methods of detecting, identifying and combating them.

The report added that biological warfare weapons "are uniquely suited for use in sabotage" both because of the minute quantities of infectious materials required and because their delayed-action characteristics would render their users "inconspicuous" and hard to trace. It is said that the best protection against germ warfare would be "alert and strong public health and agricultural services."

Reports of Army, Navy and Air Force secretaries filled in some details of how reduced military funds are affecting the fighting services.

Air Force Secretary Symington, who leaves this post April 24, reported that the last six months of 1949 completed the "downward" adjustment to the 48 group force fixed by the President.

He said this paring down meant the inactivation of seven groups already being formed earlier in the year, inactivation of six Air Force installations and the complete closing of eight additional installations.

The Air Force added 783 new planes in the last half of 1949, Symington said, to its inventory total of 22,600. About 13,000 of the total were in use, and 7500 of the 9000 inactive status planes were in storage.

Symington asserted that more than 80 percent of the Air Force's 10,250 combat planes are World War II types that will be obsolete by June 30, 1951.

The secretary stressed that plane production planned for next year won't even meet the demands of a 48-group air arm.

Speaking in terms of airframe production—which is measured by weight—he said the aircraft output proposed in President Truman's 1951 budget would fall 7,100,000 pounds short of meeting Mr. Truman's own standard for Air Force strength.

The President has stuck to a 48-group limit in the face of heated congressional demands for a 70-group air arm, as originally proposed by the President's air policy commission in 1948.

The commission, which was headed by New York Attorney Thomas K. Finletter, also wanted an 8100-plane reserve and a 27-group air National Guard by 1953.

As things stand now, Symington said, planned production for the fiscal year starting next July 1 amounts to less than one-third of the airframe output needed to supoprt the kind of air force envisioned by the commission.

Secretary Matthews reported that the Navy at the end of 1949 met its requirements "fairly" well," but it could use more aircraft carriers "to advantage."

He noted that 39 vessels had been stricken from the Navy list in the six months period. He said Navy policy is to inactivate or eliminate all shore facilities that are not essential for support of the operating forces, for approved research or for "early mobilization."

Former Army Secretary Gray reported that Army manpower decreased 35,000 in the last six months of 1949, and would drop 12,000 additional by June 30 to meet the budget limit of 630,000.

Gray said the reduction was being accomplished by reducing the strength of units in the Army's 10 regular divisions and inactivating two of the six remaining divisions.

He asserted that the Army, in the last half of 1949, had made rapid progress toward a "streamlined, compact force designed for peacetime security needs."

Truman Sees New Weapons

They are the men who do the work "for those who get the credit," he declared.

"Any dumbell can command a battery if he has a first sergeant who knows what to do," said the former commander of Battery D, recalling his World War I service.

The President said he planned another inspection of the Navy and added:

"I have been promised a demonstration of the capture of smugglers by the Coast Guard and expect to be at Valley Forge (in late June) for a meeting with the Boy Scouts and will then have covered the waterfront."

The aerial show here introduced all the Air Force jet fighters and jet and piston bombers in active service.

It opened with the "Acrojets" a four-plane team of F-80 Shooting Stars which move as one in a dazzling series of "barrel rolls," "Cuban eights" and other stunts.

In split-second timing, Boeing B-50 and B-29 bombers appeared to score bullseyes with high explosive bombs and napalm from 8000 to 10,000 feet. A simulated tank column was plastered with a string of 184 100-pound bombs and then a 6-ton "Tall Boy" smashed a panel target.

B-45 jet bombers, 600-mph F-86 Sabre and F-84 Thunderjet fighters followed with on-the-target strikes with 5-inch rockets and 11.75-inch "Tiny Tim" rockets.

The jet fighters also dive-bombed simulated ships and set old airplanes afire with their 50-caliber machineguns.

Greatest applause came when a towed glider was released before the grandstand, circled overhead and rolled to a stop at the foot of an airman holding a flag. The group also saw a simulated "rescue at sea" by a helicopter.

Acheson Sees Role For Every Citizen

earlier at a luncheon session of the society, agreed with Acheson that an all-out effort was essential in the struggle with Russia.

Roscoe Drummond, Washington correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, now serving as director of information for the Marshall Plan in Europe, said that the free world had the capacity and ammunition to win out in the struggle.

But, he said, it would take "a total and sustained cold-war effort on our part to win."

Barry Bingham, editor and president of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, now chief of the ECA mission to France, agreed with something that Secretary Acheson was to say later—that America had to buy more from Europe.

Young Heads Editors

It was announced that Dwight Young, editor and publisher of the Dayton, Ohio, Journal-Herald, had been elected president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors for 1950-51.

Others elected were: Alexander F. Jones, Syracuse Herald-Journal, first vice president; Wright Bryan, Atlanta Journal, second vice president; Kenneth MacDonald, Des Moines Register and Tribune, secretary, and L. R. Blanchard, Gannett Newspapers, treasurer.

Elected as directors were Jones, James S. Pope, Louisville Courier-Journal; J. Donald Ferguson, Milwaukee Journal; Gideon Seymour, Minneapolis Star and Tribune, and William R. Mathews, Arizona Daily Star.

The society adopted a resolution, one of six, denouncing censorship of news under the guise of "off the record" information.

At a morning session, two comic-strip artists—Al Capp and Milton Caniff—engaged the editors in discussion of the question of whether the comic page in general is harmful to younger readers.

Red Threat Underlined

Secretary Acheson, in his speech, asked the editors to put aside all less important things, to forget all differences of opinion, and consider the most important problem facing the country.

He said:

"We are faced with a threat—in all sober truth I say this—we are faced with a threat not only to our country but to the civilization in which we live and to the whole physical environment in which that civilization can exist. This threat is the principal problem that confronts the whole United States in the world today."

He told how Russia was threatening all the great concepts that had been developed over the centuries—freedom of the mind and the spirit among them. He pointed out that the principal target of the Soviet Communists was the United States, and related what they were doing to confuse and divide this country and "pick off" its allies in the free world.

No Quick Solution Seen

There was no one solution to the problem, he said, no quick or easy way to subdue an evil force, no miracle that will make it disappear from the earth.

"Having recognized this truth," Secretary Acheson said, "we need not for a moment be discouraged or downhearted. We have open to us, and we are now pursuing, many lines of action that will meet the challenge confronting us."

He listed these, and said that the United States would continue to find a common ground for agreement with Russia, or at least a better arrangement for living together with her in greater safety.

Acheson said that if the idea of aggression can be ruled out of our relations with the Soviet Union, the greatest obstacle to agreement will be out of the way. He added:

"As the results of our actions become clear and the free world becomes stronger, it will, I believe, become progressively easier to get agreements with the Soviet Union."

But that, he said, was only the beginning of the story, and he went on to explain what he meant by a phrase he had used previously—"total diplomacy."

"I mean first that there is no longer any difference between foreign questions and domestic questions," he said. "They are all parts of the same question. When we consider any matter, whether it is the size of the budget or the amount of taxes we pay, or the regulation of our commerce or the regulation of immigration or military policy of foreign aid, it is all part of the same thing.

"Every one of these things is a part of the problem of our national safety and every part of the problem is serious . . . When we understand this fact of the wholeness of our problem, then we must go further and act on our understanding. . . .

"Each Has Part to Play"

"The threat, as I have said, is to our civilization and each of us is a bearer of that civilization. And, therefore, each of us has a part to play in this total diplomacy.

"Today the whole United States is acting before the world as its own representative. In the old days, relations between countries were carried on by diplomats. In the old days a man who held my office used to write out in beautiful script instructions to a minister who represented the United States abroad in London or Paris or Brussels or Peking. And those instructions were put on a sailing ship and they took weeks to cross the ocean. And the American Minister who received them put on his black knee breeches and he walked to the palace or the foreign office and he read what his Secretary of State in Washington had written, and that was the United States speaking to some government in Europe or Asia.

"Now all that is changed. Today we all represent the United States. Everything that happens in this country can be flashed in a second to the uttermost reaches of the world. Today in a very real sense the United States represents itself to the world. The world hears speeches which are made in the Congress. The world hears what is said over our radio. The world reads what is said in our press. If there are acts or words of violence, discrimination and irresponsibility the world sees and hears them. If there are acts or words of justice, understanding and sober determination the world sees and hears them also.

"America speaks with a thousand voices. All the views of our labor leaders, our business leaders, our church leaders, our educational leaders, our leaders of women's and men's groups and clubs—all the things they do and say flash around the world. Everything that we do or say enters into the picture of America which is seen abroad. Foreign nations are continually watching to see whether the United States is cool, whether it is determined, whether it is strong, whether it will go through with its intentions. To make up their minds they look at everything which is happening in the whole country.

"What will the world see? The thought that I want to leave with you is that each of us bears a measure of responsibility for the answer. Each one of us can make our country seen as it truly is—determined to do its part to carry the free world forward to strength and security."

Gains Through ECA Told

Barry Bingham, the Louisville editor who is serving as chief of the Marshall Plan mission to France, told the society of the great gains that have been made since American aid arrived in that and other countries.

"It is practically certain," he said, "that we forestalled a Communist political victory in Italy and France."

When Marshall Plan help ends in 1952, Bingham said, France still will have a dollar gap of 150 million dollars—that is, will spend every dollar she can earn to buy American products, but will still run short by that amount in her dollar requirements.

He listed three alternatives for '52:

"We can support the French with American tax money; or we can abandon the French, risking a Communist victory and loss of an important market for our farms and factories; or we can lower our tariff barriers to a reasonable degree and buy from France, so that she in turn can buy what she wants and desperately needs from us.

"When I say France, I might just as well say western Europe. That is the shape and size of the problem."

Bingham said that an increase in foreign purchases by about one and a half billion dollars a year would close the gap for all western Europe.

"If we ignore this problem," he said, "or try to shove it under the rug, I foresee a dangerously bad period in international relations in 1952. The nations of wetsern Europe will be forced to discard the Marshall Plan crutch without yet being able to walk by themselves. Their people will suffer a sudden return of discouragement. Since human nature works as we all know it does, the people of western Europe will feel let down by the United States. Gratitude will quickly turn to resentment as hope dissolves in despair. What a glorious opportunity for the Communists!"

Roscoe Drummond, the Christian Science Monitor correspondent, who is on leave with the Marshall Plan information division in Europe, had an answer for those Americans who think that the talk about communism in Europe is a kind of "boogey dreamed up by Government officials . . ."

He listed the number of Communists in the French Parliament, and the number of votes cast for Communists in France, and translated them into American terms.

"There would be 23 Communist Senators in the United States Senate," Drummond said. "There would be Communist Congressmen in the House of Representatives. There would have been 13,980,732 Communist votes cast in the 1948 presidential election."

Drummond said that despite Russia's record of aggression, Moscow continues to capture the headlines with peace offensives, peace appeals and peace fronts. He continued:

"You have heard it said that the Russians are not in position to go to war. There is some truth in that, but I think we have only begun to see what a trivial, irrelevant and deceptive truth it is . . . The real truth is that while Russia is not likely to make war on any country, the Soviet Communists are making war in every country they have not yet conquered . . .

"I believe we are going to win. But I am not convinced that it will take a total cold-war effort to do it and I believe that the American people will be ready and willing to sustain such an effort.

"There are no visible limits to the Soviet ambitions for world domination . . . Unless the United States leads the free nations of the world in resisting this domination—in winning this war-calling-itself-peace—I do not believe that the America we know today can survive. That is the nature of the struggle which Russia has imposed upon us and it is only to the degre that it is fully appreciated that America's leadership will be adequate."

Drummond, speaking as an individual, made two suggestions:

1. That this country and its friends in the Atlantic Community create a North Atlantic political council.

2. That the same nations create and carry forward a common information program so that they could speak in a united voice.

Artists Defend Strips

Comic-strip artists Capp and Caniff maintained at the morning session that the comic page in general is doing no harm to younger readers.

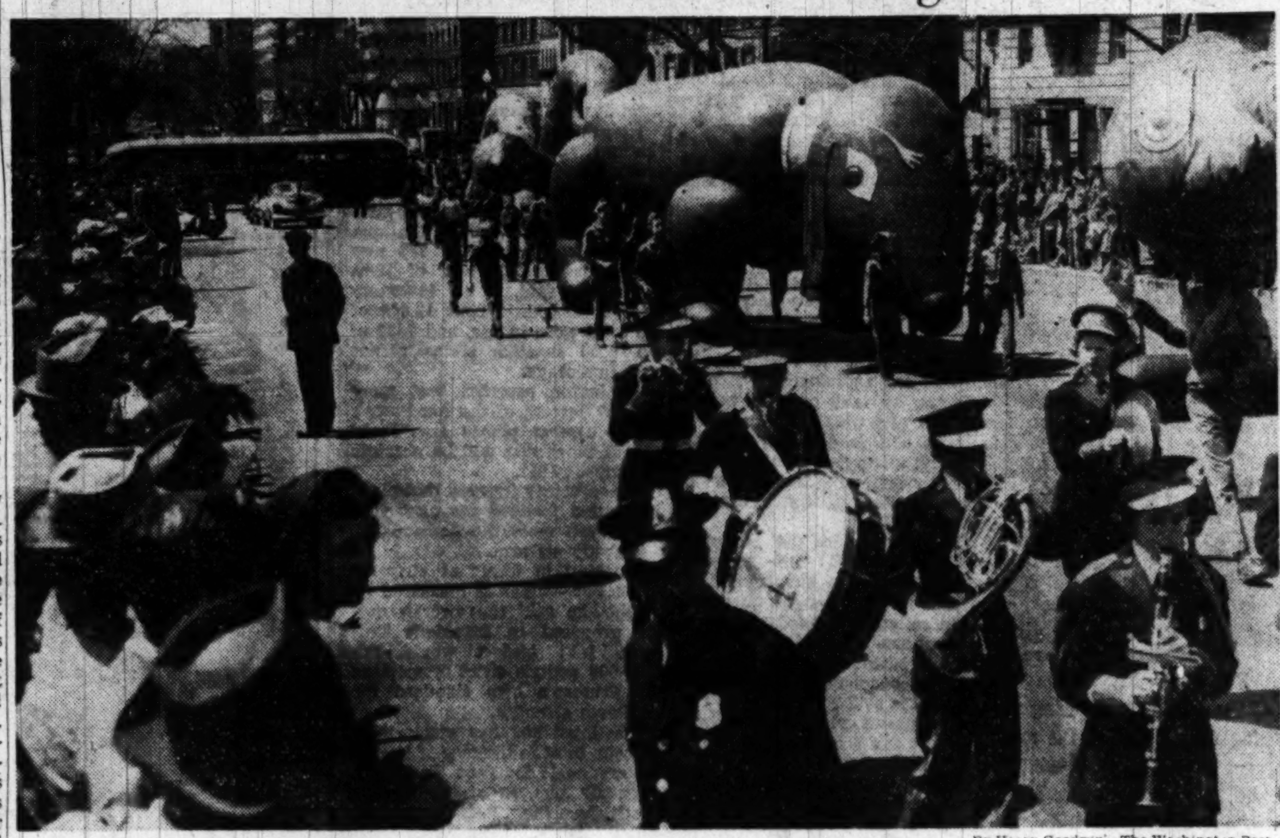
But two editors—Norman E. Isaacs of the St. Louis Star-Times and James S. Pope of the Louisville Courier-Journal—argued that parents are increasingly concerned by sex and crime as portrayed in the comic strips. They also complained that the comics are not comical enough.

Capp, creator of "Li'l Abner," said he was afraid the United States was losing its fifth freedom—"the freedom to laugh at itself."

"Let us not lose that freedom," he said, "for without it the other four freedoms aren't any fun."

Isaacs said "there is a good deal wrong with some of the strips," and added that 'cartoonists must realize that we have to meet the question of good taste. It's time for them to grow up."

Thousands See Half-Hour Parade Heralding Shrine Circus



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

BALLOONS ON DOWNTOWN STREETS HIGHLIGHT PARADE LAUNCHING ALMAS TEMPLE CIRCUS

Huge balloons representing animals and clowns yesterday featured a half-hour parade heralding the Shrine Circus which was witnessed by thousands along F st. nw. from 5th to 15th sts.

The parade, led by Police Major Robert J. Barrett, and sparked by eight bands, turned north on 15th st. to K st., where it turned east and wound up at Almas Temple, headquarters of the sponsoring Shriners.

Floats were provided by units of Almas Temple and various Masonic groups, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Jobs' Daughters and DeMolay. Grand marshal was Col. Edward S. Bettelheim, jr.

Musical units included the Metropolitan Police Band, Police Boys Club Band, Boys Club of Washington Band, Washington Elks Boys Band, Elks Boys and Girls Band of Silver Spring, Shriners' Oriental Band, Almas Temple brass band and Tall Cedars Band.

The circus, which opens at 8:15 Monday night at Uline Arena and will run through Sunday night, will bring a number of European performers to Washington for the first time. Beginning Tuesday, there will be six matinees at 2:15 p. m.

Among the guests of the Shrine during the week's run of the circus will be several thousand crippled and underprivileged children from 30 institutions of the Washington area.

By arrangement with parent-teacher groups, school children will be excused from afternoon classes to attend the matinee shows.

Tickets are on sale at Almas Temple, 1315 K st. nw.; Stabler's, 1322 F st. nw. and the Uline Arena, 3d and M sts. ne.

Shriners have donated 500 circus tickets for the use of carrier boys of The Washington Post at Monday night and Sunday night performances.

considering the matter overnight, held that the press was entitled to remain along with the principals, officers of the law and lawyers.

A resolution that San Francisco instead of Washington be selected for the society's 1951 convention was put aside in favor of a substitute which would put the change to a vote of the entire membership during the year. A similar vote last year resulted in a tie.

Best Wishes to Vandenberg

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), a charter member of the society, received a rising vote of "best wishes for a speedy and complete recovery" from an illness which has him confined to bed. The vote was unanimous.

A resolution to appoint a standing committee on international affairs was tabled on motion of George A. Buchanan, editor of the Columbia, S. C., Record. Another resolution to ask the American Newspaper Publishers Association to seek an agreement removing proofreaders from jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union was tabled 76 to 64.

Senate Primaries Hold Fair Deal Fate

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Reporter

Voters are starting to choose sides for the decisive congressional elections next fall. On the verdict hinges the fate of Presi- Truman's "Fair Deal" program in the next two years.

The biennial primary season is here. Campaigns to date have been growing warmer with the weather. Trumanites seek to strengthen their majorities against the Republican-Southern Democrat coalition.

Republicans say further losses on their part will take the Nation down the road to socialism.

The first big fights come in May. Candidates will be picked then for seven U. S. Senate seats and there is at least one bang-up battle in each of six States, with contests in Alabama over State committee memberships having an important bearing on 1952.

3 "Liberal" Seats Challenged

At stake are nominations for one Senate seat each in Alabama, Florida, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Oregon, and two in North Carolina. Three so-called "Liberal" seats—two Democratic and one Republican—are being challenged among others.

All this spring jousting is preliminary to the November 7 election which will determine whether Congress stays Democratic with greater or lesser strength behind the Truman program or goes Republican in protest, as it did in 1946.

It is an off-year, with no presidential election. This usually means the opposition party makes gains against the party in power, but there have been exceptions.

Democrats broke the tradition last time in 1934 when the Roosevelt new Deal was riding toward its 1936 crest of strength. Republicans, however, have scored net gains in the Senate and House in every off-year election since then. This time they need to pick up seven Senate and 48 House seats to regain control of Congress.

Between now and late September, candidates will be named for 36 Senatorships in 33 States (two each in Connecticut, Idaho and North Caroline), 435 House seats and 33 State Governorships.

In campaigns to date, Government spending, foreign aid, civil rights and communism have ranked high as issues. The number of issues will expand since two thirds of the States do not pick candidates until after June 30 and speech-making has been virtually nil in those States.

Here is a brief State-by-State scoreboard on the May primaries, excluding Indiana, which selects only House nominees May 2:

Florida — Democratic primary May 2. Voters have been witnessing a highly personal campaign for weeks. Representative George Smathers of Miami, 36-year-old Marine Corps veteran, is trying to unseat Senator Claude Pepper, now in his fourteenth year in the Senate. The winner is virtually assured of election in this Democratic State.

The two differ on many domestic matters. Smathers leans to the conservative. Pepper has a "liberal" reputation. Smathers accuses Pepper of having given comfort to pro-Communist elements. Pepper denies this vigorously and says it's part of a Republican campaign in a Democratic primary.

Many Republicans have registered in the Democratic primary in an apparent effort to help lick Pepper.

Lister Hill Has Opponent

Alabama — Democratic primary May 2. Senator Lister Hill is opposed for renomination by Lawrence McNeill, young Birmingham businessman without prior political experience.

Dwarfing this race in interest are factional contests for 72 places on the State Democratic executive committee. This committee makes the rules for the Democratic primaries. The outcome of these contests largely will decide whether Alabama returns to regular party ranks in 1952 or turns against national Democratic nominees as it did in 1948.

Senators Hill and Sparkman are leading the fight to guarantee the State's electoral votes for the regular Democratic nominees in the next presidential race. On the other side is a group led by Gessner T. McCorvey, State chairman. McCorvey led the 1948 revolt that insured the State's 11 electoral votes for the States' Rights ticket.

Both groups oppose the Truman civil rights program. But the Senators want the issue fought out within the National Democratic Party framework. McCorvey and his cohorts want to retain the threat to throw Alabama's votes elsewhere if the national nominees do not see eye to eye with them on civil rights.

Ohio — Both parties nominate May 2 for Senate and Governor. Main interest is on the seven-man battle for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) is unopposed for renomination.

Political leaders look for either State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson or Mayor Michael V. Di Salle of Toledo to win the right to oppose Taft in November. The CIO, out to get Taft, has not endorsed any Democrat.

Democratic Gov. Frank J. Lausche has two challengers for renomination but he is given a comfortable edge to win by party leaders.

State Treasurer Don H. Ebright and Mayor James A. Rhodes of Columbus are contesting with two others for the Republican governorship nomination.

Pennsylvania — May 16 is the date for deciding one of the prize clashes of the year within Republican ranks. Control of the GOP organization in this key State hinges on the outcome of the senatorial primary between Gov. James H. Duff and Representative John C. Kunkel.

Duff is bucking the old guard leadership of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, National Committeeman G. Mason Owlett, and Senator Edward Martin. Kunkel is their man. Duff's candidate for Governor is John S. Fine, who resigned from the State bench to make the race. Jay Cooke, Philadelphia banker, is the choice of the Grundy wing. The split goes back to the GOP National Convention in 1948 when Grundy supported Governor Dewey and Duff opposed the New Yorker.

The winner of the GOP Senate nomination will oppose Senator Francis J. Myers in November. Myers has no primary opponent.

Duff wants his party to come up with something to appeal to "the average guy." Kunkel has been hitting hard at spending policies in Washington.

Oregon—In the May 19 primaries, Senator Wayne Morse, a Republican who supports most Truman Administration proposals, is challenged by David Irven Hoover, a farmer, and John McBride, an advocate of "sound money," but the political experts say Morse will win. Democrats will pick either Howard F. Latourette, former national committeeman, or Dr. Louis A. Wood, retired economics professor.

North Carolina—Democratic primary May 27 to nominate (means virtual election) two Senators. Senator Frank P. Graham has two opponents for the remaining four years of the term to which he was appointed last year. Senator Clyde R. Hoey is not opposed for another six-year term.

Graham, an Administration supporter except on such matters as compulsory health insurance and FEPC, is being contested by former Senator Robert R. Reynolds and Willis Smith, Raleigh lawyer and former president of the American Bar Association.

Smith has raised the issue of communism and the "planned State." He says Graham has let his name become identified with left-wing groups that later turned up on the Government's subversive list. Graham calls this a time-worn falsehood.

Reynolds assails foreign aid and all immigration, wants lower taxes and an end to deficit financing.

Berlin March To Be Resisted

lift, the Communist leadership decided to employ the German youth.

Groups of young Germans from the eastern zone reportedly have made frequent reconnaissance expeditions into the Allied zone.

So far, information reaching the State Department indicates the results have not been good. The young East Berliners found the beer, the movies and the merchandise better in the Allied area and some have failed to go back.

A million eastern German youngsters in the age group of 14 to 25 are reported now enrolled in a Communist youth organization known as the Freie Deutsche Jugend (FDJ). Another 2,000,000 are reported under its influence, although not actively enrolled yet.

The FDJ chain of command runs directly to Moscow and its policy is laid down by the Communist Politburo.

Reports from Berlin have said that the Communists regard the FDJ as their most successful "mass organization."

It has staged riotous demonstrations in East Germany against "bouregois enemies of the people" on a hour's notice. The FDJ also is the chosen manpower reserve for the East German police-army.

As part of the Allied powers' preparations for the planed Communist youth march into East Berlin, special riot training has been given troops and demonstrations have been staged to give the civilian population an idea of what might be expected should a march occur.

Post Pressmen To Have Lots Of Fresh Air

As the thermometer hovered in the 70s last week, the city knew a Washington summer with readings of 80 and 90 was not far off.

But even Washington summers won't be so bad in The Washington Post's new building at 1513-21 L st. nw.

Sidewalk superintendents last week watched workmen installing a man-sized duct—6 feet high and 2½ feet wide—on the ceiling of the pressroom. This tunnel will take out air at the rate of 19,800 cubic feet a minute. Smaller ducts will bring in a steady tide of fresh, water-cooled air.

The exhaust feature is unusually important in a pressroom. Once the presses start running, ink bounces off into the atmosphere. The high pressure exhaust sees to it that this inky air leaves the room, Jim Sheehan, mechanical superintendent on the project, explained.

The heart of the air conditioning system, which has arteries throughout the building from the pressroom up, is in the penthouse perched on the roof of the building's seventh floor.

There a 600-ton refrigerating unit is housed. Six great fans suck in air at the rate of 168,900 cubic feet a minute. The air is forced through filters which screen out dust and dirt and then through coils circulating cold water.

Through the coils run 2000 gallons of water a minute. The water can be refrigerated to cut interior temperatures as much as 35 degrees below outside heat.

Sheehan pointed out, however, that a differential greater than 10 to 15 degrees usually leads to colds.

After cooling, the air will be sent out through a network of ducts. Exhaust fans will take the stale air out into the atmosphere.

Another cooling thought—for main floor occupants only—is the start on erection of a 85-foot-long canopy to shield the large windows from the sun's rays. The steel beams were placed last week and eventually will be converted into a chromium rimmed shield. Front windows on other floors will have heat-resistant glass.

Last week, too, work was started on erection of presses. The substructure began arriving on trucks from Plainfield, N. J., and experts from the Walter Scott Co. there supervised the installation.

The cast iron base is only the beginning and additional press parts will be arriving for several weeks.

Other parts of the large building are going onward and upward, too. The fifth floor has been completely poured and the forms are being prepared for the sixth floor. Three giant boilers and the electrical switching gear have also been installed.

RFC Oil Loan Approval Seen Despite Fulbright Criticism

By The Associated Press

Chairman Harley Hise of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation told a Senate committee yesterday he expects the agency to go ahead with a controversial $10,100,000 loan to Texmass Petroleum Co. of Dallas, Tex., barring new developments.

Hise's statement before a Senate Banking subcommittee investigating RFC loans came after a day of testimony during which RFC directors Harvey J. Gunderson and and Walter L. Dunham defended the loan. Hise did not participate in the 2-to-1 vote by RFC directors for the loan.

Chairman Fulbright (D., Ark.) of the subcommittee asked Hise if he thought the loan was legal. Hise replied the RFC's attorney had so held. He added he thought the loan was in conformity with RFC laws and practices, would be paid before the 10-year maturity date and would be in public interest.

He told Fulbright he thought that if there were nothing more than had been heard in yesterday's hearing, RFC officials would be directed to go ahead with disbursement of the loan which he understood had been help up at Fulbright's request pending the hearing.

Fulbright replied he had not requested the holding up of disbursement of the loan but that such an attitude could be assumed and that it might be "a fair conclusion that I disapprove of the loan."

Earlier, he took RFC to task for "branching out into an unexplored field" and expanding by making oil production loans when, he said, the Banking Committee had suggested RFC curtail its activities during periods of high prosperity.

Judge Shields Negro In Death Threat

New Orleans, April 22 (AP).—As a jury filed in to announce its verdict, the judge stepped down from his bench and stretched out his robe to shield the Negro defendant.

"If any attempt to injure or kill the defendant is made," declared Criminal District Court Judge Frank T. Echezabal, "it must be done through my body."

He said he had heard rumors the Negro, on trial for shooting another Negro during an argument about two cents, would be killed if the jury voted acquittal—which it did.

On trial yesterday was 51-year-old George Foster, operator of a restaurant and hotel. He was charged with the fatal shooting last December 17 of Lawson Joseph, 22.

The Judge declared:

"Under the United States Constitution it is the duty of a judge to protect a defendant, regardless of race or creed, and even at the risk of sustaining great bodily harm or loss of life."

The judge stood between Foster and the packed courtroom, with his judicial robes spread, and instructed the jury to announce its verdict.

Then, as Foster was escorted out of the courtroom, Judge Echezabal walked behind him, still shielding Foster with spread robe. There was no demonstration.

Die in Flames

Self-Made Trap Fatal To Couple

Birmingham, Ala., April 22 (U.P.). An elderly couple died in their flaming home today, clawing at the doors and windows they had nailed and bolted shut to protect the thousands of hoarded dollars firemen found in the ruins.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Clapper, both in their 70's and childless, perished, firemen said, because they could not get out and rescuers could not get in.

"They struggled hard to get out," said Coroner J. T. McCollum. "They clawed and scratched at windows and doors, but they were victims of their own caution. They didn't think to get a key and let themselves out the front.

The fire started from a coal stove in the kitchen. A shotgun and a pistol the Clappers had bought as added protection exploded in the heat and aroused the neighborhood in nearby Lipscomb, just outside Birmingham.

When they finally dug into the ruins firemen found big stacks of bills in denominations as "big as $20's."

He said one stack of $20's in a tin box was 6-inches thick. The hoard was estimated to total "several thousands of dollars."

The home was magnificently furnished with walnut and mahogany antiques, some 200 years old. All were destroyed.

British Ease Rationing

London, April 22 (U.P.). — All canned meats, canned milk, canned beans and shredded suet were removed from the ration list by the Ministry of Food tonight.

Thieves Sought In $4500 Safe Job

An interstate lookout has been broadcast for thieves who stole $1000 in cash and $3500 in bonds from a safe in the offices of the Union Life Insurance Co., 815 King st., Alexandria.

Police said the door to the offices was forced, and a non-burglarproof safe pried open with a screw driver some time between the close of business Thursday and opening time Friday morning. The stolen bonds were in the name of S. O. Turner and Mrs. Charles Turner, police said.

D. C. Legionnaires Hold Membership Rally Today

Frank Waldrop, executive editor of the Washington Times-Herald, will be the principal speaker at a membership rally of the D. C. Department, American Legion, at 2:30 p. m. today at Meridian Hill Park.

Another speaker will be William Sheridan, a page in the House of Representatives and recent winner of the D. C. Department's oratorical contest. The rally will be preceded by a half-hour band concert by the Navy Band at 2 p.m.

2-Cent Cigarette Tax Urged in Alexandria

The Alexandria City Council may impose a 2-cents-a-pack tax on all cigarettes sold in the city in an effort to eliminate part of a $275,000 deficit in its proposed 1950-51 budget.

City Manager W. Guy Ancell said yesterday he will propose the tax to the council at its meeting Tuesday and estimated it would bring in about $100,000 in annual revenue.

A telephone poll of the seven-man council last night indicated four members favor the tax, one opposes it and one is in doubt. Councilman Franklin P. Backus could not be reached for comment.

C.A.R. Is Told Socialism Menaces U. S.

The Children of the American Revolution were told yesterday their freedoms are in jeopardy because of the present Administration's program.

Speaking before a business session of the CAR at the Mayflower Hotel, John Tope of Detroit, chairman of the Young Republican National Federation, declared:

"We find that our freedoms are in jeopardy because the men in control of our Government are attempting to substitute a European type of government known as socialism which is inconsistent with the right of human ambitions as outlined in the Constitution."

Likening the present Administration program to that of Robin Hood—"who always robbed the rich, kept a big portion for himself, and then distributed the rest of his loot to the poor"—Tope predicted:

"You are not going to be able under this type of government to exercise the same freedoms of choice that our parents enjoyed during their lifetime. The Constitution and the Bill of Rights which today give you the best kind of security in the world by protecting your freedoms of opportunity will be out the window."

The CAR members also heard Jiuji G. Kasi, president of the American-Japanese Cultural Society and former member of the Jap Diet, discuss the threat of communism in Japan and describe what steps are being taken to combat it.

During the day the gold spoon offered by the Grandmothers' Club as a prize to the youngest child enrolled in the CAR was awarded to Robert Wilson Bishop, born April 10, in Connecticut. The infant was enrolled when only two hours old.

The CAR elected the following senior vice presidents general:

Six-year terms—Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffey of Georgia, Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Roger Williams, jr., of Washington.

Five-year terms—Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy of Michigan, Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball of Indiana, and Mrs. E. Williams Berner of New York.

Four-year term—Mrs. Carl H. Giroux of Washington, Mrs. Frank E. Andrews of New Mexico, and Mrs. Frank Ray of Washington.

Today the Children of the American Revolution will go to Virginia to conclude their meeting. They will lay wreaths on the tombs of the unknown soldier at Arlington Cemetery and the unknown soldier of the Revolution at Alexandria's old Presbyterian meeting house, will install new officers under the elms at Mount Vernon and climax the day with a tea at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria.

Daughters of 1812 to Honor Mrs. Lansburgh

After a memorial service at 3:30 p.m., today at the Foundry Methodist Church, members of the United States Daughters of 1812 will go back to Rock Creek Cemetery today to lay a wreath on the grave of Mrs. Sol Lansburgh.

Mrs. Lansburgh, who died three weeks ago, was formerly headquarters chairman of the organization, which will open business sessions of its annual convention, at the Shoreham Hotel, Monday.

Yesterday national officers were honored at a reception at headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island ave. nw., and later, the board of directors met for a business session. The convention will continue through Tuesday.

Marshall to Speak At Conference of Chaplain Group

Gen. George C. Marshall, wartime Chief-of-Staff, will be one of the speakers during a three-day conference of the Military Chaplains Association May 9-11.

General Marshall, now head of the American Red Cross, will speak at a luncheon at noon, May 10.

The conference wil open at the Shoreham Hotel at 2 p. m. May 9 and will continue through May 11.

The general's talk will follow a memorial service at 8:30 a. m. Wednesday at Arlington Cemetery. Speaker at the service will be Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of Christian Century, whose son was one of the four chaplain's who lost their lives on the troopship Dorchester.

Lung Group's Parley Ends In Alexandria

The Virginia Tuberculosis Association closed its two-day annual convention in Alexandria last night.

At the closing session in the Washington Street Methodist Church, the 170 delegates heard Dr. Otto C. Brantigan, professor of thoracic surgery at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, speak on "The Status of Thoracic Surgery in the Treatment of Tuberculosis."

Dr. Brantigan told the group that 31 million Japanese have been vaccinated against tuberculosis since the occupation began. During the period, he said, the deaths caused by the disease dropped from 260 to 140 per 100,000 persons annually.

Dr. Clifford C. Price, bacteriologist for the Pure Food and Drug Administration, also spoke at the closing session, on "Recent Advances in Antibiotic Research."

In the annual election, Dr. John A. Sims of Alexandria was reelected president of the association. Dr. C. H. Hagenbuch of Roanoke was reelected first vice president, and William T. Luck of Richmond was reelected treasurer.

The Rev. H. H. Donovan of Charlottesville was elected second vice president and Mrs. Fred G. Todman of Richmond was elected secretary. Miss Leslie Combs Foster submitted her resignation as executive secretary. No replacement has as yet been named.

Dr. Charles P. Cake of Arlington was elected to the board of directors.

Plans Are Set For Southeast Home Contest

The Southeast Home Improvement Contest, sponsored by the Southeast Businessmen's Association, will get under way at 10 a.m. Saturday with a mass redecorating of five home fronts.

Charles Gunn, chairman of the restoration, announced arrangements last night at the association's annual banquet in the Congressional Hotel.

Twenty-five Eastern High School students will put new doors and new paint on the five home fronts at 1204-14 G st. se., "as an example of what can be done," Gunn said.

The contest will run from Saturday until Labor Day and is open to either owners or tenants in the area between East and South Capitol sts. and the Anacostia River.

Two jackpots of prizes are being set up for first prize winners in two classes, home decoration and structural remodeling.

So far the jackpots include a trip to New York, an oil burner, a kitchen sink, a chain fence and two $100 savings accounts.

Color photos will be made by the committee before and after redecoration. The contest is part of a plan to restore the old Southeast area to its onetime greatness.

Cooper, Tennessee Ex-Governor, Weds

New York, April 22 (AP).—Prentice Cooper, former ambassador to Peru and ex-governor of Tennessee, and Miss Hortense Hayes Powell of Johnson City, Tenn., and New York, were married here today in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church.

The bride is employed in the public information office at United Nations headquarters.

Lane to Speak

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., will address the Rockville Laymen's Association tonight at 8 at the Rockville Presbyterian Church.

Cretans Send D. C. Rare Goat

lages that an agrimi has been glimpsed.

Few living men, says the ECA, including Greeks, have ever seen a live agrimi.

The logical question arises: "How was this particular agrimi captured?"

It appears that a sharp-eyed Cretian by name of Eftikios Protopapadakis caught a glimpse of an animal telescoped like a tiny piece of fur high on a rugged peak.

Investigating, he discovered an agrimi but a few days old.

With the aid of a nanny goat, Eftikios raised him as a pet. Kri Kri grew to a sturdy, bright-eyed 20 months.

Not long ago an ECA field representative visited Apanachori, home of Protopapadakis. The village is described as a modern Shangri-la, sealed off from the rest of the island of Crete by almost impregnable mountains.

The bearded Protopapadakis and fellow villagers approached the ECA man and said in so many words:

"You people have done so much for us. We do not have much to give in return. But we would like to give you the rarest thing we have."

And to America they offered Kri Kri the agrimi. What was more, these villagers had raised a million drachmae to send Kri Kri here. This is not much in American money—only $66.55—but in remote Apanachori it is a fortune.

Lady of Sorrows School Ready In September

The Rev. James F. King, pastor of Our Lady of Sorrows in Takoma Park, Md., announced last night that the new parish school is expected to be ready next September.

The school and a convent house are under construction at New Hampshire and Larch ave. in Takoma Park. The school will have eight classrooms, a kindergarten, an auditorium and a cafeteria accommodating 600 persons.

Sisters of the Divine Providence at Melbourne, Ky., will be assigned to the teaching staff.

To help finance construction, Our Lady of Sorrows will hold a dance Friday night at the Silver Spring Armory. Lean Brusiloff and his orchestra will provide music from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

The dance committee, headed by John A. Collins, has arranged an entertainment program that will include Singer Marie O'Conner, Accordionist Frank Govan and a variety dance group composed of Miss Gini Carter, Miss Vickie Flaherty, John Kelly and Victor of the Victor Dance Studio.

Rev. Theall to Speak

The Rev. Bernard Theall, O.S.B., instructor in library science at Catholic University, will speak on "The Betrothed," at a meeting of the Study Guild Catholic Library, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw. at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday.

New Antibiotic Resembles Aureomycin

Setting a new medical record, the Mayo Clinic of Rochester, Minn., yesterday published a clinical report on a drug completely unknown nine months ago.

The drug, terramycin, newest of earth-mold derivatives, was reported effective against pneumonia, blood poisoning, urinary infections, tonsilitis, septic sore throat and other infections.

Other investigators, in as yet unpublished reports, have compared the powers of terramycin with the still new but now well-known aureomycin.

"Terramycin's anti-bacterial activity is similar but not identical to aureomycin," the Mayo Clinic investigators reported. Moreover, they added, "the evidence of nausea and vomiting with terramycin is definitely less than with aureomycin."

Past experience with penicillin and the succeeding antibiotics is credited with the new drug's speedy development. In the "normal" course of development the new drug would not have been tested on humans for several years.

Some 15 years were required to develop penicillin from its discovery to its use on humans; the later antibiotic, streptomycin, required two years. Terramycin was first found by scientists of the Charles Pfizer & Co., Inc., laboratories, of Brooklyn, N. Y., only nine months ago.

The Mayo study, published in the current issue of "Proceedings of the Staff Meetings of the Mayo Clinic," is the first reported of more than 80 clinical programs now under way in leading universities and hospitals in tests of the new drug.

Virginia Area To Be Subject Of Geologists

The Fairfax and Seneca quadrangles of nearby Virginia will be discussed by the Geological Society of Washington Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Cosmos Club. A field trip to the area will be made Saturday at 9 a. m. starting from the Fairfax Court House.

Speakers at Wednesday's meeting are Allan P. Bennison and Charles Milton on geology of the area; James R. Balsley, geophysical correlation; Rollin E. Stevens, geochemical tests and Laurence P. Buck, engineering soils map.

Other area meetings next week:

MONDAY

American Welding Society, Washington Section—8 p. m., 400 Restaurant, 1423 F st. nw. Thirteenth anniversary dinner with address by O. B. J. Fraser, director of technical services, International Nickel Co., and national president of the society.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

More Federal Jobs Being Brought Under Classification Act

Upwards of 12,000 Federal jobs are being brought under the salary-fixing Classification Act over this weekend, and another 6000 will be covered before the week is out.

The jobs in the first batch are in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Federal Housing Administration, and the Housing and Home Finance Agency. A total of about 10,000 in those three agencies.

Congress ordered these jobs brought under the Classification Act last October. It gave Civil Service a deadline of April 28.

The salaries and grades of scores of jobs are being changed by the agencies involved to get them in line with Civil Service standards. The Securities and Exchange Commission is the only agency that may appeal Civil Service classifications.

The commission has indorsed a bill that would extend the time for Selective Service jobs to be brought under the act. Selective Service will expire on June 24 unless Congress extends it in the meantime.

CAREER APPOINTMENTS: President Truman has pointed out that he has promoted more career civil servants to top Federal jobs than any other President. And he has. Furthermore, the President said he would continue to recognize able people who are making a career of Government.

He made his statements to the committee he has formed to set up a national roster of eligible men and women for top Federal jobs. The committee is headed by his key assistant, Donald Dawson.

A staff director for the committee will be appointed in a few days to carry on day-to-day work. Each agency will be asked to recommend its outstanding but unrecognized people for top-rung jobs. The President's plan will give fresh encouragement to the career system.

RETIREMENT: Senator Williams (R., Del.) is urging the Senate to take up the bill to give free survivorship benefits to employes who retired prior to April 1, 1948.

He has objected to the bill several times when it was called up on the consent calendar. However, the Senator says he merely wants to offer an amendment to the bill to have all employes treated alike under the retirement system, no matter when they left the Federal service. The survivorship feature to the retirement system became effective April 1, 1948, and it wasn't made retroactive to retired people.

REORGANIZATION: The Administration now hopes to send several Government reorganization plans to Congress by May 1. It won't uncover new plans while the 21 proposals now before Congress are under fire.

Despite all of the vocal opposition, insiders believe only one of the 21 plans is certain of defeat—it's Plan 1 to place the semi-independent Comptroller of the Currency directly under the Treasury Secretary.

Meantime, the planners are debating suggestions to transfer RFC to either Treasury or Commerce and to switch the Army's rivers and harbors functions to the Interior Department.

UNCLE SAM'S NIECES

We are the gals of the clerical tables,
We're over forty, but willing and able,
No one whistles when we pass by,
Our combined sex appeal, you could put in your eye.

Our size 40 suits fit in all the wrong places,
We know we're not gorgeous, we merely have faces,
The stuff on our heads that we fondly call hair,
Would look just the same on an old gray mare.

We don't wear slacks, suits, or open-toed shoes,
We have nothing to gain and what could we lose?
We don't rush up to the rest rooms to powder and paint,
Why try to fake beauty, when we know it aint?

We don't wear false lashes, we know we're old dames,
Why none of the bosses even know our right names!
We just work at our tables from 8:30 to 5,
We don't like our jobs but it keeps us alive.

When the day's work is over, no car waits for us,
We run like the devil to catch the last bus.
When we crawl into bed, we don't pray at length,
We make only one plea—God give us strength.

We see the young girls as they trip gayly by,
We watch without envy, but we can't help but sigh,
For the days that are gone, they could have been worse,
They're beginning life's song, but we're on the last verse.

So call us the "biddies" and "old hens" if you will,
We've done a good job and are doing it still,
As long as we work and work a-plenty,
They don't care if we're 60 or if we're 20.

Daily Flight Added

United Air Lines will add a daily flight to Chicago and San Francisco starting April 30 and a similar run from those points to Washington. The flight will leave here at 4 p. m. and the incoming trip will be overnight from San Francisco.

St. Elizabeth Heads Stress Three Needs At Hospital

Home for Senile Residents, Facilities For Children Are Proposed Services

Two St. Elizabeths Hospital officials have advocated three new services they say are needed to meet the needs of the District's mentally ill.

The proposed services include:

1. A special nursing home for the care of harmless but senile aged residents.

2. Adequate facilities for the hospital care of psychotic (emotionally unbalanced) children.

3. Establishment of an out-patient clinic by St. Elizabeths to treat mentally disturbed residents whose conditions do not require hospital confinement.

The special needs and ways to meet them were outlined by Dr. S. A. Silk, assistant superintendent, and Dr. Edgar D. Griffin, clinical director, in a special conference Friday to help publicize National Mental Health Week, which begins Monday.

Both stressed the value of seeking early diagnosis and early treatment as a means of preventing long, sometimes lifetime, confinement. They also emphasized benefits of the changing trend in public education which has removed much of the "shame" formerly associated with sickness of the mind.

They showed reporters the 500-bed building under construction at St. Elizabeths Hospital for the care of aging patients, noting it could "be filled tomorrow" with such patients already at the Federal institution. It will be perhaps another year before the building is ready for occupancy, they added.

Most of these aged parents, Dr. Silk explained, are "unwanted oldsters" who became burdens to their relatives, and who need a sanctuary but not necessarily confinement to a mental hospital.

It would be far better, and perhaps cheaper, if they could be assigned to a special nursing home with a minimum of psychiatric services, he said.

Drs. Silk and Griffin agreed with the recent proposal to provide special services at Gallinger Hospital's new pediatrics building for the care of psychotic children under 14 years of age. St. Elizabeths, they pointed out, has no separate facilities for the young and must accommodate them along with its older patients.

An out-patient clinic for St. Elizabeths has long been proposed, but always stricken from the budget, they said. Although initially expensive, it probably would save money in the long run by reducing lengthy hospital stays of those who can't get treatment till their conditions warrant court commitments, they said.

House Weighs New Airport Bill Tuesday

The Senate-passed measure authorizing a new 14-million-dollar civilian airport in the Washington area will receive attention Tuesday.

Representative Lindley Beckworth (D., Tex.), chairman of the transportation subcommittee of the House Interstate Committee, said the bill will be considered with several other measures at a 10 a. m. meeting.

The measure passed the Senate unanimously last Thursday.

The Beckworth group includes two House District Committee members — Representatives Oren Harris (D., Ark.) and Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.).

Sponsor of Measure

Harris is the House sponsor of the airport bill. He indicated he will give the project a strong push.

Informal checks, he said, shows considerable House support, "particularly in light of tragedies at National Airport, one of which caused the death of Representative George Bates of Massachusetts."

Bates was killed in the crash which took 54 other lives last November 1.

This week's agenda of District business in Congress is heavy.

District leaders will attempt to get a House vote, but probably not Monday, on a bill to grant District daylight saving time this year only. The Senate approved legislation Friday authorizing the city heads to proclaim DST annually.

Prompt congressional action is sought so residents may set their clocks one hour ahead next Sunday, when most other DST cities will make the switch.

The Senate District Committee has scheduled a 10:30 a. m. meeting Tuesday to take up the controversial child day care program. Pending are two bills, one to continue the program another year under the Welfare Department, present administrator; the other to transfer the centers to the Health Department.

Unless legislation is approved, the centers will close June 30.

At 10 a. m. Wednesday, the Metropolitan Police Department drive to put its force on a five-day week will open before the House District subcommittee on public services, streets and traffic, headed by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.).

The legislation, introduced by Davis, also would place the White House and Park Police on the five-day week.

$750,000 Asked

Land Offered As Virginia Play Center

The 1775-acre Bristow tract near Annandale, in Fairfax County, Va., has been offered for sale as a State recreation area, the Arlington County Board was informed yesterday.

Asking price for the land is $750,000. It fronts on Accotink Creek and includes about 500 acres of cleared farmland usable for a golf course and athletic field.

It has been put up for sale by the Annandale real estate firm of Mason Hirst & Son, Inc., and is part of the estate of the late Joseph Bristow.

The site is nearly three times the size of the Barcroft tract, another Fairfax area proposed for a State park. It fronts on a 120-acre lake, owned by the Federal Government and used during the war as a reservoir for Fort Belvoir.

The Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission, the governing bodies of Alexandria, Falls Church and Fairfax, and northern Virginia's delegation to Congress and the State Legislature, have also been informed that the tract is available, according to Omer L. Hirst, member of the real estate firm.

Bandit Gets $700 in Airline Office Holdup

An armed bandit held up a pretty cashier at Northwest Airline's downtown office yesterday and escaped with $101.34 in cash and $594.84 in checks.

The holdup occurred at the main counter behind the sheet glass front of the airline office at 1510 H st. nw. at 3:30 p. m.

Miss Lennie Dretzka, 25, 2829 28th st. nw., the ticket agent, was alone in the front of the office at the time. The other women, in the reservation room in the rear of the office, were not disturbed.

Miss Dretzka described the holdup man as white, about 30, 5 feet 2 inches tall, about 150 pounds, with straight light hair, and wearing a light topcoat.

She said he came up to the counter "to pick up two tickets," and slapped a small paper in front of her.

"Don't move. This is a stickup," the paper read.

The bandit then went behind the counter, holding a nickle-plated pistol by his side, in view of Miss Dretzka but not visible to pedestrains walking outside the large window which faces the street.

He scooped up the money, she said, and after he had forced her to open the safe, took five checks. All of the checks were indorsed "for deposit only to the credit of Northwest Airlines."

Miss Dretzka was locked into a room by the holdup man, until she was freed by the other clerks.

Patient Hunt Goes on for Renner Slayer

Nassau, Bahamas, April 22 (U.P.). Police continued to search today for the bicycling companion of slain former FBI girl Bettie Renner with renewed assurances they want him only for information and not as a suspect.

A reward of $1400 has been offered for information leading to the capture of Miss Renner's sex slayer. Her battered, nearly nude body was found in a well by a woman.

Charles and Frank Renner, Washington, D. C., brothers of the woman who had been vacationing here, refused to make any comment. They referred all questions to their American attorney.

Maj. G. H. Ranoe, police commissioner, said a Negro whom three persons profess to have seen cycling with Miss Renner, is wanted for "questioning."

Miss Renner, 37, who lived at 1720 21st st. nw., Washington, left Lost House, her hotel, at 10 a. m. Tuesday. Police said she had planned to visit a monastery. Her body was found Wednesday.

Ranoe said that he would call in Britain's Scotland Yard and the FBI, if he needed help in searching for the slayer, but that the necessity has not arisen yet. He said the search calls for stamina and patience, rather than technical experts right now.

Charles Renner left by air for Washington today after a priest conducted a mass at a mortuary.

Miss Renner's body will be shipped by boat Sunday to Miami. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery in Washington Wednesday.

Teamsters To Sign New Pay Pact

Dump Truckers Get Six-Cent Increase; New Contract Let For Bricklayers

Prospects for a peaceful summer in Washington's construction industry, riddled by strikes last year, will get a third boost this week when the dump truck operators and the AFL teamsters sign their new agreement.

Under terms of the one-year contract, 250 drivers of Local 639, AFL Teamsters Union, will get a 6-cent-an-hour wage increase, for a total of $1.40 an hour. Last year the dump truck drivers won 17 cents an hour.

Two other building trades unions have negotiated new contracts, the AFL bricklayers, who got a 3-percent welfare fund, and the AFL lathers, who won a 25-cent-an-hour pay hike to $3.

Denies Shortage of Lathers

James K. Trenary, business agent for Local 9, of the Lathers Union, yesterday denied a report from employers that the union's big pay increase this year was due to an extreme shortage of skilled lathers. Trenary denied employers estimated that twice as many as the 300 union lathers were needed to keep up with present construction in this area. He asserted that an additional 20 lathers would adequately take care of current demand. However, industry officials will maintain that the shortage of lathers is acute.

Meanwhile, Charles Bell, president, and L. H. Trainham, business agent of Teamsters Local 639, yesterday disclosed the union had signed a new agreement for 200 drivers who man the trucks for the plumbing and lumber supply dealers here. The agreements give the teamsters an additional 10 cents, for a total of $1.17 an hour.

Several Negotiations

The teamsters' local is presently negotiating several other new contracts, as follows: 150 hotel supply drivers, present wage $1.15 an hour, seeking an increase of 35 cents; 50 meat packinghouse haulers, present wage $1.37½ an hour, seeking an increase of 22½ cents; 50 haulers of heavy building supplies, present wage $1.40 an hour, seeking an additional 35 cents.

Representatives of the AFL Carpenters and the Construction Contractors Council will meet this week in an effort to reach agreement over the union's demand for a welfare fund. The 6000 carpenters—who struck seven weeks last year to win 10 cents an hour—want a 3 percent welfare fund, financed by the builders. The request amounts to 7½ cents an hour; the employers have thus far offered 5 cents an hour in welfare benefits.

Arlington Will Probe Police Force

The Arlington County Board yesterday voted unanimously to investigate its police department, but failed to spell out any specific charges against the force.

Board member Mrs. Florence Cannon proposed establishment of a special investigating commission, because, she said, "general and specific charges have been made concerning Arlington's police system by responsible and reputable individuals and organizations."

Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard commented: "The police departmennt has absolutely nothing to hide and welcomes any type of investigation the county board sees fit to make."

County Manager A. T. Lundberg indorsed Woodyard's statement. He said the investigation would give Arlington residents "an unbiased picture of the police department and they should have it."

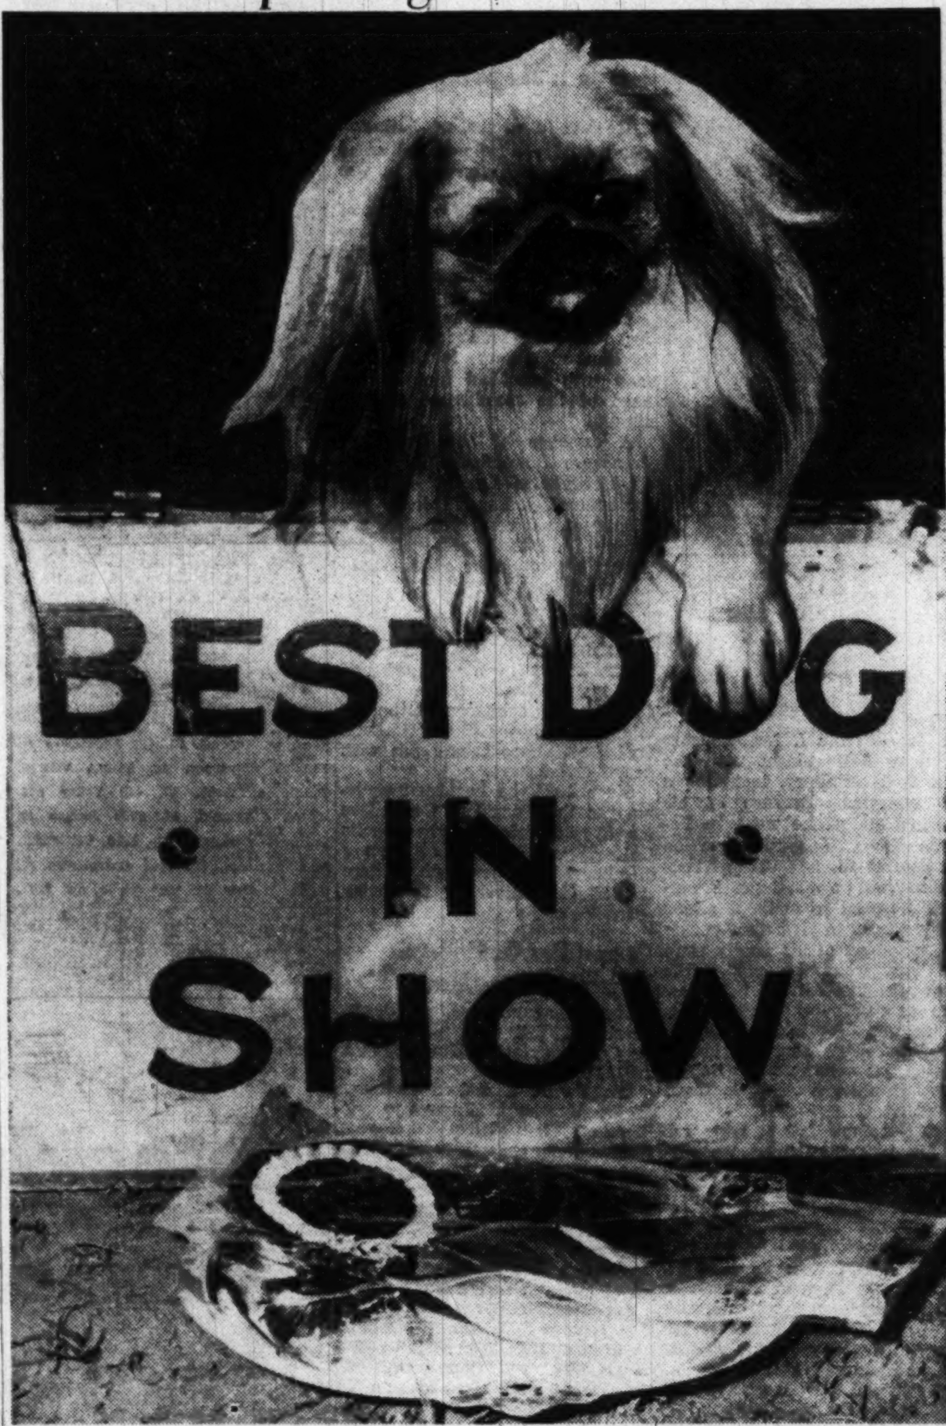
In other actions yesterday, the county board:

1. Voted to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to reopen hearings on a five-cent fare increase just granted to the Arnold Bus Lines. The board has opposed the increase.

2. Was informed that an ordinance to "control" self-service gas stations will be proposed at the next board meeting by County Manager Lundberg.

3. Appointed the following members to five long-unfilled vacancies on its advisory Public Utilities Commission: O. B. Allen, industrial engineer; Hobart L. Cory, utilities engineer; Edward Kelly, lawyer; Bennie L. Fletcher, jr., lawyer; and William K. Holl, specialist in management and administration.

Kai-Jin, British-Born Pekingese, Wins Prize As Best-Primped Dogs Cavort in Va. Show



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

OLD STORY—Winning "Best in Show" title is getting to be a habit with Champion Dah-Lyn Kai-Jin of Caversham, English pekinese, owned by John B. Royce, of Brookline, Mass. He won that title for the eleventh time yesterday at the sixteenth annual dog show held by the Old Dominion Kennel Club at the municipal ball park in Alexandria, Va.

Just as Seafren High Stepper, a miniature French poodle with gorgeous brown hair six inches long, was being given the cold eye by the judge an Indian cavorting nearby crashed down on his drums.

Stepper's tail, as erect as the Washington Monument, crashed like a felled redwood.

Stepper had to be satisfied with third place and in talking with his owner, Saunders L. Meade, we decided not to mention the rumors that some of our ancestors had Apache blood.

Can Do Without Indians

Meade, who has kennels in Malvern, Pa., felt dog shows can do without performances by Indians in native dress, even if a few less paying customers are attracted.

High Stepper, he admitted, may not have done any better than third even without Pamunkey tribe drums on the warpath.

But the nervous strain he experienced at the dog show of the Old Dominion Kennel Club of Northern Virginia is typical of the fate of those who show man's best friend at his primped best.

In this regard, to see the cosmetician's art in real high tide you need to step backstage at a dog show. Some 926 dogs preened their way around the rings before several thousand of the two-legged yesterday at Alexandria's Municipal Ball Park.

It was the sixteenth annual performance of the area's biggest dog show.

A British-born Pekingese entitled Kai-Jin owned by John B. Royce, of Brookline, Mass., sallied off with the 'best-in-show."

Jin weighs 8½ pounds and Royce looks to weigh about 200. The big man with the little dog created much salty comment marching around the ring. It was Jin's tenth best-in-show and according to Joyce makes him the most-winning Peke in America.

Backstage the combs and brushes were flying like windmills in a typhoon.

Clears Their Ears

Mrs. Bernard Michaeli of Newark, N. J., accompanied Bao Brauni and Sabu of Fran Fin, two handsome Afghan hounds.

"The day before the show," said Mrs. Michaeli, "I clean their ears and brush their teeth with a toothbrush—I use plain baking soda. I clean and cut their toenails and give them a good bath."

Just then Sabu of Fran Fin's tail dropped.

"If you go in the ring and do that," Mrs. Michaeli shook a finger in his face, "I'll murder you! Be just like you—start singing and let your tail drop."

Meade of the Pamunkey Indian experience had Seafren propped on a dresser equipped with several drawers of brushes and combs and other gear required by a fashion-wise dog.

He had devoted an hour and a half to combing-brushing that hair softer than the softest down. This doesn't count the many other hours spent trimming the pom-poms into exact shape with an electric clipper.

You've never polished a great Dane? Well, it's a lot of space to polish but Pat Knapp of 2610 North Quantico st., Arlington, was doing a thorough job with Heide, owned by her friend Mrs. Regina Plavsky. Danes get polished, and they also get the manicure, brushing and bath enjoyed by their fellow-dogs.

Regular primping equipment travels in cases with the dogs.

'Bangaway' Wins Prize In Potomac Boxer Show

Awarded highest prize as "Best of Breed" in the Potomac Boxer Club's show, held Friday at the Fort Myer gymnasium, was Bangaway, owned by Dr. R. C. Harris, of Santa Anna, Calif.

Prize as "Best of the Opposite Sex" in the boxer show went to Brianel, owned by W. A. Van Story, of Weaverville, N. C.

In the Capital City Cocker Club show, held jointly with the Borer Club's exhibition at Fort Myer, the "Best in Show" award went to Champion Highomar Hallelujah owned by Mr. and Mrs. Lester E. Wallach of Norwalk, Conn.

Best of the Opposite Sex prize in the cocker show went to Champion Honey Creek Vivacious, owned by Mrs. B. W. Wegusen, of Ada, Mich.

5 Persons Die, 147 Injured in Home Mishaps

Hospitals treated 147 District residents injured in home accidents last week and five accidental deaths were reported because of two falls, suffocations and one burn.

Burns were in the majority among the mishaps reported by the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service.

One man was badly burned on his arms and elbows while smoking in bed. A gas oven exploded and caused first and second degree burns on the face and hands of a 21-year-old woman. Another woman was badly burned when a pot of boiling potatoes fell from a stove.

In Assault Case

300-Stitch Scalp Shown To Court

Thomas Dean, 52, showed up in Municipal Court yesterday morning with a herringbone pattern of 300 stitches in his scalp.

He was there to complain against the conduct of the man he says made the needlework necessary, Ramsay Thomas, 42, of 487 Cujllinane ct. sw.

Police said the fight started April 14 in Cullinane ct. when Thomas showed up to collect some money from a girl friend of Dean.

As a result of Dean's testimony, and the scalp he showed Judge Thomas D. Quinn, Thomas was held for action of the grand jury under $1500 bond, charged with assault with intent to kill.

Foy Held For Jury in Wife Shooting

Claude O. Foy, 42-year-old Naval Gun Factory machinist, was held for the action of the grand jury under $5000 bond in Municipal Court yesterday, charged with shooting his wife April 6.

Mrs. Foy, 35, is still in "serious" condition at Casualty Hospital.

Police say Foy has admitted shooting his wife in the head in the bathroom of their home at 1816 22d st. se. after she threatened to leave him. Foy then turned the gun, a .765-caliber Mauser, on himself. He has been in Gallinger Hospital until recently, also with a bullet wound in his head.

Foy is charged with assault with intent to kill his wife.

Shaw Taboo for Dance . . . G. U. Students Out of Pocket

It may be the multiple marriages that band leader Artie Shaw has had, or it may be his price of $1800 a night. Anyway, he isn't going to play for the annual Diplomats Ball of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

Opinions differed last night on the cause of cancellation of his contract. All agreed it has been cancelled and Shep (bloop-blub-[illegible] bibblbblb) Fields has been engaged. Fields is the genius who blows through a tube into a punchbowl full of water to introduce his melodies. Also, he plays for about $1000 or $1200 a night.

The Diplomats Ball will take place May 5, at the Hotel Statler, come Shaw or come Fields. That's definite.

The Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S.J., president of Georgetown, just returning to the city, said he had heard nothing of the cancellation of Shaw's contract. He referred queries to the office of the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S.J., head of the School of Foreign Service, who was in Boston.

Walter Giles, secretary to Father Walsh, and J. Raymond Trainor, secretary in the School of Foreign Service, both said they heard Shaw's contract was canceled because it cost too much money.

The only catch is—the student committee which signed the contract is stuck for the $1800 for Artie Shaw—and no Artie Shaw.

"We got an order from the university level," one committee member said. "It was from above Father Walsh's office. We were told Shaw couldn't play because of his marriage background. Furthermore, getting Shep Fields doesn't save any money.

The committee already paid $900 cash on the line for Shaw. Though his agent has agreed to book him into a Maryland night club the night of the Diplomats' Ball, Georgetown will have to make up the difference between what he makes there—and $1800. And it will still pay Shep Fields."

About the marriages? Well, Artie has been married six times. His last four brides were Ava Gardner, Lana Turner, Elizabeth Kern and Kathleen Windsor, the latter the author of the hot novels "Forever Amber" and "Star Money."

Alexandrian Dies, 12 Hurt In 3-Way Road Crash

2 D. C. Residents Among Injured in Bus-Auto-Truck Collision in Pa.

An Alexandria man was fatally hurt and two District residents were among 12 others injured yesterday in a bus-truck-auto collision 5 miles north of Washington, Pa.

Dead as a result of the crash is Snowden E. McGuinn, about 35, of 816 Prince st., Alexandria.

Among the injured were Mrs. Jeannette Lovelady, of 14 T st. ne., and Stan Hertineck, of 20 G st. nw.

Pennsylvania State Police gave this account of the accident:

A truck loaded with galvanized pipe stalled on the four-lane highway. A Blue Ridge bus, bound from Washington, D. C., to Pittsburgh, crashed into it in the fog.

An auto rammed into the bus. Then a tractor-trailer truck ploughed into the auto, crushing it between the two big vehicles. However, only the occupants of the bus were injured.

The front of the bus was ripped open and the pipe and motor were driven back into the driver and one of the passengers.

The driver of the bus, Benjamin Oliver, 28, of Cumberland, Md., was reported in critical condition at Canonsburg (Pa.) Hospital, the same hospital where McGuinn died at 4:30 p. m.

Mrs. Lovelady and Robert Schonhut, 19, of Youngstown, Ohio, a sailor on leave from Norfolk, Va., were others at the Canonsburg Hospital.

Admitted to Washington (Pa.) Hospital suffering from shock and minor injuries were Elmo Patterson of Cumberland, Vincent Kogler of Grindstone, Pa., and Herbert McMurray and Annie McMurray, both of Coraopolis, Pa.

Treated and released were Hertineck and Walter Hartman of Pittsburgh, Dr. Veronica Binns of Brownsville, Pa., and Dorothy Krnaya of Cumberland, and Jerry Lewis, a sailor whose address was unavailable.

McGuinn, who was unmarried and roomed at the Prince st. address in Alexandria, was the proprietor of a nursery at Haymarket, Va., and maintained an office at 815 King st., Alexandria.

He was traveling to Buffalo, where his father and sister live, to attend a family reunion, a business associate said. In Buffalo he was to see another sister from the West Coast whom he had not seen for five years.

A brother of the victim, Jack McGuinn, lives at 1303 Powhatan st., Alexandria.

In other accidents yesterday:

Donald Roots, 12, of 1307 Hamlin st. ne., was seriously injured at 12:30 p. m. when he ran into the street and was struck by an automobile at 12th and Hamlin sts. ne.

Police said the driver was William H. Brown, jr., 54, of 2816 5th st. ne. The boy was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture.

Shortly after 1 p. m., in the 700 block of 7th st. ne., Jerry A. Bynoker, 3, of 714 7th st. ne., dashed into the street after his ball and ran into the side of a slow-moving Fire Department ambulance.

The child's mother, Mrs. Millie Bynoker, snatched at him as he darted into the street but missed him.

The child was treated at Casualty Hospital for bruises about his head.

A 36-year-old motorcyclist was seriously injured last night in a collision with a taxi at 4th and Varnum sts. nw.

George F. Fogle of 2127 First st. nw., was taken to Garfield Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg and cuts and bruises. Police identified the cabbie as Ovidion A. Stango, 37, of 3 Lauer ter., Silver Spring, Md. A hearing before the Corporation Counsel was ordered.

Miss Mary Campbell, 68, of 500 N. Capitol st., was struck down by an auto but not seriously injured in front of the George Mason Hotel, Washington and Prince sts., Alexandria. After the accident, the driver jumped from his car and fled.

Miss Campbell was treated at Alexandria Hospital for abrasions.

The car bore District tags. They were traced to Walter A. Kelly, 30, alias James Williams, of 923 L st. nw. Kelly was called to headquarters here and told police:

"After I struck the woman I was so scared I didn't know what to do. I'm 30 years old and I've never been in trouble in my life. I want to go back to Alexandria and straighten all this out."

Kelly was taken to the south end of Highway Bridge where he was turned over to Alexandria police.

Two Takoma Park, Md., teenagers were injured when playing children threw sand in the eyes of the operator of a motor scooter and caused him to run into the back of an automobile operated by Arthru Higgins, 3216 Chillum rd., Mount Rainier, Md.

The operator, Thomas Lewis, 15, 200 Spring ave., was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital with a lacerated right leg and brush burns on the face, while his passenger, Arnold Collins, 17, 122 Cockerille ave., was treated for an injury to the knee.

C. H. Houston Dies; Noted D. C. Attorney

CHARLES H. HOUSTON
Dies of heart ailment

Charles Hamilton Houston, widely known Washington attorney, died yesterday at 2:15 p. m., at Freedmen's Hospital. He was 54.

Mr. Houston had been ill since October 13 with a heart ailment.

A native of Washington, he was a graduate of Amherst College, and of the Harvard Law School. While in the latter institution, he was the first Negro to be one of the editors of the Harvard Law Review, and the first Negro to be awarded the degree of Doctor of Juridical Science, by the school.

He also won the Sheldon Traveling Fellowship at Harvard, for a year's study abroad. During that time, he took postgraduate work at the University of Madrid, Spain.

Admitted to the District bar in 1924, he entered law practice with his father, William L. Houston. For a time, Judge William Henry Hastie, formerly governor of the Virgin Islands and now a judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, was a member of the Houston firm.

Mr. Houston was vice dean of the School of Law at Howard University from 1929 to 1935. But he achieved his greatest distinction as an advocate of equal rights for members of his race.

He had been special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and later a member of its national legal committee; general counsel of the Association of Colored Railway Trainmen and of the International Association of Railway Employes.

Since 1940, he has been a vice president of the American Council of Race Relations. In 1944, President Roosevelt appointed Mr. Houston as a member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices. But he resigned in December, 1945, in a sharp letter to President Truman protesting that the President had blocked issuance of an FEPC directive against the Capital Transit Co.

One of Mr. Houston's greatest fights was to abolish restrictive real estate covenants against his race. It was won on May 3, 1948, when the Supreme Court in a 6-0 decision declared such covenants unenforcable under either Federal or State laws.

Only a week ago, the Maryland Court of Appeals handed down a decision which was another victory for Mr. Houston in a case he launched. The decision said that a State school of nursing must accept a Negro girl student.

Mr. Houston served as a member of the District Board of Education from 1933 to 1935. In 1947, a vigorous, but unsuccessful, campaign was waged for him for appointment to replace Guy Mason as District Commissioner. Indorsements came from both white and Negro groups. At various times, he has been suggested for judgeships here.

In World War I, Mr. Houston served as a lieutenant with the 351st Field Artillery, including a time overseas. Because of his veteran's status, he went to Bethesda Naval Hospital when he first became ill, last October, but later insisted on moving to Freedmen's Hospital to make it easier for his family to visit him.

No members of his family were with him when he died. His father was just leaving their law office for a visit to him. His wife, the former Henrietta Williams, and a 6-year-old son, Charles H. Houston, jr., were at Baton Rouge, La., visiting her sister at Southern University.

Mr. Houston's father, wife and son are his only immediate survivors. With his wife and son, he lived at 3611 New Hampshire ave. nw.

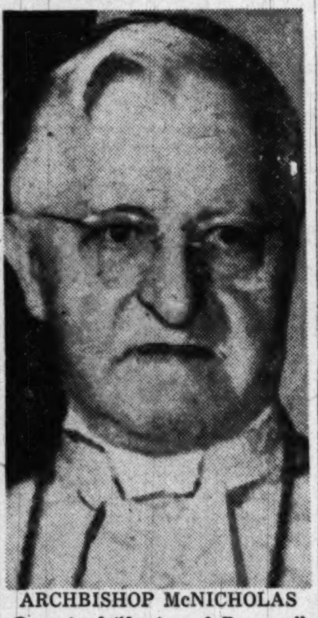
Archbishop McNicholas Dies; Widely Known in District



ARCHBISHOP McNICHOLAS
Organized "Legion of Decency"

Cincinnati, April 22 (AP).—The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O.P., archbishop of the Catholic diocese of Cincinnati, died tonight. He was 72 years old.

Archbishop McNicholas, widely known throughout the Nation for his work in the formation of "The Legion of Decency," an organization organized to improve the moral tone of motion pictures, had been in failing health for many months.

He was a native of Kiltmach County, Mayo, Ireland, but came to the United States when he was 3 years old.

He helped form "The Legion of Decency" in 1934 and at the time of his death it was estimated the organization had a membership of more than three million.

The Archbishop was ordained for the priesthood in 1901 by Archbishop Henry Moeller, the man who preceded him as the head of the archdiocese of Cincinnati.

A member of the Order of Preachers (Dominicans), Archbishop McNicholas studied in Rome for several years and later was master of novices at St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia. He also formerly was pastor of St. Catherine of Sienna Parish in New York and organized the Holy Name Society in 1908.

Archbishop McNicholas was widely known in Washington and had many friends there. Since 1948, he was chairman of the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference with headquarters here.

Since 1934, he has been chairman of the Pontifical Committee for Sacred Sciences at Catholic University. He also has been a member of the board of trustees at Catholic University for many years.

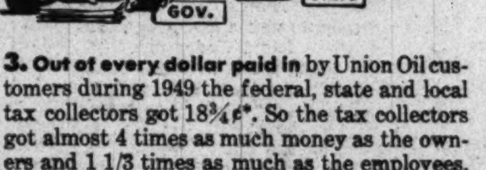
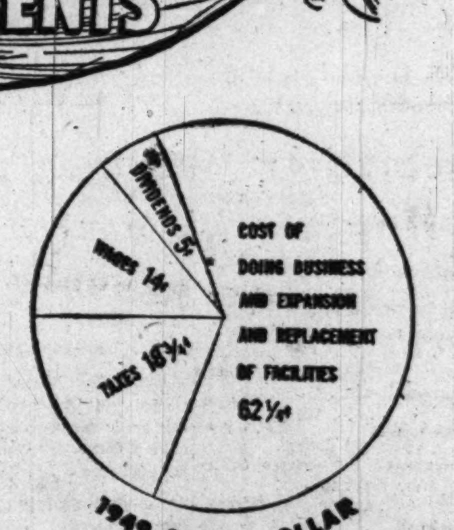
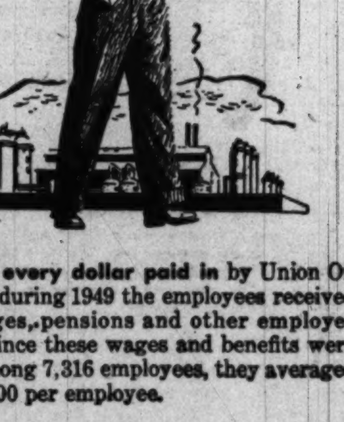
Stockholders get 5¢ from each Union Oil 1949 sales dollar

...TAX COLLECTOR GETS 18¾¢

1. Out of every dollar paid in by Union Oil customers during 1949 the company made a net profit of 8¼¢. 3¼¢ of this was put into expanded facilities to meet the growing demand for petroleum products in the West. 5¢ was paid out to the stockholders in dividends. Since these dividends were divided among 37,245 preferred and common stockholders, the payments averaged $315 per stockholder.







2. Out of every dollar paid in by Union Oil customers during 1949 the employees received 14¢ in wages, pensions and other employee benefits. Since these wages and benefits were divided among 7,316 employees, they averaged about $4,700 per employee.

3. Out of every dollar paid in by Union Oil customers during 1949 the federal, state and local tax collectors got 18¾¢*. So the tax collectors got almost 4 times as much money as the owners and 1 1/3 times as much as the employees.

*This figure represents taxes on all our products—fuel oils, asphalt, lube oil, greases and gasoline. When our customers buy gasoline, 31¢ of each dollar they spend goes to the tax collectors.

4. "Cost of Doing Business and Expansion and Replacement of Facilities" includes following:

Raw materials	26¼¢
Transportation	7¼¢
Supplies, power, exploration, selling expense, etc.	14¼¢
Interest	¾¢
Expansion and replacement of facilities	13¾¢
TOTAL	62¼¢

Israel Is Warned Of 3d Year Perils

Tel Aviv, Israel, April 22 (AP).—Israel flamed with bonfires tonight as the entire nation started the celebration of its second birthday.

A bonfire lighted on Mount Herzl in Jerusalem by Joseph Sprinzak, speaker of Parliament, signalled the start of the rejoicing. Youths with torches lighted fires on every hilltop from Galilee in the north to the Gulf of Aqaba in the south.

About 1500 Communists paraded in Tel Aviv, carrying banners denouncing "the imperialistic bloc and warmongers."

Coastal artillery fired three salvos in salute and ships at Tel Aviv and Haifa unloosed their sirens as bonfires mushroomed from the surrounding hills.

Many of Israel's 165,000 Arabs held open house, feasting at Nazareth and other Arab centers.

By the Hebrew calendar April 23 is observed as the national holiday though Israel was not formally proclaimed a state until May 15, 1948.

In broadcasts, President Chaim Weizmann and Premier David Ben-Gurion reminded the Jews that they have hard tasks ahead.

Ben-Gurion asserted no great power now favors internationalization of the city, and said this proved it is now recognized that international rule is "unworkable." Russia, who supported internationalization in the United Nations, disclosed last week that she is abandoning that position.

The press tempered rejoicing with admonitions that Israel is surrounded by enemies and must be prepared to defend herself until peace is made with the Arabs.

(From Washington President Truman sent the following telegram to Dr. Weizmann of Israel at Tel-Aviv:

("The people of the United States join me on this anniversary of the independence of Israel in expressing to Your Excellency and to the people of Israel sincere congratulations and best wishes.")

Runners up were: editorial, Neil Wicker, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, second, and Henry Deat, B-CC, third. newswriting, Gilbert Deat, B-CC, second, and Charles Crum, Montgomery Blair, third; sports, Fred Warder, B-CC, second, and Earle Bates, B-CC, third; feature, Patricia Williams, Gaithersburg High, second, and Charlotte Frost, Montgomery Blair, third.

Judges were Louis Leimbach, of the Montgomery Sentinel, president of the Montgomery County Press Association, who presented cash prizes to the winners; Mrs. Elsie White Haines, of the Sentinel; Mrs. Mary Evans of the Rockville Times and Mrs. Stella Werner, who told the students of the $250 scholarship award to be given annually by the county press asasociation. Howard P. Bailey of the Washington Evening Star, spoke.

Corpse in Boat Sighted at Sea

Norfolk, Va., April 22 (AP).—The Panamanian steamer Macoa radioed Coast Guard headquarters in Norfolk tonight at 7 o'clock that it had passed a ship's lifeboat containing a "dead person" about 75 miles east-southeast of Diamond Shoals lightship. No other details were given.

The cutter Marion was dispatched from Norfolk and is expected to be on the scene early tomorrow morning.

Man Runs to Street To Catch Baby in Fall

New York, April 22 (UP).—Alfred Forchino glanced from his window today and saw a 2-year-old child crawling on a window ledge five floors above the ground in a neighboring apartment house.

Forchino bolted for the door, ran to the building and arrived just in time to catch the child as she tumbled from the ledge.

The force of the fall knocked him to the ground, but Forchino held on to the child and rushed her to a hospital, where she was examined and found uninjured.

Blevins, 31, a divorcee, of 1129 11th st. nw.

The detectives searched Mrs. Blevins' car, they said, and found a number of kitchen utensils, which included a sugar scoop, covered with a white powder. A field test, the detectives said, showed the powder to be heroin. Mrs. Blevins was taken to the Police Women's Bureau and searched. Matrons there, police said found a capsule of heroin on her person.

Lieutenant Carper said that as a result, she will be charged with narcotic law violations.

The other five women and the man, Lieutenant Carper said, are known to police as shoplifters or peddlers of merchandise on the streets. They were picked up, he said, because they were making contacts with Mrs. Blevins in her auto, with packages of merchandise.

Later, the man, booked as John Histon, 48, and one of the five women, Carrie Cole, 42, both were charged with violation of narcotic laws. Lieutenant Carper said no dope was found on them, and did not disclose the basis of the charges.

Du Mont
HERE IS WHY IT'S YOUR BEST BUY!
Here are 30 of Du Mont's extra features. No other receiver on the market can give you all these advantages. Look them over; see why a Du Mont is your best buy.

1 Du Mont Picture Tube It was Du Mont's development of the cathode ray tube from a laboratory curiosity, that made electronic television commercially practical.

2 Du Mont Inputuner* High-precision electronic device for tuning to exact frequency where both picture and sound are best. *Trade-mark

3 FM Radio Every Du Mont includes complete FM radio using same precision tuner, high-quality audio circuit, high-fidelity speaker.

4 Long-life Du Mont Telesets were first sold in 1939. Many are still in operation. Today's Du Monts are better built than ever before.

5 Extra-sensitivity A recent improvement in the famed Du Mont Inputuner produces clear, sharp pictures even from very weak stations.

6 Automatic voltage stabilizer Prevents picture fading by correcting for variations in electric power supply. (In Plus-powered models.)

7 Sharper focus A finer-focused electronic beam "paints" the picture with sharper detail.

8 Full-range contrast Du Mont's high powered electronic beam and fine engineering give strongly contrasting blacks and whites, retain full range of values.

9 Added tubes Give smoother operation and a reserve of power, just as more cylinders do in an automobile.

10 Static reducer Special Du Mont device screens out nuisance waves which often cause picture roll-over and distortion in lesser sets.

12 Extra-size parts Electrical and mechanical parts are larger than ordinary engineering standards demand . . . a factor in Du Mont dependability.

13 Non-shrinking picture The picture on the screen does not waver or change size because of fluctuations in electric power. (In Plus-powered models.)

14 Speed-up dial Saves time in tuning by skipping quickly over the less used portions of the tuning dial.

15 Brilliant picture Du Monts have the extra power that is needed to give a brilliant picture.

16 Cooler-running Actual thermometer test shows Du Mont design runs many degrees cooler—thus lasts longer—than other makes tested.

17 Trouble-free operation Oversize parts, good ventilation, careful assembly rate Du Mont Telesets high with television service men.

18 Front focus control Du Mont provides for convenient adjustment of focus. This helps get the best possible picture from every station.

19 Two-hour shakedown Every Du Mont Teleset gets two-hour test run and realignment for extra assurance of utmost quality.

20 Local Distant switch Allows adjustment for signal strength. Switches from strong or nearby stations to weak or distant stations.

21 Low radiation Many lesser receivers tend to "rebroadcast" signals they are picking up. This makes trouble for other sets in the neighborhood. A Du Mont minimizes this.

22 Black Mask Du Mont uses non-reflecting black mask for greatest eye comfort—not shiny white mask to make screen seem larger.

23 Dust seal Du Mont seals space between picture tube and safety glass to keep dust and dirt from tube face.

24 Dial light Helps you tune in dim light then switches off to prevent distraction.

25 72 ohm lead-in Du Mont engineering permits 72 ohm shielded coaxial cable to reduce collection of local static.

26 Tuning eye Shows you at a glance when the receiver is tuned just right for TV or FM.

27 High fidelity tone Du Mont's special audio circuits and speaker give exceptional tone fidelity, volume and quality.

28 Wide-angle masking The design of the mask allows the full picture to be seen far over to each side.

29 Handsome, hand-rubbed cabinet Sides as well as top and front are made of fine veneers and given a six-coat, hand-rubbed finish for fine furniture quality.

30 Extra distance Du Mont extra sensitivity and static resistance gives good operation far beyond normal range, exceptional operation up close.

The Westwood by Du Mont
19" Life-Size picture tube for superb television reception—built-in FM radio—phono-jack for your own record player—elegant cabinet with doors, built of fine, hand-rubbed, heavy mahogany veneers—a distinguished piece of furniture and a truly great television receiver. $545.00
plus tax & installation

The Fairfield by Du Mont
19" Life-Size picture tube—same chassis and features as Westwood. In handsome contemporary cabinet—designed to endure—built to give long trouble-free service—subjected, like all Du Mont Telesets, to the most rigid inspection of the entire television industry. $495.00 plus tax & installation

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

U. S. Stability Is British Hope

Geoffrey Crowther, mature 43-year-old editor of the London Economist, is in the United States and, as Americans invariably beg Englishmen to do, is making speeches. His theme: Great Britain and the rest of the world depend on this country, not so much for economic largesse through the Marshall Plan but for economic stability. The mere thought of an American depression sends shudders through Crowther and the British Isles.

Livingston

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the British Exchequer, says the same thing in a different way. He attributes the recent improvement in Great Britain's trade position to the revival of United States demand for raw materials supplied by sterling-area countries during the last six months.

Devaluation of the pound on September 19 also helped British sales. British goods become cheaper, more attractive, in terms of dollars. Note, in the following table, that although exports in pounds have increased 70 percent since the third quarter, in dollars the rise is only 17 percent:

Date		Pounds	Dollars
1948	Average:	£5,500,000	$22,300,000
1949	First quarter	5,300,000	21,200,000
	Second quarter	3,300,000	13,400,000
	Third quarter	3,700,000	15,100,000
	Fourth quarter	6,700,000	18,700,000
1950	January	6,900,000	19,200,000
	February	6,300,000	17,700,000

The sterling area ran a 40-million-dollar surplus in its balance of payments in the first quarter of this year, as compared with deficits of 330 million dollars in the first quarter of last year, 632 million dollars in the second quarter, and 359 million dollars in the third quarter. Dollar reserves have shot up from a low of 1425 million dollars at the end of September to 1984 million dollars. That's close to Cripps' "two-billion-dollar minimum."

Flowback of Dollars

American purchases alone are not resposible for the improvement. The British have curtailed imports from the dollar area by about 25 percent. And the decision to devalue generated a windfall demand for sterling. Businessmen who had held off purchases of British and British Commonwealth goods released orders. At the same time, dollars held outside Britain, as protection against devaluation, flowed back.

From now on, without benefit of windfalls, Great Britain and the sterling area must build up exports and cut down imports so that by 1952, without being able to count on Marshall aid, the British Commonwealth will be self-supporting.

The British auto show in New York lent a Hollywood touch to Britain's export drive. But in the final analysis, what will count is not the sale of 50,000 or so automobiles a year (which might net 50 million dollars), but shipments of rubber, jute, cocoa, tin, and miscellaneous raw materials which run into many hundreds of million dollars yearly.

Upturn in Machinery

American consumption of those depends on high production, employment, and distribution here—and, in the case of rubber, on how much synthetic production we go in for as part of the national defense program. (Incidentally, while the British are at it, why don't they try to rebuild the market for the once well-known and still delightful Pear's soap?)

At the moment, the outlook for continued good business is bright. Machinery orders and production have been rising rapidly (see chart)—an indication that business is spending money freely on plant rehabilitation and improvement—notwithstanding estimates by the SEC and the Department of Commerce of lower plant expenditures late this year. Bearing on this, Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric, pointed out to shareholders at the annual stockholders' meeting that orders for heavy equipment were nearly 25 percent in excess of the first quarter last year.

Labor Troubles Anew

But there's always a negative. Right now, it's labor-management troubles. The Chrysler dispute has dragged on far longer than expected. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Enginemen and Firemen has rejected the Presidential Fact-Finding Board's report which recommended against an extra fireman on multiple unit diesels. And next month, the United Auto Workers will have to make a decision on General Motors. Presumably, the UAW will settle with Chrysler before taking on G. M.

The remarkable fact about the first quarter is that business has been so strong with Chrysler down. But if G. M. is struck, the economic consequences would be more ramified. G. M. makes about twice as many autos as Chrysler and supplies parts to other auto companies.

A big rail strike could hardly be permitted to last long. True, the strike has been directed at only four roads—the New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. So, it can't be called national in scope. Apparently, D. B. Robertson, president of the Enginemen, has learned his lesson on that. But the strategy—the lines selected—is national in result.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, April 22 (AP). (USDA)—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts, 500; total, 3000 (estimated). Compared with a week ago: Barrows and gilts around 75 higher; sows mostly 50 higher. The closing top at 17.00 was paid for choice 210-230 lbs. weights. Closing prices for the various weights were: Good and choice 190-260 lbs. at 16.75@17.00; 270-300 lbs. at 16.40@16.75; 310-360 lbs., 15.75@16.40. A few 160-180 lbs. lights brought 15.50@16.75. Sows under 450 lbs. closed at 14.65@15.50, heavier weights down to around 13.00.

SALABLE CATTLE—Receipts, 200 (estimated); total not given. Compared with a week ago: Slaughter steers declined on the week's initial session but advanced sharply later and closed 50 to 1.00 higher; heifers about 50 higher; cows fully 50 higher; bulls 50 to 1.00 lower; vealers strong to 1.00 higher; stockers and feeders steady; package choice to prime, 1160-lb. fed steers, 34.00; 10 loads choice 1125-1375 lbs. steers, 30.50@32.75; load mixed good and choice 1127-lb. weights late 30.50; closing bulk low-medium to high-good fed steers and yearlings, 23.75@29.75; load choice 1031-lb. fed heifers, 30.00; bulk medium and good heifers, 23.75@27.50; good cows closed at 20.00@22.00, late bulk common and medium beef cows 17.50@19.50; canners and cutters, 14.00@17.00; late sales medium and good sausage bulls 20.50@22.25; few heavy fat beef bulls on the close, 20.00; medium to choice vealers, 26.00@30.00; cull and common, 18.00@25.00; good yearling stock steers sold up to 26.50, most medium and good stockers and feeding steers, 23.75@25.75; load common light Canadian stockers, 21.00.

SALABLE SHEEP—Receipts, 100 (estimated); total not given. Compared with a week ago: Good and choice slaughter lambs fully 1.00 higher, instances 1.25-1.50 higher on shorn lambs; closing trade active at advance sparked in large part by sharp supply reduction at leading market centers; slaughter ewes, however, 50 to 1.00 lower, reflecting dull, lower trade in mutton; increased proportion shorn lambs in crop; good and choice Western and corn belt fed handy wooled lambs topped at 27.50; 100-104 lbs. No. 1 skin shorn lambs, 26.00; sizable 114-124 lbs. wooled lambs early 24.00@25.00, with heavy clippers 23.00@24.25, but 114-lb. woolskins sold later at 26.00, when 113-lb. shorn lambs made 25.00; practical outside good wooled slaughter ewes late 13.00, only odd selects 14.00 to shippers; choice 131-lb. shorn ewes, 13.00; most 175-200 lbs. ewes, 10.00@11.00; culls and common, 8.50@9.50, with shorn and wooled bucks 8.00@8.50 respectively.

New York Cotton

New York, April 22 (AP).—Cotton futures experienced heavy trading today. Closing prices were off 30 to 65 cents a bale and at the lowest levels for the session.

Participation in the market was general. Heavy selling came into new crop deliveries and traders ascribed the movement to profit taking. In view of the sharp advances in the week, some traders said, the Saturday selloff was a technical correction.

There also was a large amount of liquidation of nearby May contracts as a result of increasing supply of cotton in certificated stocks.

The range follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Last.
May	32.71	32.71	32.60	32.60	—12

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—The great, big, beautiful boom in soybeans roared on today, all contracts of the elusive bean setting new seasonal peaks in active dealings.

Soybeans set the pace for the market, but other grains joined in the general bullish celebration.

May soybeans sold at 2.85¼ and closed only a fraction under that level. Its price was the highest for any soybean future since July, 1948, when the July contract brought more than $4.00.

Wheat closed 1⅜ to 1⅝ higher, corn unchanged to ¾ higher; oats unchanged to ½ higher, rye 1 to 1⅝ higher, soybeans 2¾ to 5¼ higher, and lard 10 to 15 cents a hundred pounds higher.

D. C. Building Permits Soar 57% in Period

By S. Oliver Goodman

Dollar volume of Washington building permits soared 57 percent in the first quarter this year, Dun & Bradstreet reported.

The first three months' total here was $15,261,837, compared with $9,644,108 in the same 1949 period.

The research agency noted that aggregate valuation of permits for 215 cities touched a record high of $1,127,014,393 for the first quarter, a gain of 42 percent over the corresponding period last year.

Washington ranked thirteenth among the 25 leading cities. Here are the figures.

	Three Months 1950	1949
New York	$157,568,460	$154,048,159

St. Louis	10,543,907	5,942,612
Memphis	9,074,121	5,869,441

Meanwhile, permits in the 215 cities climbed to $448,893,654 in March, second highest month on record, Dun & Bradstreet added. Only in April, 1929, has this total been exceeded.

The March figure represented a gain of 30.8 percent over the preceding month and a rise of 37.8 percent over the total of $325,790,104 for March, 1949.

Sharpest gains over the like month a year ago, by regions, included 77.8 percent in the South Atlantic District and 67.4 percent in the South Central States.

RETIREMENT: Bond Geddes will retire August 1 as executive vice president of the Radio Manufacturers Association, after nearly 23 years service. The group, with headquarters at 1317 F st. nw., said that Geddes' successor will be named at the RMA convention in June when organization plans will be submitted. Geddes, 68, asked to be retired last winter. Prior to his RMA service, he was manager of the United Press bureau in Washington and also served at one time as chief of the Associated Press' Capitol staff.

CREDIT PARLEY: A large delegation from Washington will attend the annual meeting of Chesapeake Chapter, Robert Morris Associates, in Baltimore on May 9. New officers and a board of governors will be elected. Guest speaker will be Charles W. Williams, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

SERVICE AWARDS: Jeweled emblems and engraved certificates have been presented 15 Washington employes for 10 to 25 years' service to Gulf Oil Corp. In conferring the honors, General Manager R. E. Garrett revealed that more than 45 percent of all the organization's employes have served 10 or more years. Those honored from the Washington area were:

25-year group: G. H. Dingler; 20 years: N. C. Boteler, C. R. Landis and A. P. Woods; 15 years: G. L. Geisbert and C. G. Butler; 10 years: T. A. Desmone, C. C. Fortenberry, R. P. Gallegher, C. M. Herbert, O. M. Melton, J. D. Smith, T. S. Speake, T. S Thompson and G. W. Wright.

ODD LOTS: Air conditioned railroad cars will be 20 years of age on April 23, as it was on that day in 1930 that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad put into service the first air conditioned railroad car in the world . . . New, lightweight, streamlined sleeping cars, offering roomettes and double bedrooms, will be placed in service by the Southern Railway System between Atlanta and New York on Trains Nos. 40 and 29—The New Yorker and The Peach Queen—on May 1 and 2, it was announced yesterday.

Stock Trading Hits 10-Year Activity Peak

New York, April 22 (AP).—The stock market this week did the biggest business in 10 years.

More than 15 million shares of

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	391	575
Declines	299	324
Unchanged	247	240
Total issues	937	1139

stock changed hands in the exchange, a total not matched since May 1940.

Trading activity centered on radio-television issues and a group of low-priced and speculative shares. Blue-chip stocks were not ignored but only a few attracted a large following.

The most active stocks during the week advanced, some sharply. The main body of stocks stirred up a good deal of trading dust but failed to get very far one way or the other.

The situation in steel alone was enough to carry a heavy load of optimism. Steel output this week was scheduled at 100 percent of theoretical capacity, a record high in terms of tonnage.

In Saturday's 2-hour session the market made a brief try for higher prices and then thought better of it. In the last few minutes of trading the TV got caught in a selling gust and lost fractions to nearly a point. Changes elsewhere were limited mainly to fractions with fractions showing a comfortable edge over losses.

Trading was heavy. Volume reached 1,250,000 shares but at that failed to match last Saturday's 1,430,000 shares.

Armour & Co was the most active stock for the 2 hours, moving up 1¼ to 10⅝. On the fact side, the company reported a sharp increase in production of ACTH, one of the newest of the miracle drugs.

GM Pays $6,035,249 Bonus to 61 Officers

New York, April 22 (AP).—General Motors Corp. is paying 61 officers or directors 1949 bonus awards totaling $6,035,248 in cash plus 24,338 shares of the company's common stock, it was disclosed today.

Top remuneration for 1949, including salary, director fees and bonus, is $586,100 for Charles E. Wilson, president. The bonus is payable in five annual installments. At present Federal income tax rates he would retain only a little more than $150,000 of this.

Wilson, head of the giant automotive concern, started his career some 40 years ago with Westinghouse Electric at 17 cents an hour.

From General Motors last year, he received $201,100 in salary and director fees. His bonus award, $308,021 in cash and 1243 shares of stock, represents an "award value" of $385,000.

On the total, Wilson would pay personal Federal income taxes, at current rates, of some 73 percent.

Bradley Got $511,225

Three executive vice presidents follow Wilson in aggregate remuneration including bonus. They are Albert Bradley, $611,225; Harlow H. Curtice, $496,100, and Marvin E. Coyle, $496,000. The tax rate on these amounts is close to 72 percent.

The figures on bonus awards to individuals were disclosed in the corporation's proxy statement mailed to more than 400,000 stockholders with notice of the annual meeting May 19 at Wilmington, Del.

They reflect the record volume of business done by General Motors last year. The corporation reported net sales of $5,700,000,000 and net income of $656,434,232, and had a record payroll of $1,440,690,450 for its 401,326 employes.

The bonus awards to the group of 61 persons who were directors or officers of the corporation during 1949 were included in a previously announced aggregate of 4204 awards which include $39,739,717 in cash and 163,859 shares of common stock. These are distributed, in general, to employes earning $650 a month or more.

The stock shares provided in the bonus were valued for award purposes at $61.93 a share, which the proxy statement said was the average cost of all unawarded common stock in the special treasury stock account designated for bonus purposes at December 31, 1949.

Of the five equal annual installments by which the bonus is distributed, the first two are one-half stock and one-half cash, the remaining three all cash.

The first installment was distributed March 21, 1950. On that date the closing market price of General Motors common stock was $76.62 a share on the New York Stock Exchange. The shares closed yesterday at $81.62.

Aside from the bonus awards, the group of 61 directors or officers received a total of $3,611,954 in salaries and directors' fees.

Aggregate remuneration for 1949, including bonus awards for some of the other corporation officers—before taxes, were: Vice Presidents Frederic G. Donner, $411,300; Louis C. Goad, $411,100; Ronald K. Evans, $411,000, and Francis L. Burke, $311,000. The total for John J. Schumann, jr., president of the subsidiary General Motors Acceptance Corp. was $227,450.

Dock Strike Chiefs Fail in Bid for Deal

London, April 22 (AP).—Leaders of a wildcat strike by nearly 8000 London dockers tried in vain today for a deal to end the walkout on their own terms.

The stoppage—denounced by the Labor government as Communist-inspired—is against the leadership of the Transport and General Workers Union.

The strikers demand reinstatement of three members expelled by the union for the part they played in a costly unofficial dock strike last summer. An unofficial committee told the TGWU today they would call the strike off if the union would hold a vote of all members on the issue.

Arthur Deakin, TGWU general secretary, received a delegation of strikers in a closed-door conference this afternoon. But he already had told newsmen:

"I am making no response to an unofficial body."

The number of strikers rose about 100 today to 7931. The National Dock Labor Board said 39 vessels, including 11 food ships, were idle at the wharves.

mother found the rat had actually taken the bottle from the baby's hand and had bitten her so severely she had to be rushed to the hospital."

The Housing Association made clear it is not attempting to "prove" that bad housing is the cause of illness. It quoted Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele: "There is not a health official in this country who does not have a wealth of evidence that housing and health are inevitably linked."

The story of sick children in slum areas is being presented, the housing group stated, to show "just how the actual fabric of daily living is affected by housing conditions inimical to good health and early recovery from illness."

In a chapter entitled "The Dark Ages—1950 Style," the survey assailed the fact that yard toilets and hydrants continue to be permitted in the District, "and construction of new yard toilets is still not prohibited."

That loophole in the District code is one of several contained in Commissioner Gordon R. Young's recent housing report urging a stepped-up rehabilitation attack on substandard housing.

The Young report, strongly backed by the Washington Housing Association and private home-building groups, has been awaiting Commissioner John Russell Young's indorsement several weeks.

denied pay after it refused to walk more than half a mile through a muddy field to work on a television tower.

Sympathy walkouts flared yesterday at scattered points across the country.

Weaver said that if talks today with Western Electric representatives are "any real indication of the company's attitude, you can bet your bottom dollar that we will walk out Monday."

And, he added, "we will stay out until we win reasonable concessions or until Hell itself freezes over."

Part of "Struggle"

He said his union considered the Indiana dispute "part of our over-all struggle" with the company, which he accused of "outright welching" and of thinking it is "just too damned good to deal" with his union.

T. E. Shea, Western Electric personnel director, accused Weaver of using the South Bend dispute "as a pretext for calling an illegal strike in total disregard of the public interest."

If the strike occurs, Shea said, it will be "clearly in violation" of the union contract, which he said forbids strikes in such disputes, and calls for their settlement through "orderly grievance procedure."

Until today, negotiators had expected to have at least until Wednesday to iron out issues in the over-all telephone dispute, before any new strike crisis arose.

Chief of the union demands are for a 15-cent hourly pay increase, pension improvements and other benefits.

The Indiana fight kindled sympathy walkouts, of varying scope, at Seattle, Portland, Oreg.; Fargo, N. Dak., and other cities.

Emerging from a negotiation session here in mid-afternoon, a union spokesman said the parties had talked about arbitration of the South Bend dispute, but no decision had been made.

As for the broader wage battle, the talks were reported still deadlocked.

300 WE Workers Here May Walk Out Monday

Included in the 10,000 telephone installers who may walk out on Monday are some 300 such employes of the Western Electric Co. in the District of Columbia and 75 in Virginia.

Meanwhile, contract negotiations between the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. here and some 6000 workers in two other divisions of the CWA union will be continued this weekend.

They involve about 3500 plant, accounting and commercial employes in Division 36 and some 2500 operators and clerks in Division 50. Both these divisions, under a 60-day strike truce ordered by President Truman, are asking a "package" of wage increases and benefits amounting to 15 cents an hour.

The positions of the local company and union officials in the wage issue have remained unchanged during the truce, which ends Monday night.

Divisions 50 and 36 will meet separately at 10 a. m. today with company negotiators, and further meetings are scheduled here for Monday.

Lie Off for Europe On Peace Mission

New York, April 22 (NYHT).—Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, sailed for Europe today as a peace envoy in the cold war, hoping for a "break" in the East-West deadlock that will bring Russia back to the U. N. before the fifth General Assembly convenes in September.

In a farewell statement before the Queen Mary sailed for England, Lie called for a liquidation of the cold war through use of "all the peace-building and conciliating resources available in the U. N."

He said he expected to reach a decision by May 3 or 4, when he will be in Paris to meet with heads of all U. N. specialized agencies, on whether he will visit Moscow.

Tuberculosis Groups Meet This Week

More than 2000 persons are expected to attend a joint convention of the National Tuberculosis Association, the American Trudeau Society and the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries here this week.

The largest of nine conventions scheduled in Washington during the week, it will run from Monday through Friday at the Statler Hotel.

Among numerous seminars, technical sessions, and demonstrations, the three groups will hold a general meeting at 8 p. m. Tuesday when the Trudeau Medal will be awarded. A dance will follow.

The problem of toll roads, Federal and State highway policy will be among the subjects discussed at the third Highway Transportation Congress sponsored by the National Highway Users' Conference Tuesday through Thursday at the Mayflower Hotel.

Albert Bradley, executive vice president of General Motors and chairman of the National Highway Users Conference, will open the general meeting at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday with a speech on "Inventory at the Halfway House."

Dr. George Carruthers, director of Public Affairs and Education for the Columbia Broadcasting System, will be the main speaker at a panel on "Problems of Religious Broadcasting," during a one-day meeting Saturday of the Catholic Broadcasters Association at Catholic University.

The National Academy of Sciences is scheduled to meet Monday through Wednesday at the Academy of Sciences Building, 21st st. and Constitution ave. nw. In other scientific conventions, the American Physical Society will meet Thursday through Saturday, and the American Mathematical Society will meet Friday and Saturday at the Roger Smith Hotel.

Some 100 State registrars and members of the National Office of Vital Statistics of the United States Public Health Service will meet here Monday through Friday.

Among business conventions, about 1000 are expected for the three-day meeting, beginning Monday at the Shoreham Hotel of the Atlantic Coast Independent Distributors Association, and 200 are expected for Saturday's meeting at the Mayflower Hotel of the American Trade Association Executives.

American Capitalism at work...

For 150 years, Alex. Brown & Sons has channelled private funds into productive undertakings

The 150th Anniversary of Alex. Brown & Sons, to be celebrated on April 24th, records a revealing history of American Capitalism at work.

Although public service has been a tradition of the firm since its very inception, nevertheless, as a business institution, its purpose was to seek a profit—profit for the individuals and organizations who invested their funds through Alex. Brown & Sons and profit for the firm.

"Profits" are the reward of service and risk. Therefore, in seeking profits, Alex. Brown & Sons channelled funds into undertakings that were vital to the nation's growth—undertakings that required judgment, enterprise and—in some cases—daring. FOR INSTANCE:

Alex. Brown & Sons assisted in the financing of Baltimore's first water supply in 1808.

A fleet of the firm's clipper ships helped establish Baltimore as an outstanding port.

Alex. Brown & Sons sponsored and financed the first American railroad—the B. & O.

The comprehensive Maryland Bridge program was financed under the leadership of Alex. Brown & Sons.

Thus, throughout the period of America's growth, Alex. Brown & Sons has been engaged in the underwriting of securities issued by industrial, public utility, railroad, financial and municipal enterprises—a continuous process of providing venture capital—building new industries, creating new jobs, producing the goods and services which have made the American standard of living the highest ever achieved in the world's history!

American Capitalism works—and will continue to work—through such firms as Alex. Brown & Sons!

AN INVITATION FOR MONDAY, APRIL 24TH

On the date of our 150th Anniversary we shall exhibit in our Baltimore office an unusual display of old Baltimore prints, ship models and records of the firm showing the growth of Alex. Brown & Sons with Baltimore in the past 150 years. You are invited to visit our offices and inspect the display on Monday, April 24th, 10 A. M. to 4 P. M.

Man Behind the Man Who Is Accusing Lattimore

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

ONE MAN'S campaign—rejected and languishing—obtains a new lease on life and gets front page play in the Nation's newspapers for six weeks running.

One man's accusations—thrown out three years ago by a jury of experts as irresponsible and not to be proved—becomes a central political issue in a national election campaign.

One man's views on foreign policy in the Far East—utterly at variance with those of four successive Secretaries of State—becomes the canon of orthodoxy for a large segment of a major political party.

One man—a private citizen, relatively obscure, and by his own admission without pretensions to being a scholar or (until recently) a statesman—finds Senators fighting his battles and a prestige-laden Senate subcommittee devoting most of its time for a month or more delving into his imputations, the most grievous political charges one man can make against another.

McCarthy's Key Case

HOW come? How does it happen that Alfred Kohlberg, a successful New York merchant, but by no means an industrial giant or tycoon, could build up his charges to make them form almost the entirety of Senator McCarthy's key case against Owen Lattimore?

Except for the testimony last Thursday of former Communist Louis F. Budenz, alleging that Lattimore was a Communist, the evidence presented by McCarthy was almost fully laid out years earlier by Kohlberg.

How did Kohlberg push his other charges, similarly rejected by the authorities in the field concerned, until they came to constitute a large part of the rest of McCarthy's case? How did the whole come to win the support of the dominant Taft-Bridges-Wherry wing of the Republican Party?

Political historians of the future may provide the answers. For the present, though, the most that can be done is to recount some of the facts.

IT IS well known that, with the exception of Budenz's evidence just put on the record, Kohlberg provided McCarthy with the material for the case on which the Wisconsin Republican says he will "stand or fall."

Less well known is that that material is, almost in toto, old stuff, dating from 1944-1947. And almost entirely overlooked is the fact that the Kohlberg material has been thoroughly investigated and found wanting in proof.

The body that investigated and discredited those charges comprised more than 1200 of the 1600 members of America's most esteemed and scholarly research organizations on Far Eastern affairs, the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

They voted, 1163 to 66, that Kohlberg was talking through his hat. The precise words were that his charges were "inaccurate and irresponsible."

The investigators were singularly authoritative. The IPR membership is in itself a roster of most of the outstanding Americans with the greatest knowledge and direct concern in Far Eastern matters. They are university scholars, editors, writers, merchants, attorneys, industrialists and bankers with immediate interest and operations in the Orient.

Other Cases Covered

A LOOK AT the documentation in the long fight of Kohlberg with the IPR shows that it covered almost the identical ground that McCarthy is now replowing.

It included not merely the key case of Lattimore, but also almost all the information that McCarthy and his group have used to attack Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup.

Furthermore, in his fight in the IPR, through circular letters, pamphlets and articles in magazines and papers, Kohlberg presented most of the data McCarthy has since used to attack State Department official John S. Service.

Finally, there are indications that McCarthy's attack against a fourth man on his list, State Department officer Haldore E. Hansen, also came originally from Kohlberg material.

In the light of all this, it becomes worth while to inquire into the activities of Kohlberg and to look into the history and origin of the charges which, warmed over but unchanged in any essential, have become a new "Topic A" in American conversation.

Who is Kohlberg and why did he undertake a burning crusade into which he has poured enormous energy and substantial sums of money? And what is he doing now?

Alfred Kohlberg, short, bald and energetic, is a prosperous importer, much traveled in China. He deals in handkerchiefs, linens and gloves. For many years he has conducted a large business—by his own figures, it grossed $1,500,000 a year—of farming out handkerchiefs and the like to cottage or home industry workers in China to be embroidered.

In his travels, he has been a guest of Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

As early as 1943, he took up his cudgel against the IPR, of which he was a member. The fight became most intense in about 1945 and 1946, and reached its climax in April, 1947, when his charges were overwhelmingly rejected.

His complaint was that the IPR, through the publications of its international body and those of its American Council, was aiding and abetting the Communists in China, and undercutting Chiang and his Nationalist government. He held that the IPR staff was heavily weighted with Communist writers, that they became dominant and that they used the IPR to peddle the party line.

Budenz now says the same thing.

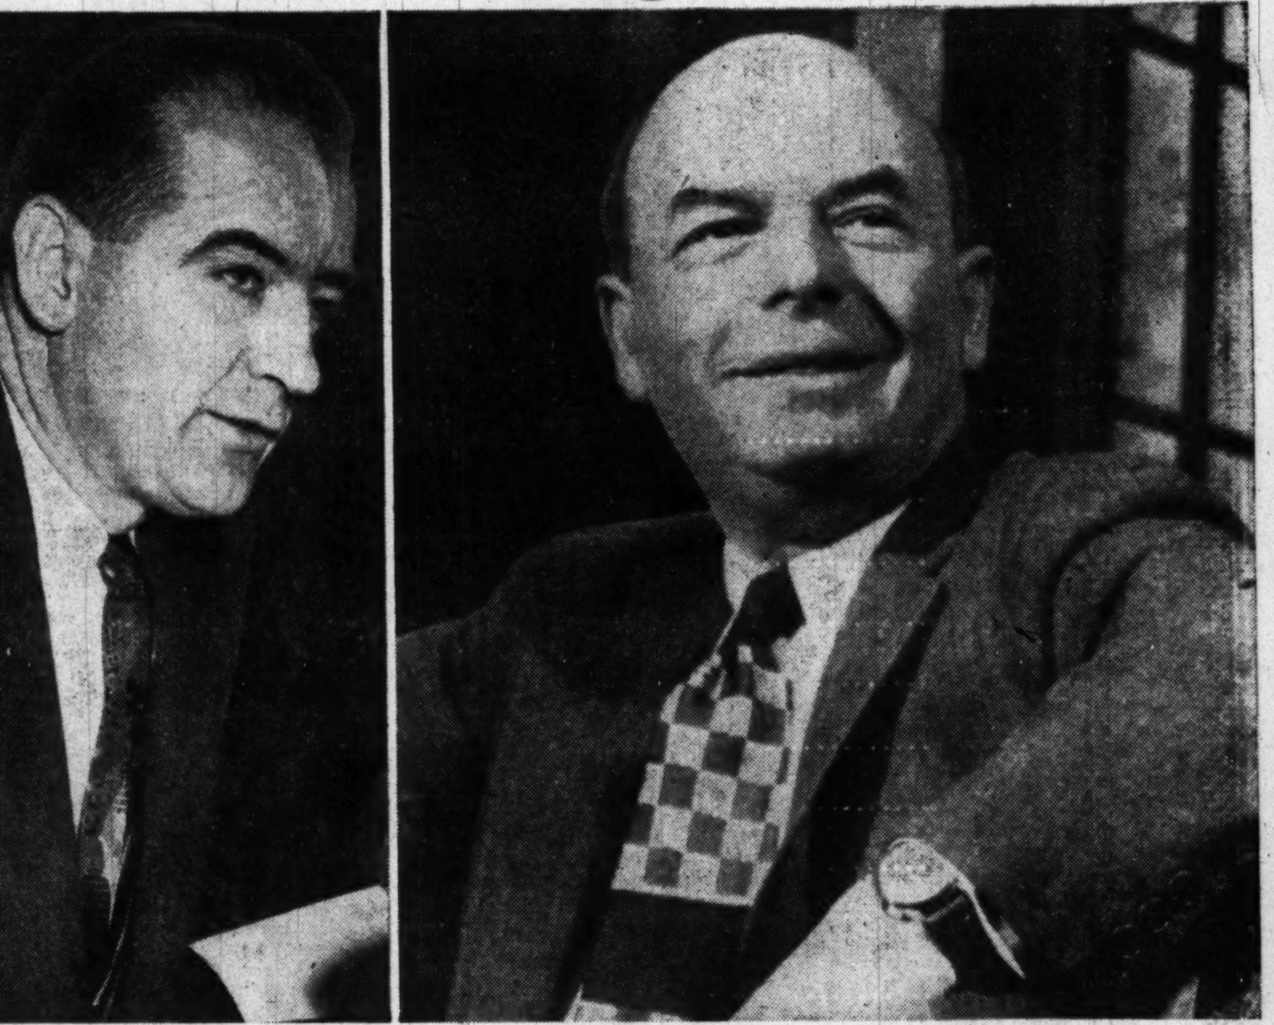
Kohlberg fought this campaign ever harder, and is still fighting it.

Magazine Was Weapon

HE PUT OUT circular letters in enormous volume. He wrote extensively for the magazine China Monthly. He appears to have played a substantial part in organizing and supporting different Chinese research and study and publicity groups in this country.

He founded, in October, 1946, the magazine Plain Talk. It was primarily dedicated to an attack on Communism in all its forms, but a heavy load of its articles was devoted to China policy.

It served, in fact, as Kohlberg's principal vehicle for his running fight in behalf of the Nationalist government and in bitter denunciation of the State Department position on China.



Left, Senator McCarthy. Right, Alfred Kohlberg, whose case has become the Senator's case

He fought the IPR through his articles, his magazine, his letters. Finally, he went to court, engaged in a proxy battle and prepared a monumental document to support his accusations.

When he lost his fight in the IPR, he founded a rival organization of his own, the American China Policy Association.

By general report, right or wrong, he became a leading figure of the so-called China Lobby. He had close association with prominent Nationalist figures in this country. Energetically, he brought his case to many members of Congress.

His pamphlets began to be circulated by William J. Goodwin, until a few days ago the registered lobbyist for the Chinese Nationalists, and himself a man with unsavory past connections, especially with the Christian Front and pro-German movements.

Kohlberg donated $1000 on one occasion to the campaign of Senator Bridges (R., N. H.). Bridges has been one of the loudest congressional drum-beaters in the cause of Chiang Kai-shek.

In 1949, Bridges distributed from his office a report on China prepared at his request by Kohlberg.

Other members of Congress seem to have made a habit of inserting various Kohlberg articles into the Congressional Record. Some, in speeches on the floor, made ad-

Carolina 'War' Will Test Air Supply

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

SOME answers to vital questions affecting American defense plans are expected from large-scale military operations opening in the Carolinas this week.

A promising new concept of waging war will be tested by 60,000 men, 700 warplanes and some of the best brains of the Nation's armed forces. They hope to determine whether or not invasion by air is practical within the reasonable future.

During World War II and after, there were a number of airborne operations. Parachutists, gliders and transports dropped into Crete, Stalingrad, Normandy and Holland, and carried supplies over "the Hump" to China. The great city of Berlin was kept going by air for nearly a year. But the war's major invasion hops—across the English Channel, into the Philippines, Okinawa, North Africa, Italy, the Pacific islands—all were amphibious.

The airborne attacks and aerial supply were limited operations. Usually they were only "plugging a gap," trying to relieve a desperate situation temporarily, and were not planned "that way." The tactical "drops" counted on linking up quickly with a forward advance of ground troops, and the strategic aerial supply efforts, like Berlin, involved little or no enemy interference.

Operation "Swarmer"—the highly important joint maneuver now getting under way—carries airborne operations another long step forward. Top defense chiefs hope to learn from it whether some current theories about invasion by air are feasible.

HOW VITAL are those issues to future military spending and the "balance" of forces between the Army, Navy and Air Force in years to come is clear from some of the testimony in last fall's congressional row over military policy.

Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said he believed the A-bomb ruled out future large-scale amphibious operations. Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, answering Marine Corps charges that the Army sought to take over the Marines' amphibious warfare role, declared the Army wasn't interested—that it was more concerned with developing airborne invasion techniques.

Navy chiefs replied that the hard facts of the volume of transport required for mass movement of troops and supplies overseas in another war strictly limits aerial supply. Modified amphibious operations still will be necessary, they declared.

This, then, is the backdrop to the joint Army-Air Force exercise set for this week and next. An entire Army corps—two divisions with supporting troops—will be dropped or flown into the Camp Mackall-Fort Bragg section of North Carolina and will attempt to carry on full-scale military operations entirely supplied by air.

Reminiscent Tactics

IT IS ASSUMED that that old "enemy" of the United States, "Aggressor"—after conquering footholds in the Caribbean during "Operation Portrex"—has landed on the North Carolina coast and occupied much of the Carolinas. The enemy—whose tactics strangely resemble those of an ally of this Nation in the last war—is mounting an attack toward Norfolk and Washington.

Rather than a frontal assault, we attack by air, dropping paratroopers on abandoned airfields at Camp Mackall. From this "airhead," we try to expand, capture Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force Base, and cut the enemy forces to pieces while supplied solely by an airlift of the Berlin scope.

The American airborne troops engage with Aggressor's forces (specially trained opposition soldiers in foreign-looking uniforms), and enemy fighter planes and bombers constantly attack our airhead, transport planes, troop concentrations and supply centers. A sizable corps of trained umpires passes on the results.

Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, who was pulled off his job as Deputy Chief of Air Force Staff to take charge of the maneuver (an unusual procedure which illustrates the importance attached to it), has promised that the exercise will be a realistic test.

The round-the-clock flow of troops, food, ammunition, gas and other supplies has to keep coming in, or the whole operation will fail. If enemy planes "shoot down" the transports, "bomb" the landing strips until they are unusable or otherwise stop the flow, the whole airborne concept will suffer a setback. Navy and Marine observers will be on hand, along with the press and umpires, to judge the results.

Here are the major questions on which the Joint Chiefs of Staff hope to get some authoritative data:

1. Can ground troops invading by air be supplied entirely from the skies, to the extent necessary to enable them to engage in combat and expand their airhead, while their aerial supply line is under enemy

This training drop by infantrymen of the Eighty-second Airborne Division will be repeated over Camp Mackall this week when American forces attempt to establish an "airhead" there to drive "Aggressor" invaders out of the Carolinas. Once landed, our paratroops will be supplied entirely by air

Voters' Pulse Beats Haunting Rhythm

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

WHAT great message did pulse-taking legislators bring back to Congress from the American voter?

For nearly two weeks Washington waited breathlessly to find out.

At every crossroad and hamlet, vacationing House members dutifully performed the annual mid-term political rite.

Hands of voters weren't the only thing pumped during that purposeful Easter recess.

From Maine to California, Congressmen were taking a census of their own. Over chess or checkers in the country store, over a bourbon in plush drawing rooms, over the counter in every local place of business, legislators were all ears for a fortnight.

What was the voice of the people saying now? What groundswells of public opinion had rolled up by mid-term to make or shake the course of legislation? How, oh, how, would they vote in November?

Last week they returned to Washington with about as many answers as a census taker with the gout.

In fact, when some members pooled their pulse-taking notes in the lobbies, they found they came back with the same conclusions they went home with.

Republicans confirmed a GOP trend setting in. Democrats convinced themselves the 1948 Democratic swing hadn't changed.

But what was the voters' awe-inspiring spring message to Congress?

Why, it boiled down to what they expected.

The voice from the voters:

"Cut spending, cut taxes, but don't cut anything down here!"

An Inch at a Time

THAT cryptic mandate has unplumbed legislative difficulties.

In large part, the Easter recess was designed to get clearer instructions.

Republican leaders had refused flatly to spell out their spending cut figure until they learned by direct contact what the people wanted. All voting on the omnibus appropriation bill had been held up for pretty much the same reason. Even the House Ways and Means Committee had postponed all decisions on the tax bill until after the Easter home poll.

When the echo came back from the home folks, Congress last week reluctantly started to apply the contradictory formula, with fingers crossed on the result.

To the omnibus money bill, Republicans offered hit and miss economy motions, still refused to specify the over-all amount they hope to cut the budget.

Similarly, the Ways and Means Committee started voting on "item by item" reductions in excise taxes, without any foreknowledge what the total cut would be.

Privately, what disturbed thinking members as much as the voice from the voters was the galloping deficit. Whether five, six or seven billion dollars in 1951, depending on who did the estimating, any sharp cut in excises, without offsetting revenues, would zoom the deficit still more.

A No. 1 rule in politics is that the people when informed are always right. Puzzled legislators are now wondering if the people have all of the facts.

Whatever comes out of the tax muddle will be lost motion unless new taxes balance tax cuts. President Truman has privately served notice in advance that he will veto anything short of an offset.

Big Vote on Tap

INDECISION in Congress as to just what the voters want, despite ears badly cauliflowered from listening on the home grounds, was emphasized by one curious development.

In some States, notably Indiana, voter registrations shot sharply upward in both parties without any apparent cause.

In Indiana's heavily populated Marion County, for example, registrations are nearly 50 percent higher than in 1948.

Hoosier politicians are baffled by the phenomenon, frankly confess they don't know what it means.

Some observers tried sampling the long registration queues, came out with the bland conclusion that the registrants want to vote.

For what?

Certainly Congress isn't sure.

Multisyllable Attack

FLORIDA'S slapstick political campaign, playing on popular ignorance of perfectly good big words, may be topped by another rough and tumble match in North Carolina.

Senator Claude Pepper's political opposition whispered around the State among other things that Pepper was a "celibate" before he was married. In other words, Pepper was single before he was wed.

Friends of Senator Frank P. Graham say this sort of nonsense doesn't hold a candle to the campaign being waged against him in North Carolina.

There, Tarheel opponents are whispering that Dr. Graham encouraged "matriculation" at the University of North Carolina while he was president of that institution.

Webster says, of course, that matriculate means "to enroll; to enter in a register . . .

Greater Security—for Millions More—by Jan. 1

By John J. Corson
Post Reporter

COME next January 1, the American people are going to get more Social Security. For two years Congress has been considering ways of broadening our Social Security system. And before its members scatter to fight for reelection, they are expected to enact vast improvements in Social Security.

Unemployment is increasing, but there are still plenty of jobs. Why more Social Security?

First and foremost, the informed Congressman would tell you, because America is getting older. Dr. Townsend knew the facts of life 15 years ago when he started his crusade for the aged. In 1900, only four of every 100 Americans were 65 or over; today, eight of every 100 are old.

And there's no use telling Americans they can live in old age, when they can no longer work, on their savings, on relief or on the much-talked-of union pensions. More than 37 percent of all American families have no savings, Federal Reserve Board studies show. Relief—and three million older Americans have nothing else today—is a distressingly unsatisfactory end of the road, most of us agree. Industrial pensions still cover less than 10 percent of all workers.

Secondly, it isn't only when we're old that we're insecure. Even in these good times, almost five million are unemployed. A Census survey last year showed that between two and three million persons, not old, are totally and permanently disabled at any time. Each week breeds a new crop of widows and orphans whose source of support has died.

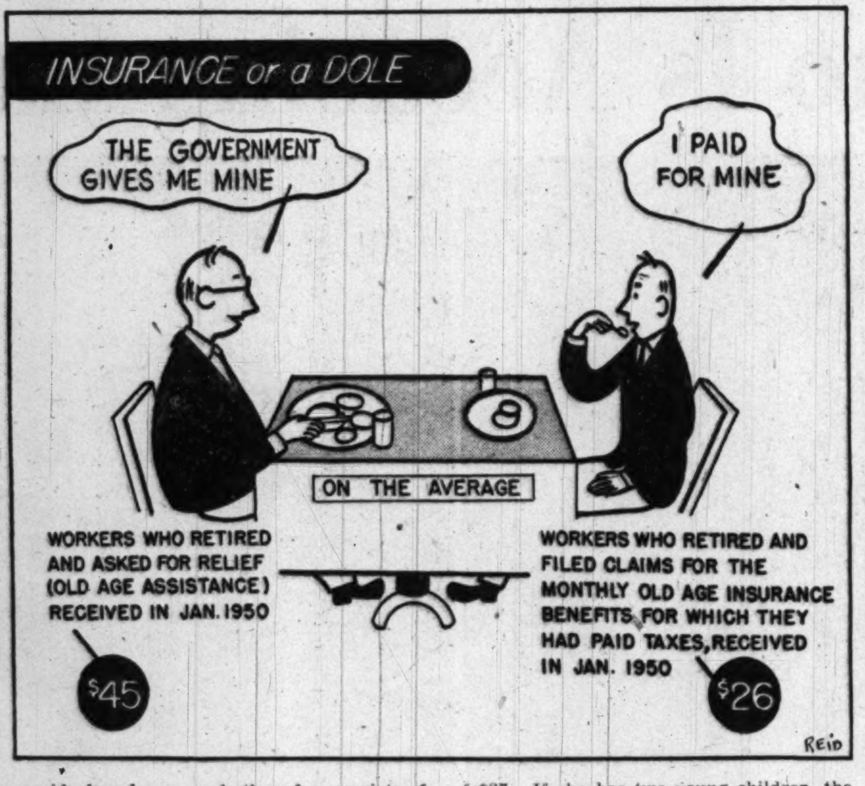
To meet the needs of the ever-growing number of oldsters and the needs of the unemployed, the disabled, the widowed and the orphaned, that's why Congress will provide more Social Security.

28 Million 'Outside'

AT LEAST 28 million persons who work are not now covered by Federal old age and survivors insurance. Come next January 1, if the Congress does as may be expected, about five million domestics, Government workers and self-employed persons will start paying taxes on their earnings, as others have done since January 1, 1937. They will commence building up credit toward retirement benefits when they can no longer work, or benefits for their widows and orphans if they should die.

When the Social Security Act was enacted in 1935, it covered (and still does) only employes in industry and commerce. Congress started off on a small scale; it wasn't sure how this vast and untried system would work. It covered only those who were easily reached, those workers on the payrolls of shops, stores, plants and factories.

It didn't include farmers, farm workers, maids, laundresses and others for a variety of reasons. First, it thought that the job of collecting their taxes and keeping track of their wages would be too difficult, at least at the start.



After January 1, we can look forward to bigger insurance benefits. Present benefits average about $26 a month. This won't support an oldster. Prices have soared since these benefit amounts were fixed back in 1939.

Congress will likely raise these monthly insurance benefits about 70 percent on the average. The retired worker who earned let us say, $150 a month when he worked, now receives a monthly benefit of $36. Next January, his insurance benefit will likely be $56.

Even that won't buy luxuries. But if he has a wife who is also over 65, she will be entitled to a monthly insurance payment of $30. Together they will receive $90.

Security for Disabled

WIDOWS and orphans, too, will receive larger benefits. A widow whose husband earned, on the average, $150 a month for 20 years, now receives a monthly benefit of $27. If she has two young children, the family's benefits will total $54 until her children reach 18. When she is old (and her children have grown), she will be paid $45 a month under the new law.

Congress, too, will probably recognize the "forgotten men of Social Security"—the permanently disabled. Many men and women "wear out" before their sixty-fifth birthday. At present they receive no Social Security benefits unless they ask for relief. Indeed, their old age insurance payments, which they will receive if they live to reach 65, are reduced in proportion to the time they do not work while disabled.

For these unfortunates—those who are totally and permanently disabled—the new Social Security Act will probably provide benefits of about the same amounts payable to the aged. Congress may provide benefits only for those disabled who are already 55 years old, and may not provide benefits for the wives and children of disabled workers. The benefits will be kept small to discourage malingering, but the odds are that Congress will expand the present insurance system to include benefits for all insured workers who become totally and permanently disabled.

All this will cost money. In the long run, these benefits will require a payroll tax of at least 3¼ percent paid by the employe and a like amount paid by the employer. Today, employers and employes each pay 1½ percent of wages. The tax rate is scheduled to go up gradually over the next 20 years.

If pensions are to be larger in the future, or if additional benefits are to be paid, the costs will be still higher. When we have 20 million aged rather than 11 million as now, these Social Security benefits may cost 10 percent or more of payrolls. Where then will the money come from?

Most men and women between 65 and 70 would rather continue working than retire. Indeed, the great majority of those who retire do so because their employers insist or because of ill health. When they retire they are a burden rather than self-supporting. And the product they would turn out if allowed to work is lost.

Dr. Sumner Slichter, Lamont professor of economics at Harvard University, warned Congress that as a Nation we can't afford the luxury of retiring all at 65. He suggests that employers be encouraged to keep their workers on, and that workers be paid larger benefits if they work to 70 rather than quitting at 65.

To raise the usual retirement age from 65 to 70 would probably increase by at least a million the number of persons between 65 and 70 years of age who are at work. "These persons," Slichter points out, "would add nearly one sixtieth to the national product—in other words, they would increase it by almost 4 billion dollars a year. The whole community would benefit from this additional output of goods."

Congress' major accomplishment—and a principal objective—will be to substitute self-respecting insurance benefits for relief. Most aged who are not working today are receiving public relief, or old age assistance as it is called. In Louisiana, eight of every ten persons over 65 are now receiving public relief.

Labor leaders, economists and businessmen have urged Congress to make our Social Security system something better than a dole for the aged. Today, an older worker receives more to live on if he pleads poverty and receives old age assistance than if he has paid payroll taxes for a decade and is entitled to old age insurance.

What to Expect

THE congressional answer to their pleas will soon be announced. But the prospects are already clear.

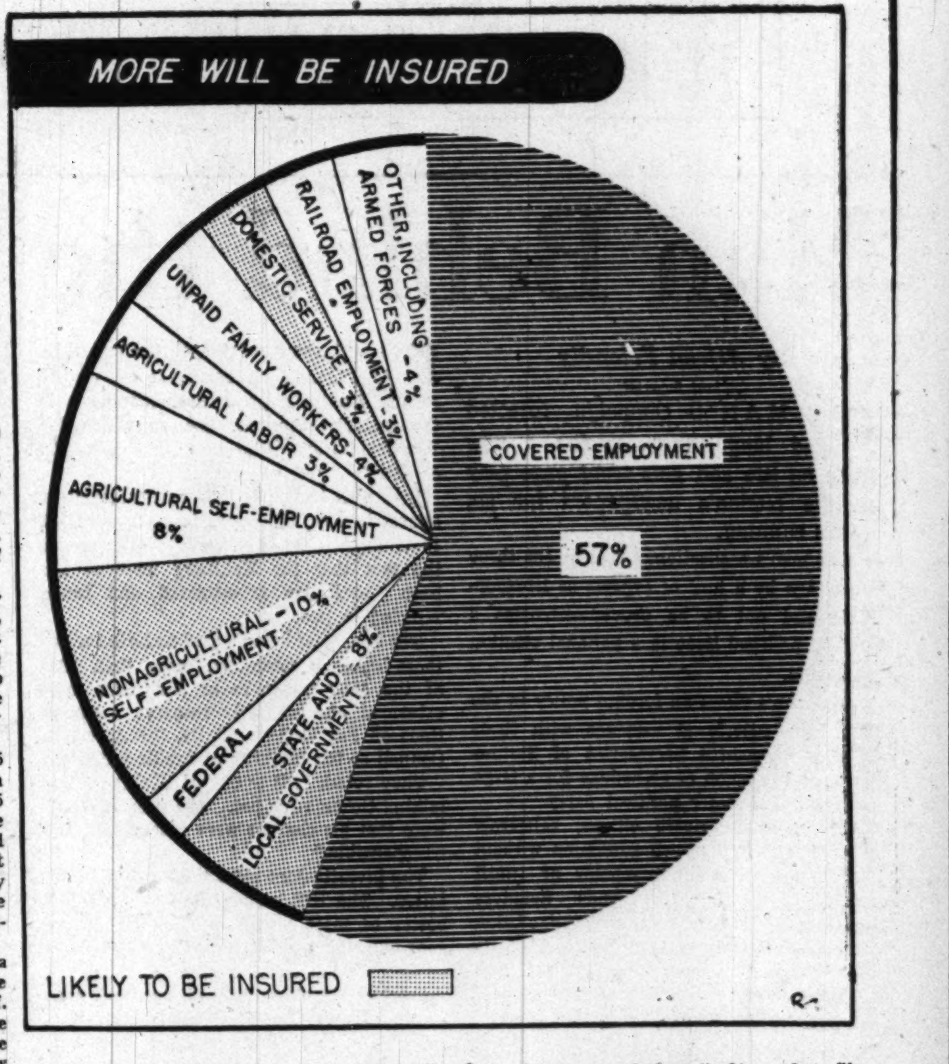
(1) Congress will "insure" millions of domestics, self-employed and others who have not previously been able to contribute to their own security.

(2) Congress will vote larger benefits for all.

(3) It will offer security for the disabled.

(4) It may encourage older workers to continue on their jobs.

(5) And it will try, by thus expanding the Federal insurance system, to substitute insurance benefits for relief.



Congress is expected to broaden old age and survivors insurance to include some maids, cooks, laundresses and yardmen not now covered, some employes of State and local governments and a larger number of "self-employed"—that is, commission salesmen, life insurance salesmen and the small businessmen who run their own printing plants, barber shops, shoe shine stands, etc.

ON THE AVERAGE	RECEIVES TODAY UNDER PRESENT LAW	WILL RECEIVE UNDER AMENDED LAW
A RETIRED WORKER	$26	$46
A RETIRED WORKER AND HIS WIFE (If she, too, is 65!)	$39	$69
A WIDOW AND TWO YOUNG CHILDREN	$47	$80

'Swarmer' Will Test Airlift

2. If such an air invasion is practicable, to what degree, if any, will it cut down the need for Navy and Marine Corps amphibious forces and require an expansion of airborne forces and troop transport and cargo aircraft?

3. Are there practicable or other limitations on the invasion forces which can be supported by air? If so, what are they, in the foreseeable future, as far as: (1) distance which can be "hopped"; (2) size of the forces; (3) extent of the objective, ie., narrow aim or all-out assault.

4. Are the numbers and cost of the aircraft required for such operations within reasonable limits for peacetime preparations and wartime production, or would the cost alone rule out large-scale airborne invasion?

A Bucket Brigade?

BESIDES these broad questions, military men are looking for answers to some important practical problems, such as:

What degree of air superiority is necessary for success? Does it approach air supremacy?

What type of air cover is best for protecting the aerial supply line? Can there be a continuous "bucket brigade" or must there be escorted "spurts" of transport planes?

What size and type of planes are best for the job? Should we press ahead for military craft with tracked landing gear capable of landing on short, rough fields, or rely on commercial types? How about detachable cargo pods?

How many landing fields and planes are required to support an airhead of given size?

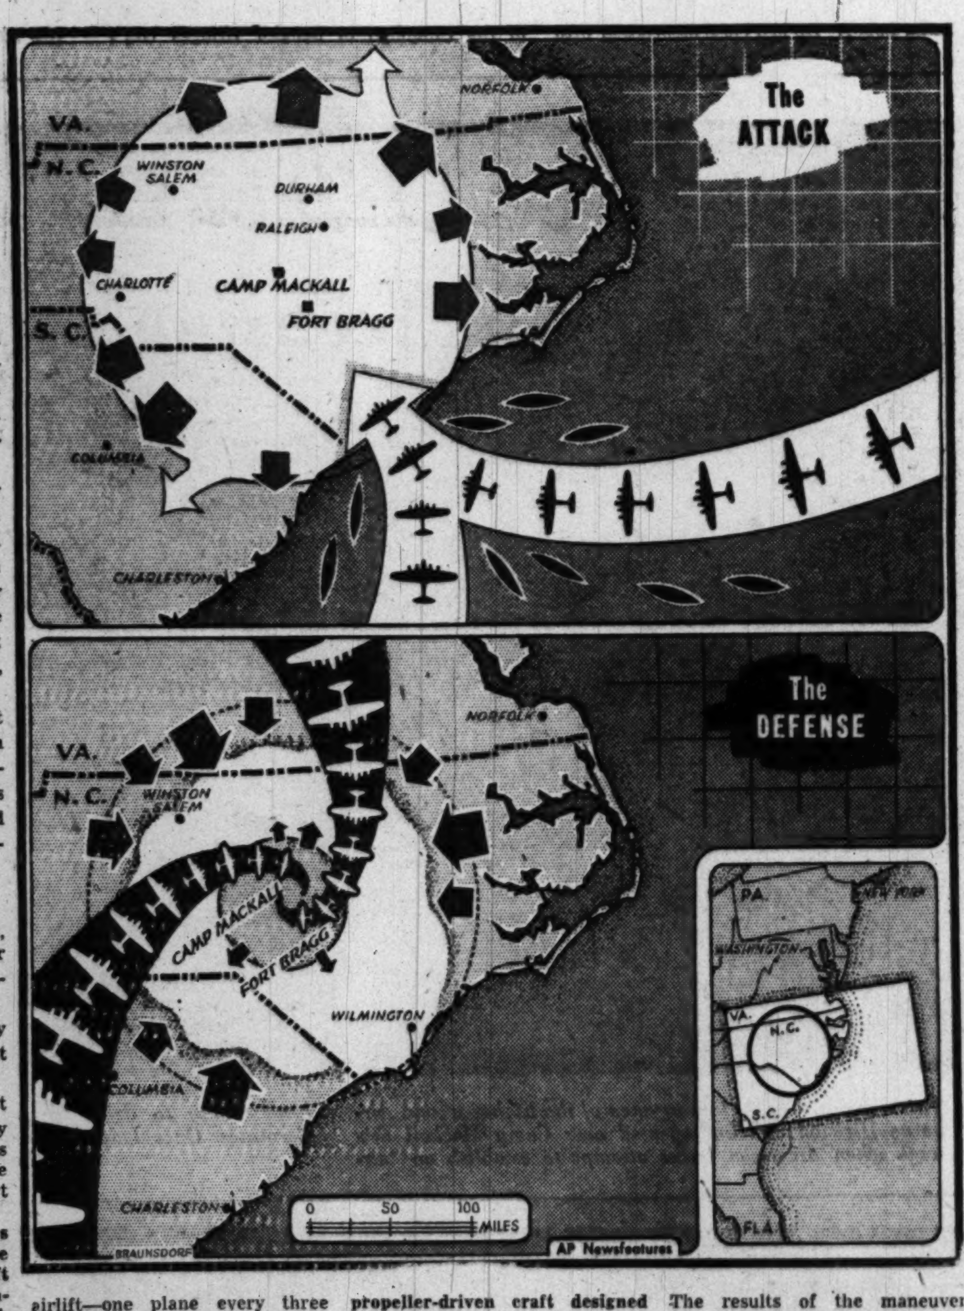
How do new Army equipment and weapons, especially designed for aerial transport, work under combat conditions? Will some new trucks, which divide in half for air shipment, stand up under heavy field usage? Will all of the heavy field guns of a sizable artillery force operate properly after being dropped by parachute, even though smaller-scale tests proved satisfactory?

Are changes necessary in the present size and setup of combat and service units earmarked for airborne operations?

D. C. Area Units

TWO AIRBORNE divisions, the Eighty-second from Fort Bragg and the Eleventh from Camp Campbell, will take part in the operation. Antiaircraft, signal and MP units from Fort George G. Meade, Md., and an Engineer force from Fort Belvoir, Va., also will be engaged.

Two groups of Air Force troop carrier aircraft—mostly Fairchild C-82 and C-119 Packets, built in Hagerstown, and Douglas C-47s and C-74s—will bring in the troops and supplies. A delivery rate equal to that of the Berlin airlift—one plane every three minutes—is hoped for.



The warplanes attacking or defending the transports will include three groups of Air Force Republic F-84Es—jet fighter-bombers—and one group of USAF North American F-86 Sabres plus about 140 Navy and Marine planes, most of them propeller-driven craft designed for close support of ground troops.

This combination of aerial forces is expected to afford valuable comparison of the relative merits of slower but longer duration conventional aircraft and speedy but short duration jets for close support of ground troops.

The results of the maneuver also should answer another moot question: Must we expand our tactical air force and put more emphasis on developing better types for support of ground troops, even if it means shifting the emphasis somewhat from strategic bombardment forces?

Polish 'Bolshevism' Taking Odd Turns

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

POLAND'S march toward Soviet socialism is taking many strange turns—as if the people were afraid to reach their prescribed goal and yet even more afraid to stop along the way.

New Polish laws and pronouncements indicate that the people are gradually yielding to the extremes of Bolshevism—under duress, of course, but also because they have been led to believe that there is no alternative save total capitulation to "capitalist imperialism."

Moscow propagandists have used every device to convince the satellites that the Western nations intend to root out all forms of socialism and reestablish capitalism—and by war, if necessary. This is powerful propaganda, since socialism in one form or another has long been an accepted part of the European economy, and European capitalism has—wrongly or rightly—been associated with economic exploitation.

Little Known Boss

THE Kremlin's control over Poland has become surprisingly subtle. An illusion of self-government has been skillfully created while the real architects of Poland's future work behind the scenes.

Possibly the top Kremlin operator in Warsaw is the little known Jakub Berman, member of a wealthy middle-class family and long an active "leftist." Officially, he is Undersecretary of State and a leader of the Polish (Communist) United Workers Party.

Of the four or five leading Communists in Poland, Berman is reported to be the one who most often deals directly with the Kremlin. In fact, he has a direct telephone line to Stalin and other Soviet Politburo members.

Among Berman's assignments is the job of quelling any resurgence of Poland's mildly leftist political philosophy.

Although Bolshevism is getting the upper hand, there are many signs that the Poles are less than enthusiastic. To cite one recent indication of this, the Warsaw regime announced last month that new legislation is being prepared to tighten labor discipline.

It was revealed that factory workers were sabotaging special speed-up programs by absenting themselves from work on pretext of illness. The Ministry of Health found that many workers even obtained leave to visit health resorts without justification.

A government study of absenteeism showed that in 1947 there were 42 working days of absenteeism per month per 100 workers. In 1949, the figure rose to more than 50, and last January it reached a record high of 60 days.

The government has admitted that Polish agriculture also is being seriously harmed by absenteeism.

Speculative Rings

OTHER Bolshevik troubles are revealed in a government announcement directed against so-called speculators. The Ministry of Home Trade disclosed:

"Speculators are managing to corner as much as 60 percent of some textile lines available for free trade. Another point to remember is that speculation is now organized into rings."

Although there are ample laws to crack down on any transgressors, the Warsaw regime is using the occasion for further bolshevization by setting up special state shops and other retail outlets, ostensibly to fight speculators but actually to eliminate remaining units of capitalism.

The government has also required the use of sales coupons for various purchases. The effect is to drive business to state shops.

Still another harassment is the infiltration of anti-Moscow elements into the Polish (Communist) Workers Party. Most of these elements are known to be from the professional class. A hint of this group's strength was provided recently by President Boleslaw Bierut when he revealed that the party was composed of the following class divisions: 4.9 percent agricultural workers, 14.3 percent peasants, 26.1 percent professional class and 51.9 percent industrial workers.

Many alleged cases of espionage are reported to have involved members of this professional element in the party.

'Uranium' Samples Sent Here Assay High in 'Junk'

SAMPLES of uranium are arriving at the Geological Survey in cookie jars, candy boxes, perfume bottles and cigar boxes.

At least the senders of these packages hope their offerings assay 20 percent or more uranium oxide. There is a $32,000 jackpot, including $10,000 bonus from the Government, for the lucky prospector who can turn up a 20-ton deposit with the required uranium content.

But all is not uranium that registers bonanza hope with the would-be fortune hunters, notes the National Geographic Society. The 300 to 400 samples of rock and sand sent in every month are mostly "junk," according to John C. Rabbitt, chief of the trace elements sections at the Washington laboratory. Letters accompanying the samples often reveal current misinformation.

One farmer wrote that he believed there was uranium on his land because he felt badly and the cows were jumpy when he started milking. Another had seen a strange blue light in a marsh on his farm. It was—it must be—uranium, he declared.

Rabbitt doesn't discourage the amateur uranium prospector. He suggests more information. One source is an inexpensive Government handbook entitled, "Prospecting for Uranium," which has had a sale of more than 40,000 copies in the past year.

Thus, Dr. Graham was accused, of all things, of encouraging student enrollments at the university.

Harry Takes a Hint

WISCONSIN'S Alexander Wiley, ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will be one of the first Senate Republicans called to the White House under the Truman-Bridges plan for top level bipartisan foreign policy discussions.

Ironically, Wiley is one of the few Senate Republicans who has had a reason to expect such an invitation for five long years.

A few hours before the late Franklin Roosevelt's death, when Harry Truman had no inkling he was about to ascend to the Presidency, Truman was discussing White House liaison problems with Wiley on the Senate floor.

"I said to him, 'Harry, if you ever become President you ought to take one leaf from Calvin Coolidge's book,'" Wiley recalled. "'Coolidge invited a few people from both parties down from the Hill to breakfast once a week. And he got along pretty well with Congress.'"

Truman thanked Wiley for suggesting the breakfast talks, the Wisconsin Republican relates. In fact, he told Wiley that if he ever became President he would give that or similar mixed conferences a try.

"I guess he forgot," said Wiley. "I certainly never reminded him."

Bounced Too Far

GEORGIA, locale of the late President Roosevelt's "summer White House," received its first official visit from President Truman last week when he landed at Fort Benning, Ga., on a military inspection trip.

History-steeped Georgians, who keep archives on all their presidential visitors, regaled Truman with stories of Georgia hospitality to some of his forerunners. Among them was the story of "George Washington and Cherry Bounce."

If you are not a Georgian, Cherry Bounce was quite a cocktail in its day. The potent drink was concocted quite simply by pouring straight corn likker over crushed cherries.

While President, Washington made a tour of Savannah, Waynesboro and Augusta, Ga., and was entertained lavishly en route. When he commented on the merits of Cherry Bounce, someone presented him with a cask.

But when the first President returned to the Capital, the cask was strangely missing. Washington ordered it traced, found it had been left behind, and sent to Georgia for it.

Oregon Is 'Recarpeting' Vast Burn

By Ellis Lucia

Mr. Lucia is a frequent contributor to the Oregonian magazine and other publications, and in the past five years he has written numerous articles on the history and problem of the Tillamook burn.

A FAMILY from one of the Plains States, touring Oregon for the first time, complained they couldn't see the scenery. There were too many trees in the way.

This tourist family would probably be amazed at what the people of the Beaver State have set about to do. Oregonians are digging into their pockets to spend $10,500,000 to plant more trees.

Oregon last fall raised the curtain on the greatest forest rehabilitation program ever attempted in a single area on the North American continent. The Nation's leading lumber-producing State is being turned into a gigantic forest laboratory.

Such a project may seem at first glance to be about as senseless as buying another fur coat for a movie star. Yet under the surface is a different picture.

Timber stocks in Oregon have been depleted rapidly in the past few years. Millions upon millions of board feet were logged to help win World War II. The postwar demand for lumber has kept mills humming at full speed.

However, a series of disastrous fires has been even a greater cause for alarm. Vast forest areas have been laid waste. Next to nothing was being done to reclaim these lands. The problem was brought home to residents of the northwestern part of the State after the war, when major mills cut their last logs. The timber simply wasn't in the hills.

The loggers and millmen moved to southern Oregon. Eugene and Roseburg are now the lumber capitals, for they are close to the last great timber stands within the continental United States.

OREGONIANS saw an ominous threat to their forest industry. In 1948, Oregon forests produced seven billion board feet of lumber, 645 million feet of plywood and wood for 545,000 tons of pulp. The forests bring Oregon an annual income of 600 million dollars. They employ 60 percent of the State's workers. There was reason to worry about the future.

As a result of action by the voters, the State last summer got into the tree farming business on a large scale. The $10,500,000 forest rehabilitation program will attempt to reclaim 750,000 State-owned acres of poorly stocked or blackened timber lands.

Focal point of this undertaking is the 300,000-acre Tillamook burn, once one of the richest timber-producing regions in the world. Located in the northwestern corner of the State, it has thrice been ravaged by fire since 1933.

The big burn is a constant reminder of the State's dwindling timber reserve. Its proximity to Portland, Oregon's only metropolitan center, makes its ghostly bleached snags an eyesore to motorists driving to the Oregon beaches.

In the first fire alone, 12½ billion board feet of top-grade timber were consumed. Ashes rained down on ships 500 miles at sea and to a depth of 2 feet on the beaches 30 miles away. Chickens went to roost in the middle of the day because of the darkness. Giant firs 400 years old were cremated.

Three thousand men couldn't stop it. Deer, elk and other animals perished in the forest's game preserve. Fish died in the ash-choked streams. Flames reached to a height of 40,000 feet. The fire left Oregon 100 million dollars poorer.

Seed Sources Destroyed

A FEW years later, in 1919, the burn exploded into flame a second time, and 225,000 acres of burned-over lands and 28,000 acres of green old-growth timber were ravaged. During the war year of 1945, fire cut loose a third time, crackling through 110,000 acres, threatening the watersheds of several towns, costing the lives of three men and destroying 10,000 acres of young trees and the last seed sources.

In the intervening years, private companies have done an amazing job of salvage. Nearly as much footage has been recovered as in original cruise estimates. Several million board feet are still being recovered daily. High lumber prices have made this salvage job economically profitable.

Yet today the Tillamook burn, still drenched by heavy coastal fogs which make trees grow, is a wasteland of stumps, snags and brush. It is a powderkeg in summer, an idle area too steep and rocky for anything but growing trees. The problem area is 500,000 acres. Every year this land lies idle costs the people of Oregon $1,800,000.

This is the area foresters hope to replant. Groundwork was laid by the 1947 Legislature, which passed a forest research bill. A 5 cents per 1000 board feet severance tax was levied on logs. Sixty percent went to the State forest products laboratory at Corvallis to further new methods of utilizing wood waste products. Forty percent financed experiments in forest protection, management and rehabilitation. Many planting experiments were carried out in the Tillamook burn, testing different types of tree under varied conditions. Tests also were concerned with combating tree diseases and rodent control.

Seeding by Helicopter

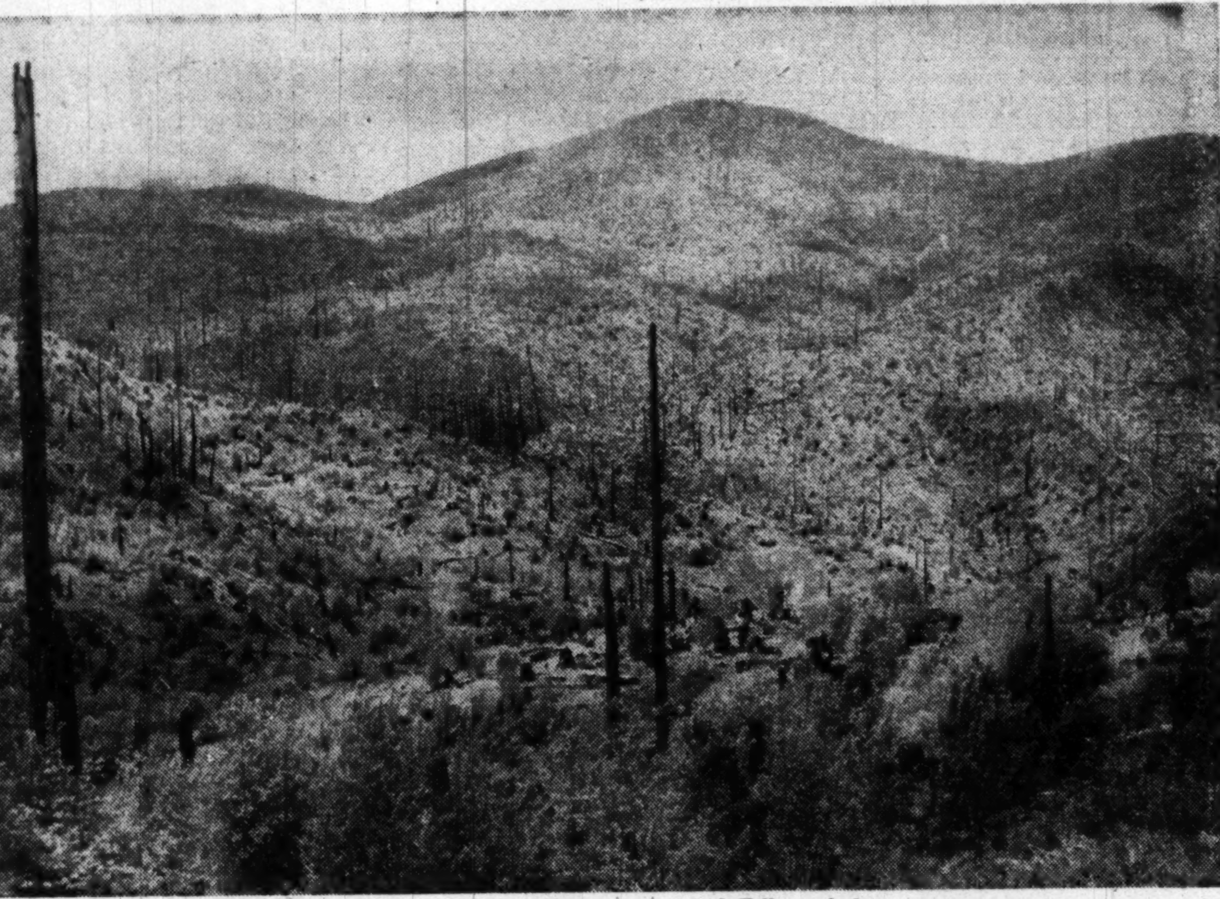
UNDER the new Reforestation Act, work must be done entirely on State-owned lands. Mapping crews are determining the planting procedure to be used in different sections. Such surveys will decide whether seeding can be by airplane or whether hand-planting will be necessary. Much of the seeding will be done by helicopter.

An idea of the magnitude of the job may be conceived from this: One ton of Douglas fir seed will be required to restock 6000 acres by direct seeding. Hand-planting will cost $20 an acre. It takes a man a full day to plant 680 trees. Aerial seeding will cost from $6 to $8 an acre. Snags must be felled to reduce fire hazards. Bids from private outfits are taken for snag felling projects. The State purchases cone seed for the project from cone gatherers.

Roads must be built and corridors cleared for fire protection. An unchecked fire could undo years of tedious work in a few hours. Between 10,000 and 15,000 acres are being planted this year. The program will stretch over a 15-year period.

The first $300,000 in bonds has been authorized. Under the act, no more than $750,000 worth of bonds may be issued in any one year. The reforestation program will cover smaller devastasted areas in addition to the Tillamook burn.

Nevertheless, the big burn is destined to become the Nation's top-ranking forest research laboratory. What is learned there will give new hope to other States with forest devastations.



This snag-infested wasteland in Oregon is typical Tillamook burn country

Library Grew From 11 Hair-Trunks Full of Books

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

OVERHEAD the great dome rises to its cavernous peak. Down below lies the main reading room of the Library of Congress.

"Gee," said the impressed young schoolmarm on the balcony midway up the wall. With the inadequacy of the suddenly awed, she added, "How beautiful."

The reaction of the North Carolina teacher is typical, according to Robert N. Stimmel of 2490 Oglethorpe st. nw., one of the library's staff delegated to escort groups about the institution, which is 150 years old tomorrow.

The visitors who stare so reverently at the enshrined Declaration of Independence, and ask how the wide marble steps of the great hall are kept so clean, have a proprietary right to be impressed.

The building and its annex were constructed at a cost of $15,130,656, and are the two largest buildings in the world devoted exclusively to library purposes.

In all, the library represents a 150-year investment of $117,717,628 in public moneys; another $6,495,624 in gifts of money from non-Government sources; and material of incalculable value through copyright deposits and gifts.

According to Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans, the library's maintenance last fiscal year cost the equivalent of 5 cents for every citizen.

It is an impressive financial sheet, but the library is more impressive in other respects.

The institution that is at once the national library and the "private" library of Congress, across the street, is believed to be the largest library in the world. More important than size, its influence is felt in almost every aspect of American life through the use of its vast resources.

The information supplied members of Congress may influence legislation touching lives from the Golden Gate to the Aroostook. Precedents found in early law books may affect judicial decisions. Material scattered through hundreds of volumes, manuscripts and maps contribute to the rewriting of history. A foreign policy, a symphony, a technological development may be affected by the research done here.

Though the Library of Congress is observing the 150th anniversary now, it has a prehistory that begins with the establishment of the Federal Government.

In the First Congress, Representative Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts, a former member of the Continental Congress and a future Vice President of the United States, proposed "that a committee be appointed to report a catalogue of books necessary for the use of Congress, with an estimate of the expense, and the best mode of procuring them." The place was New York. The date was August 6, 1789.

Nothing came of the proposal, however, probably because the members of Congress were able to use the books of the New York Society Library, a private library that had been chartered by King George III.

When the First Congress moved to Philadelphia, the Library Company there extended the same privilege.

It was not until the seat of Government was being moved to the bookless banks of the Potomac that the pinch of necessity was felt.

The provision for a library was wrapped up with other measures pertaining to the establishment of the Government in the new Federal city, and said in part: "for the purchase of such books as may be necessary for the use of Congress at the said City of Washington, and for fitting up a suitable apartment for containing them, and for placing them therein, the sum of $5000 shall be and hereby is appropriated."

The bill was signed by President John Adams 150 years ago tomorrow.

The first order for books was placed with a London company, Messrs. Cadell & Davies, June 20, 1800.

Their shipment included Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," Bacon's "Works" in five volumes, "Parliamentary Debates" in 104 volumes, and others for a total of 152 titles in 740 volumes.

The books were sent in 11 hair trunks (because boxes would have no value after arrival) aboard "the good ship called the American," then lying in the Thames "and by God's Grace bound for Baltimore."

The Sixth Congress had adjourned, so the books were not opened. Following the convening of the Seventh Congress in December, the matter of the books was brought up, and after some discussion "An Act Concerning the Library for the Use of Both Houses of Congress" was passed January 26, 1802. Among other things, it provided that the books be placed in a room on the west side of the Capitol which had been occupied by the House during the Sixth Congress.

The Library had grown to a modest 3000 volumes when the British used the books as kindling in burning the Capitol in August, 1814.

Five months later, after much argument, a bill was passed by the narrow margin of 10 votes, to purchase the largest private library in the country, that of Jefferson. The $23,950 worth of books doubled the size of the library.

The library was again the victim of a major fire on Christmas Eve, 1851. About two thirds of the 55,000 volumes were destroyed, including many that had belonged to Jefferson.

When the present library building was completed in 1897, there were almost 800,000 volumes, and space for 4½ million. It seemed like ample room for expansion, but in 1939 an annex was necessary, and today the library is busting its seams.

Statistics on the institution's holdings make the head swim: Not counting unbound newspapers and other serials, there are an estimated 27,560,873 pieces. The figure includes 8,689,639 volumes and pamphlets, 128,055 bound newspaper volumes, 11,320,000 manuscripts, 1,928,574 maps and views, 1,819,609 volumes and pieces of music; 305,848 phonograph records . . .

A figure for the fiscal year 1949 also indicates the rate of growth —1,557,409 pieces of all categories added to the collections.

The Man Behind the Man Who Is Accusing Lattimore

dresses remarkably reminiscent of the line that Kohlberg plugs in his articles and associations.

Thus one finds former Representative Busbey (R., Ill.), a great fellow for inserting Kohlberg and Plain Talk articles in the Record, making the first congressional attack on Haldore Hansen, in May, 1947. The material seems to have been drawn from, or at least first brought to light in, Kohlberg material in his fight with the IPR.

Similarly, Representative Latham (R., N. Y.) started off an attack on Jessup in January, 1948, with data that would point to Kohlberg as the source. In August, 1949, Representative Smith (R., Wis.) inserted in the Record a Kohlberg letter bitterly attacking Jessup, and containing much the same material McCarthy used eight months later.

Why Kohlberg's burning passion and unremitting fight?

The New York importer declined to give this reporter an interview last week (his stated reason was that The Washington Post had unfairly and inaccurately attacked him editorially), so his own explanation is not available.

To suggest that he is motivated by a desire to save his big business in China seems, to this reporter, to underestimate Kohlberg's character. His crusade must have cost him immense time that he might otherwise have given his business, and it has clearly cost him large amounts of money.

Rather, it would seem that he has embraced a cause from reasons of principle and that his dedication is sincere.

Elementary Logic

FROM the accounts of people who have watched him, and, more demonstrably, from a reading of his articles, Kohlberg's point of view about China is simple—oversimple.

He seems to take the line that anyone who criticizes any aspect of Chiang Kai-shek's operations is thereby giving aid and comfort to the Communists. Anyone who gives them aid and comfort must be following the party line. Anyone following that line is thereby an enemy of the United States.

Also, he seems now to be acting on the converse of that proposition: Anyone who fights the Communists must be, by that very act, a fine fellow.

Kohlberg, like McCarthy, who has parroted his charges, has been a vigorous practitioner of the theory of guilt by association. He and McCarthy insist a man can be judged by his associates. When that test is applied to Kohlberg himself, he does not fare very well. He is now in curious company.

LAST October, he was guest at a dinner sponsored by the National Economic Council, an organization run by Merwin K. Hart, pro-Franco apologist in this country and known as anti-Semitic.

The guest list included many upstanding and a few outstanding Americans. But it also included, as might be expected, the elite of American fascists, led off by Lawrence Dennis.

Kohlberg appears again on a list that included Hart and the notorious Joseph P. Kamp, head of the Constitutional Educational League, and who was convicted of contempt of Congress. His publications were recommended and sold by at least 10 of the defendants in the wartime sedition trial. Kohlberg's association was in connection with an affair for Theodore Aubert's International Anti-Communist Entente. This organization, founded before the war with Swiss headquarters, enjoyed the support of Hitler.

Letters to Tablet

LAST June, Kohlberg was vice chairman (and, from his letters, apparently a prime organizer) of a dinner for Paul Yu-pin, the Archbishop of Nanking.

Again, many good and distinguished people attended. The speakers were Gen. Pat Hurley and Senator McCarran (D., Nev.). But the treasurer for the dinner was Robert M. Harriss, once indicted as an unregistered lobbyist and former financial adviser to Father Coughlin in his famous silver deals.

One of the sponsors of the dinner was Patrick Scanlon, managing editor of the Brooklyn Tablet, the Coughlinite paper which still remains faithful to the radio priest's line, which printed his blasts and which gives aid and comfort to the most intemperately reactionary elements on the American political scene.

For a man active in Jewish organizations and generous in Jewish charities, it is somewhat incongruous to find that Kohlberg has had published at least 10 letters to the editor of the Tablet, and has repeatedly received favorable mention in it.

Offered Services

BUT incongruity (and false modesty) do not seem to bother Kohlberg. This most persistent and intransigent critic of American foreign policy wrote President Truman less than three weeks ago, nominating himself for the position of Ambassador-at-Large.

He said he thought it was time that the President give him the job to advise State Department people who lost the fight in China and were about to lose it in the rest of the world.

Kohlberg has admitted supplying McCarthy material on Lattimore and Jessup. The admission was somewhat superfluous, since the previously available circumstantial evidence was convincing.

Lattimore's lawyers produced, when Lattimore testified before a Senate subcommittee in his own behalf, a double-column document showing that almost every one of McCarthy's major specific charges against Lattimore and Jessup were previously stated by Kohlberg in one or another of his publications.

In many cases the language—and even the metaphors—were identical. McCarthy had not chosen, apparently, to tamper with Kohlberg's distinctive prose style.

Even some of the witnesses McCarthy has said he will produce against Lattimore seem to have been uncovered, or pointed to, in Kohlberg's earlier material.

Dress Rehearsal

BUT MORE important, and as mentioned above, all this material entered into the fight between Kohlberg and the IPR. The documentation connected with that battle reads like a dress rehearsal of the McCarthy allegations.

Everything is there: Lattimore's associations and organizations; his writings and editing of the magazine Pacific Affairs, allegedly in a manner right down the Commie line; Jessup's alleged leading of the IPR in a campaign to smear Chiang and extoll the Chinese Communists; the asserted pro-Communist cabal in the State Department that "forced the resignation" of Ambassador Grew, that sold Chiang down the river, that deceived Stillwell and forced him to oppose Chiang, that set the stage for insinuating the Communists into the Government—all the charges and the line of argument used by McCarthy in two major speeches and two major presentations to the subcommittee.

There is little point in going into details of the fight Kohlberg had with the IPR. He prepared a huge, 88-page document to back his case—using tactics of ripping passages out of context and of ignoring contradictory evidence that remind one precisely of McCarthy's technique.

He claimed that the IPR slavishly followed, in its publications, the alternating honeymoon and hate attitudes of the Kremlin toward Chiang. To prove it, he quoted from less than 2 percent of the articles published in IPR during the period and less than .002 percent of the books it put out.

Jessup Among Foes

THE IPR made a devastating reply in a document that it circulated to its members. It showed that Kohlberg had simply ignored the overwhelming number of facts that did not support his argument.

The group that took Kohlberg on to answer his charge that the IPR was Communist-dominated was about as conservative as one could imagine, including a Wall Street lawyer from a high-collar firm, and a group of major American industrialists. But one of the group was Jessup, and apparently Kohlberg never forgave him.

The IPR is supported almost entirely by "fat cat" money—from the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations, and from large banking and industrial concerns. Kohlberg made much of the fact that $3500 came from the Communist Frederick V. Field, and so has McCarthy.

But to suppose that the IPR was "bought" by a sum of Communist money amounting to less than 2 percent of its budget, as against 98 percent coming from conservative sources, is as ridiculous as to suppose that an organization of the IPR's standing was "bought" by any money, regardless of the source.

Awarded Navy 'E'

THE IPR had and has the highest reputation for objective research. Its job is to provide a forum for views from all quarters about the Far East, and to conduct honest research.

The testimonials it has, in the form of doubled grants from the Chase and National City Banks, in the form of a Navy "E" award for its contribution to the war effort, in the form of its characterization by the Rockefeller Foundation as "the most important single source of independent studies" on Far Eastern problems and in the form of an 1163 to 66 vote, would seem to be answer enough to the accusations Kohlberg brought against it and such of its principals as Lattimore and Jessup.

'Green Campus' Still Draws Rusk

By Gershon Fishbein
Post Reporter

A DIPLOMAT is an instructor at a girls' college who can persuade one of his students to marry him without threatening to flunk her if she refuses.

In that respect, at least, Assistant Secretary of State Dean Rusk, appointed recently as director of Far Eastern affairs, qualifies as the ideal diplomat. For it was at Mills College, Oakland, Calif., that Rusk, a 25-year-old instructor, talked student Virginia Foisie into marrying him—a bilateral pact, in State Department language.

At that time, Rusk had not the slightest idea of making diplomacy his career. Education was his field. Today, after four years in the State Department, he still does not fancy himself as a professional diplomat and openly confesses his desire to go back to what he calls the "green campus."

The prospects of his return to academic life in the near future are not too bright, however. Secretary Acheson has come to rely on his judgment in policy planning, his keen eye in spotting weak links in the Soviet armor in the United Nations. The evidence is that Acheson wants to keep him around as long as Rusk is willing to stay.

BESIDES, the explosive Far Eastern situation with which Rusk must deal cannot be met effectively by juggling plans and personnel. Whoever makes the plans must stay on the job to see them through.

The plans for our Far Eastern policy must be grounded on the past, placed in a practicable framework of the present and be adjustable in the future without damaging the framework. It is in this combination of tenses that Rusk is engineering our plans for Asia.

What are those plans?

Rusk sees three major steps which must be taken if we are to make headway in the Far East.

1. An accurate bipartisan understanding of the situation in the Far East. The State Department is genuinely alarmed by the drumfire of criticism it has taken on the Far East, particularly from Republicans, and would gladly lay all its cards on the table in exchange for a cease-fire agreement from the Republican GHQ. The appointment of Mr. Dulles may be the first step in this direction.

2. A common policy with Asiatic countries to strengthen the Far East economically and politically. In addition to our economic assistance, the United States would like to see certain political steps taken, such as the admission of Ceylon and Indonesia to the U. N. and settlement of the long-smoldering India-Pakistan dispute.

3. A comprehensive "work" program in which each nation will strive for self-help and mutual help, much in the manner of ERP but without the organizational trappings of the European setup.

"People are waiting for us to do a swan dive off the high tower," says Rusk. "But we need to pour water into the pool. The nations of the Far East need governmental reforms, tax agents, foreign trade officers, Point IV aid. We can help each nation and in turn be helped by them."

All this will take time, Rusk admits, and that's what he doesn't like. All his life he has been in a hurry. Born in Cherokee County, Ga., February 9, 1909, he had received an A.B. from Davidson College, spent three years abroad as a Rhodes scholar, studied at the University of Berlin and was an associate professor at Mills before he was 25.

He entered military service as a captain in December, 1940, and emerged as a full colonel.

It was in the CBI that Rusk first became acquainted with the Chinese forces and their leadership. One day in Burma, after a talk with Gen. Joseph (Vinegar Joe) Stillwell, his CO, Rusk decided international politics was for him and mentally said goodby to all the girls' colleges he had ever known.

He rose to deputy chief of staff in the CBI and was transferred to Washington as a member of the Operations Planning Division of the War Department General Staff. By now the international bug had really bitten him, and on his discharge he was appointed assistant chief of international security in the State Department.

With time out for service as Assistant to War Secretary Patterson, Rusk was later named director of United Nations affairs.

It was in the U. N. that Rusk learned his most important lessons in diplomacy, particularly about the Russian philosophy and how to live with the Soviets.

Last year, on his fortieth birthday, life began for Rusk as Assistant Secretary of State.

Philippine Chaos

A statement by Gen. Amilio Aguinaldo the other day directs attention to the potentially explosive situation that has developed in the Philippine Republic. In an appeal to "my beloved Filipino nation," the aged general spoke of the "turmoils that now engulf us" and said that if the Filipinos cannot restore peace "out of disorder and chaos" they will give foreigners a sufficient reason to send their armies into the islands. Every Filipino will know what he is talking about, though in this country there has been little information on the spreading demoralization and disorder in the Philippines.

The immediate menace comes from the Huks. These dissidents and, dare we say, agrarian reformers, are now Communist led and supported by an infiltration of Chinese Communists. About 75,000 Huks are operating in the Manila area, and there are several times that number in the country as a whole. The Huks are well armed with the guns distributed to guerillas by the United States during the war. It is said that the Huks have 10 times as many guns as the Filipino army. Villages have been burned, citizens slaughtered, wealthy persons kidnaped and forced to pay ransom to the Communist bands, yet the government is doing precious little about it. A moral rot appears to have paralyzed the government, and the people have so little confidence in the government that they refuse to cooperate in the movement to disarm the Huks.

While the responsibility is primarily one for the Filipinos themselves, the United States cannot be indifferent, because the Philippines are in a special relation to America. One step that could be taken by this country would be to disarm the Huks by offering them a substantial sum for return of their American guns, as the United States did in the case of Cuban guerillas after the Spanish-American War. We should not dodge our responsibility for leaving weapons in the hands of men who, during the war, were taught to plunder and kill. One other step that certainly ought to be taken is the installation of strong American advisers in Manila. Several American advisers are there now, but their advice is largely ignored. If President Quirino were openly to call on President Truman for experts to direct rehabilitation of the islands' demoralized fiscal and law-enforcement systems, there might be a chance to save the country. The alternative seems to be a continued slipping into chaos and perhaps Communist control.

Mail Once A Day

Postmaster General Donaldson has exhibited a good deal of courage in ordering a drastic reduction in mail deliveries to help meet the mounting postal deficit. There is no reason to doubt Mr. Donaldson's sincerity in this economy move, though he has not seemed too anxious to press for some of the administrative reforms recommended by the Hoover Commission which would make a curtailment of service less necessary. In a sense the reduction serves as an ultimatum to Congress. If legislators do not wish the cut to stand, then they ought to get busy on the pending bills which would put the Postoffice on a business basis.

Undoubtedly the prospective reductions will cause considerable inconvenience. There is little question that many large savings could be made without impairing services if the recommendations of the Hoover Commission were adopted. The fact remains, however, that aside from several minor stabs at reorganization, most of these recommendations are stagnating. Meanwhile, the Postoffice will incur an estimated deficit of 555 million dollars in fiscal 1951—though this may be reduced to 401 million dollars if a rate increase is approved.

The basic trouble in the Postoffice is the lack of a fast, modern accounting system. It is impossible, for example, to determine accurately the cost of operating an individual postoffice. Many of the other difficulties stem from this source. Yet the bill to give the Postoffice an improved accounting system such as prevails in the TVA has incurred vociferous criticism from the Comptroller General and is stalled in Congress. Moreover, despite the barrage of unanimous testimony (including the postmasters' own association) in favor of the bill to take postmasters out of politics, the House Postoffice Committee has shamefully killed this essential reform. Two other bills to make special postal services self-supporting and to require regionalization—that is, centralized direction of service, motor fleets and the like in cities and suburban areas—also are languishing. No action has been taken on the bill to relieve the Postoffice of the burden of airline subsidies. There is no certainty that Congress will act to increase second-class rates, though a reasonable and proportionate increase is fully warranted despite hysterical protests by some newspapers.

Whether the Postoffice should be entirely self-supporting is a moot question of public policy. That is an entirely separate question, however, from the need for efficiency within the Postoffice itself. Means to obtain more efficiency are as much a responsibility of Congress as of the Administration. Given the present outrageous deficit and the lack of tangible help, Postmaster General Donaldson has done about the only thing he can.

No Room For Them

An article by Dewey Anderson, executive director of the Public Affairs Institute, appearing last Friday in The Washington Post provides convincing statistical proof that this country is confronted by serious unemployment. This unemployment is not confined to New England and the Middle Atlantic States, nor to a few distressed industries. It is nation-wide, and is due chiefly to the fact that new jobs are not being created fast enough to take care of a rapidly expanding labor force.

Young people entering the labor market for the first time have been especially hard hit; in the first quarter of this year, for example, 16 percent of male job-seekers between the ages of 14 and 19 were unemployd as compared with a national average of slightly more than 7 percent. Furthermore, last March 1.8 million people had been unemployed for three months or longer—more than four times the comparable number reported for October, 1948. Here, Mr. Anderson notes, "is hard core unemployment manifesting itself both as a trend over the last two years, and in sufficient numbers to present a problem of national concern which cannot be shrugged off."

The employment situation in manufacturing is especially disturbing, for a decline in numbers employed has been followed by comparative stabilization. Since the per-capita productive output of workers employed by manufacturing industries has been rising, a further reduction in employment in this sector of the economy is in prospect in the absence of an offsetting expansion of industrial activity.

Mr. Anderson explains that the present unemployment is due to "inability to expand our private purchasing power fast enough to take off the market all that our advancing technology produces." But this explanation does not answer the question at issue: how to increase the effective demand for goods. Can it be done by systematic doses of inflation that, by raising prices, would encourage industry to produce more, employ more workers and put more money in the hands of consumers? Or is it possible to increase productive output and provide more jobs without resort to inflationary expedients?

This newspaper has suggested that the remedy for unemployment lies in creating new industries and lowering production costs so that existing industries can expand their markets and provide more jobs. But we confess that this advice is easy to give but not always easy or possible to follow. A statistician can sit down and figure out on paper how much this country is capable of producing and how much it must produce in order to insure maximum employment. For instance, the President's Council of Economic Advisers estimates that to insure reasonably full employment by 1954 it would be necessary to raise output from the level of 258 billion dollars (the 1949 figure) to 300 billion or more. Again, how is it to be done? Can private industry be depended on to make wise decisions, or even to respond to urgings to expand production facilities? Is there any way of determining how much money needs to be spent on investment in production facilities? Do we know whether too much or too little purchasing power is going to investors or to consumers? Is there any assurance that an increase in purchasing power will be used to buy more consumer goods, or will surpluses of some commodities pile up—a condition that would result in reductions in the scale of operations and less employment?

These are only a few of the many questions raised by the specter of chronic unemployment. We do not know the answers, but we hope that public discussion of this vitally important subject will provide needed enlightenment.

Dr. Lleras' Trip

The real significance of the forthcoming visit to Central America of Dr. Alberto Lleras Camargo, secretary general of the Organization of American States, lies in the added importance it gives the OAS secretariat. One of the most crippling restrictions on the OAS in the past has been the limited power accorded its secretary general. In his visit to the seven countries from Mexico to Panama, he will talk over the problems of hemisphere relationships with government chiefs—and, we hope, acquaint them with the responsibilities of security. Indeed, we hope that Dr. Lleras' job will grow into one similar to that of the United Nations secretary general, Trygve Lie, who is empowered to speak out when he perceives threats to the peace.

In particular Dr. Lleras will have a chance on his trip to urge ratification of the two basic documents in the hemisphere security system—the Rio defense treaty and the Bogota Charter setting up the OAS. Although the Rio treaty is now in effect and its machinery has been used, five nations—Argentina, Bolivia, Ecuador, Guatemala and Peru—have not yet ratified it. This trip will include only Guatemala among the holdouts, but we hope Dr. Lleras will soon find it possible to talk frankly to the others. The record on the Bogota Charter is more shameful. Despite the fact that the OAS has been functioning provisionally for two years, only five nations have gotten around to ratifying the charter—Brazil, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Honduras and Mexico. The most conspicuous among the missing signatures is that of the United States—in whose capital the OAS is located. Apparently Dr. Lleras needs to do some missionary work here also.

Voice Of Freedom

President Truman has confirmed the necessity for stronger efforts to broadcast truth to the world. He wants the United States to preach the doctrine of freedom with a thousand voices, aided by all the resources of modern science. Similar advice is heard from many sources. Senator Benton and ten of his coleagues have introduced a resolution calling for bolder leadership in the war of ideas. Observers from many foreign lands return with the comment that we are distributing our arms more freely than our ideas. In his address at the National Press Club recently President Gonzalez Videla of Chile suggested the creation of a "democratic international" to stop the spread of international communism. President Truman also called for greater efforts in the information sphere "in collaboration with the other free nations." It is a subject that seems to us to demand further exploration.

The term "democratic international" has unfortunate connotations. It suggests merely imitation by the democratic powers of what Moscow is doing in the name of the Cominform. It would give the democratic cause in the battle of ideas a negative flavor. Yet it seems to us that President Gonzalez's basic idea of an international effort to promote the free way of life is sound. No nation can effectively carry on such a campaign singlehanded. To be sure, the United States can do much to offset the lying propaganda that is constantly coming out of Moscow about this country. We need more and not less of the kind of work the Voice of America is doing. But the Voice of America necessarily speaks for this country. Certainly there is need for another voice that could speak for the free world.

It is well to remember that in the North Atlantic Treaty the signatory powers pledged themselves to "contribute toward the further development of peaceful and friendly international relations by strengthening their free institutions, by bringing about a better understanding of the principles upon which these institutions are founded, and by promoting conditions of stability and well-being." The italics are ours, and are used to point up the propaganda on which the whole of the free world could cooperate. All the countries of the free world have contributed to freedom, but many of the people have lost contact with their history and need to be refreshed with the streams of thought which have flowed into the common pool of Western civilization.

Passionate Prodigals

On this page last Sunday we had occasion to discuss the place now occupied in American political life by converts from communism. An interesting piece on the same subject appears in the current issue of The Reporter from the pen of Mr. Isaac Deutscher, the biographer of Stalin. Mr. Deutscher thinks that the place for repentant sinners is in the pews rather than in the pulpit, and that former Communists like himself can best serve themselves and the world by remaining quiescent, and by permitting the fight against Stalinism to be led by those still capable of emotional detachment. He fears that too many repentant Reds in forswearing their former idols are also prepared to forswear their former ideals, and that their hatred of their own past is more likely than not to lead them into the camp of fascism. The intellectual apostate from communism, says Mr. Deutscher, > cannot join the Stalinist camp or the anti-Stalinist Holy Alliance without doing violence to his better self. So let him stay outside any camp . . . Let him overcome the cheap ambition to have a finger in the political pie. Let him be at peace with his own self, at least, if the price he has to pay for a phony peace with the world is self-renunciation and self-denunciation.

Mr. Deutscher goes on to make an analogy with the French Revolution, and to contrast those intellectuals who, like Wordsworth and Coleridge, renounced their earlier revolutionary faith and those who, like Goethe, Jefferson and Shelley, confronted with a choice between the perversion of the revolutionary ideals embodied in Napoleon and black reaction as represented by the Holy Alliance, steadfastly "refused to choose."

BRIGHT ONSET

The west was a torrent of gold rushing north to the hills
Under clouds blown forward like smoke on the racing wind.
The mountain ramparts lifted their dark defense
Against the bright onset that in glittering waves
Leaped the horizon, vaulted the valley and slopes,
And broke on the highest summits
in shattering floods.
In the sky, in the air were excitement and challenge, the earth
Had marshaled the woods in chromatic column and rank
Where they stormed the escarpments, planting their vivid flags
On redoubt and battlement in the light's full tide:
Beauty triumphant taking the autumn hills,
Leaving within the heart her flaming sword.

Free Opinions

In cleaning out my desk the other day I ran across this little item from James Russell Lowell's "The Bigelow Papers, Series 1";

"And I honor the man who is willing to sink
Half his present repute for the freedom to think,
And when he has thought, be his cause strong or weak,
Will risk t'other half for the freedom to speak."

This was attached to the following excerpt from an opinion written by Oliver Wendell Holmes in the case of Abrams vs. United States:

"Every year, if not every day, we have to wager our salvation upon some prophecy based upon imperfect knowledge. While that experiment is part of our system, I think we should be eternally vigilant against attempts to check the expression of opinions we loathe and believe to be fraught with death, unless they so imminently threaten immediate interference with lawful and pressing purpose of the law that an immediate check is required to save the country."

This also might be a good time to recall a little-known quotation of Adolf Hitler: "The great strength of the totalitarian state is that it will force those who fear it, to imitate it."

Religion And Democracy

In regard to Mr. Kellogg's letter of April 15 in protest of the burning of Government electric lights in the form of a cross in honor of Good Friday at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, I protest! I protest against this narrow point of view and the erroneous interpretation of the principle of the separation of church and state. How silly it is to think that there can be no cooperation between Christianity and democracy. Democracy is based on Christian principles, and it would be impossible to root out Christianity without destroying democracy altogether. The true meaning of the separation of church and state is that there shall be no state religion, that the Government should not favor one religion over another.

This, therefore, doesn't mean that we throw out religion altogether! Shall we scrap the Declaration of Independence because it mentions "Our Creator"; shall we tear down military chapels so that the rights of atheists will not be infringed upon; shall we throw out the Bibles on which the President, himself, and other officials, take the oath of office?

Our country, God bless her, was founded on Christian principles; you can't divorce it from them without disastrous results.

Wisconsin Potatoes

For the past two years potato producers in Wisconsin, along with those in other States, have been criticized and censured because the Government program aimed at handling the potato problem was not a success. Some of this criticism was deserved but most of it was misplaced due to lack of information on the part of the general public.

The vast majority of potato growers here in Wisconsin are now convinced that any reform in the program must come from the industry itself and that the producer does not need to depend upon Government agencies when it comes to marketing his crop.

In a recent survey conducted among 1500 growers in the State, our office has determined by ballot that 65 percent of the growers are opposed to price support and other governmental controls and regulations.

The majority of Wisconsin potato growers are convinced that Government programs encourage inefficient farming, penalize the efficient grower, destroy initiative, create consumer resistance and that they are the immediate forerunners of the complete destruction of free enterprise.

New Pearl Harbor?

In view of the steady deterioration of American-Russian relations, I feel that the Government of the United States should take steps to mobilize its land, sea and air forces for any eventuality. The shooting down of an American plane and the constant Soviet barrage against us is a warning that should be heeded. One Pearl Harbor is enough for this country, or should be.

President Truman may well be the last President of the United States unless he awakens to the menace of communism. The atomic bomb and jet planes cancel out the old value of our two-ocean front. Eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty. A united, strong America cannot be defeated. The free world looks to us for leadership. We cannot fail them now.

Federal Payment

I refer to your April 20 article, headlined "House Votes 86 to 82 for 10 Percent Slash in United States Payment to D. C." Many years ago, when Washington was much smaller, the Federal Government paid 41 percent of the District's expenses, but now that the National Capital of every American has grown in population and importance, as the political Capital of the world, the Congress boldly proposes to pay about 9 percent as its share of the expenses of the District. Of course voteless District of Columbia is an easy prey to the partisan propaganda-minded Representatives. But under the guise of economy, how have they guessed that a 10 percent would be sound and just?

Would it not be fairer for the Appropriations Committee to ascertain the exact acreage taken from the District for uses by the Federal Government, and exempted from taxation by the District, and for Congress to pay the District for the said withheld taxes? Why not settle this matter fairly, and for many years to come?

Milwaukee Fares

The transit company in Milwaukee cut the price of its weekly pass 10 cents (from $1.50 to $1.40) recently and added another bus line to the buses and trolleys on which the pass can be used. It also raised single tickets from 10 cents to 13 cents, thus pushing the sale of passes. This seem like good sense. Why doesn't Capital Transit imitate them?

Repression In Korea

In your letter column of April 15, Henry Chung, Ph.D, asserts that my statement that President Syngman Rhee runs a police state in South Korea is "more than a misstatement of facts."

Dr. Chung poses as "an impartial observer who knows Korea inside and out and keeps track of every political move that is going on there." But the fact is that he worked in the Korean Commission in Washington under Dr. Rhee and also served as his representative in Tokyo in 1949. I cannot understand how a man with his intelligence could have seen nothing but good while traveling "the length and breadth of South Korea." It might have been that he was wise enough not to see any evil. How could he have expected any Korean to call South Korea a police state when all those who disagree with Rhee are charged as "Communists?"

Let's look at the facts briefly. Prior to the creation of the Rhee regime, there were about 30,000 police. Today there are more than 50,000 police, plus auxiliary forces. There were 14,000 prisoners on August 15, 1948. Today there are more than 40,000 inmates, three times the jail capacity.

New York Times correspondent Walter Sullivan wrote from Korea January 25 that the police are in effect "driving the common people into the arms of the Communists. He said, "Many Americans are horrified by the deaths by torture and wholesale executions of Communists."

Dr. Chung says, "Complete freedom of speech and press is guaranteed by the constitution, and is carried out in everyday practice in Korea." But the United Nations Commission on Korea in its report to the last session of the General Assembly said, "The government has been somewhat nervous over the effect of critical press reports and comments on the maintenance of law and order. The government has closed seven important newspapers and one news agency in the period from September, 1948, to May, 1949."

Newspapers must carry government handouts. The first two paragraphs of the press decree alone are sufficient to close down any publication. They prohibit the printing of: "1. Articles contrary to the policy of the Republic of Korea; 2. Articles detrimental to the Republic of Korea." Has Dr. Chung heard about another arrest of 11 newspapermen last March?

Of course, American correspondents enjoy special privileges because of the presence of the U. S. Mission in Korea. But even they had better not touch the tender spots too often if they want to stay in Rhee's good graces. The United Press office in Seoul was once closed down.

Yes, "the Federal judges in the United States" are appointed by the President, but with Senate confirmation. Who confirms them in Korea?

Dr. Chung is correct in saying that "The South Korean police under the law (italics mine), cannot arrest anyone without a warrant." Not only that, but the constitution specifically guarantees legislative immunity. The question is, does the Rhee regime respect the law and the constitution? If so, how could it condemn 13 members of the National Assembly, last March 14, to hard-labor sentences, ranging from 3 to 10 years?

The United States will contribute to the communization of Korea and the whole Far East if it continues to support bloodthirsty opportunists like Syngman Rhee who disregard human rights and life. President Rhee cannot fight communism because he does not have the people's support behind him. He can only drive the people into the welcoming arms of the Communists.

'Deutschland Uber Alles'

By Andre Visson

Painful Reminder

SONGS have often been more revealing of peoples' real aspirations than political speeches. This explains the critical reaction to the most tactless revival of Germany's old anthem Deutschland Uber Alles (Germany Over All) by Chancellor Adenauer at the end of his Berlin address.

The most amazing feature of this incident is that Dr. Adenauer, who is regarded as the "most pro-Western" German leader, has so little understanding of Western psychology. After appealing to the Western powers to drop what he called their distrust of the Bonn government, he invited the audience to sing the anthem which is remindful to all Europeans—in the West as well as in the East—of all the reasons for their distrust of the Germans!

There is today in western Europe — France included—a sincere desire to forget German aggressions, and even the crimes that the Germans committed only a few years ago, in order to assure their country a place "over all" other European nations. There is in western Europe a growing conviction that in order to survive, western European nations must, in one way or another, get along with the Germans. There is the hope that now that the Germans have realized that aggression does not pay, they will abandon their aspirations for supremacy together with their concept of the "master-race."

But now comes Dr. Adenauer, the man whom the Western powers trust more than any other German political leader, and revives all the tragic memories of the past. And what makes the Berlin incident even more painful is that Dr. Adenauer is at a loss—or pretends to be at a loss—to understand the enormity of his blunder. He declares "I was convinced there was nothing wrong with it."

FOR HIM the old anthem is merely the lyrical expression of German patriotism—a pride in Germany and things German. For the French, the Dutch, the Belgians, the Luxembourgers, the Norwegians and the Danes it is, unfortunately, the song that they heard too often and too recently in their occupied and enslaved countries. For the British it is a reminder of the blitz and of the V-1 and V-2 bombs. And even to the Swiss and the Swedes it brings reminiscences of the uncomfortable years when they got up every morning with the fear that they might hear this dreaded anthem on their soil.

No wonder that the British government, which usually controls its emotions better than any other western European government, this time officially indorsed the immediate reaction of Maj. Gen. G. K. Bourne, the British commandant in Berlin, that the singing of the former German anthem was "in bad taste."

Dispatches from Germany bring almost daily new evidence that too many Germans have learned very little from their defeat and have forgotten all their crimes. They seem to remember only their old aspirations. They speak of their unity—to which they are as much entitled as any other nation. But unfortunately for them and for the rest of the world, unity brings to their minds memories of the days when they were on the point of becoming the masters of Europe.

TODAY western Europeans are united in the desire to prevent the Soviets from becoming the masters of Europe. And if eastern Europeans could be heard, they would express the same desire, and perhaps even more fervently. But as much as they hate the idea of a Soviet Russia "over all" of Europe, so they are determined not to allow Germany another try to place herself "over all" of Europe.

Dr. Adenauer pretends that the Germans are "not nationalistic" and "do not want to be nationalists." All they want, he pretends, is "to be good Germans and love our fatherland." No one in Europe believes Dr. Adenauer. Europeans know that despite all the eloquent talk about the necessity for European unity, they are today as nationalistic as they have ever been—if not more so.

For many years Europeans lived with the myth that Socialists were "genuinely internationalist." But after the experiences in western Europe—and especially in Great Britain—they have discovered that there are no greater economic nationalists than the Socialists.

It is unreasonable to expect the Germans, who have suffered in their national pride and whose nation has been torn in two by the occupying powers, to be less nationalistic than other European nations. It is equally unreasonable to expect the Germans to learn democracy from their occupying powers in the West. Democracy cannot be imported. It must grow in the minds and hearts of peoples.

But it is reasonable and legitimate to expect the Germans to learn that as nationalistic as they may be, they must respect their neighbors just as they would like to be respected by them. If two world wars have failed to bring the Germans this essential lesson, then there is really not much hope for Germany's—and western Europe's—survival.

Matter of Fact

Profound Changes in Yugoslavia

By Joseph Alsop

BELGRADE.—There is a good deal more than meets the eye in the appointment of Vladimir Popovic to be Yugoslav Ambassador to the United States. In this country, Senior Vice Ministers of Foreign Affairs and members of the central committee of the ruling party, who are also very hard, able and experienced men, are not sent abroad without good reason. Popovic is all these things.

The meaning of Popovic is, in fact, extremely simple. The Yugoslav leaders now want a clearer and more permanent understanding with the United States. They also want more aid in the development of their country. Finally, they are clearly preparing to ask for American credits for large-scale purchases of simple consumer goods, which will be used to improve the lot of the hard-pressed Yugoslav masses.

Ambassador Kosanovic is therefore being replaced by Ambassador Popovic, who is a personal friend and confidant of Marshal Tito. Only a man of Popovic's standing can be trusted with a problem at once so big and so delicate.

Old Theology Clung

IT IS vital to realize that this new step is one phase of a deeply significant change that is coming on here, not without much heart-searching in the Yugoslav leadership. The essential fact to understand is that Tito's original proclamation of his great heresy of independence of the Kremlin did not make the Yugoslav leaders any less religious Communists.

Consequently, even a year ago, suggestions of any community of interest between Yugoslavia and the West were met here with embarrassed shrinkings and blushings. These reactions, so near to being comical in men so tough and practical as the Yugoslav leaders, were simply the reactions of rather prim persons being tempted by a rather juicy sin. While Kremlin control had been cast off, the old Kremlin theology, making any relations with the West a sin, was still strongly dominant.

When a theological system is attacked at one point, however, it is certain, eventually, to be reexamined at all points. Here in Yugoslavia, one result is the more realistic approach to relations with the West that the Popovic appointment illustrates. The Yugoslav leaders, by virtue of their training, still seek to find theological justification for everything they do. Hence, "American realists" have been added to the list of persons with whom serious discussion of Yugoslavia's problems is not sinful.

Pressure Almost Intolerable

THE attitude toward the masses is also changing. During the past two years, the Yugoslav masses have been forced to make appalling sacrifices. The most trivial necessities—soap, needles, razor blades, cheap textiles and shoes—are almost wholly unobtainable. The peasants, finding money worthless, have hidden much of their produce from the government agents. Except in favored enterprises, the town workers have lived on a ration no better than that provided in the Kremlin's slave state in East Germany, for example.

Patriotic Yugoslavs—and these people are violently patriotic—have, of course, had a consolation that the East Germans have not enjoyed. They have seen the results of their sacrifices being used to build up their own country. Even so, the pressure has now become almost unbearable.

The classical Kremlin reaction would, of course, be to tighten all the screws several more turns. Instead, the Yugoslav leaders have decided that the pressure must be quickly lightened, by provision of larger supplies of consumer goods and in other ways. This is radical.

The Minister of Economic Planning, Kidric, in fact told this correspondent that the ultimate goal is the entire elimination of compulsion from the Yugoslav economy. Socialism is not being abandoned, although decentralization of industrial management is already being carried on, in order to avoid the pyramidal totalitarianism of the Soviet bureaucracy.

The ideal is an economy of publicly owned but competing industries, in which peasants and workers will do their jobs because they are satisfied with the return they receive, and the central state bureaucracy will merely lay down the broad developmental plan. If this ideal can ever be realized, the result will be utterly different from the Soviet system.

These new tendencies in Yugoslavia are important for Americans to grasp because the Yugoslav desire for a different and more fruitful relation with the West will require fundamental revisions of American policy. What these revisions will be, how fruitful this situation can become, and how great is the danger of any misstep, must be examined in a subsequent report.

Our Political Economy

Tariff Lobby Rocking the Boat

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

WITH the end of ECA in sight, and American exports for 1949 still running more than 5 billion dollars in excess of imports, the United States will soon face a difficult choice. Unless our 12 billion dollar a year export business is to collapse, we shall have to invest heavily abroad, give goods away indefinitely with no hope of repayment, or let foreign goods into the American market.

Cries for protection are again loud in the lobbies of Congress. Watchmakers, potato growers, coal producers, independent oil operators, bicycle manufacturers, textile manufacturers, fish packers, tungsten producers and makers of rubber footwear have already told Congress they want foreign competitors kept out of the market. Senator Warren G. Magnuson has amended the bill for additional crop support funds to bar imports of foods which are in surplus supply in this country.

In short, the drive against imports is on. This makes the choice before Congress both difficult and politically dangerous. To ignore sectional interests can cost a Congressman his seat. To ignore the national interest may lose the United States not only its prosperity but its leadership of the free world.

More Going Out

SINCE 1940 we have loaned or given away 75 billion dollars. With a great share of this going to Europe, we have still found no permanent solution to the "dollar gap." Europe's share of the American market has been declining for years. We are now importing a smaller volume of goods from Western Europe than we did at the bottom of the depression.

Today, Europe is cutting down its dollar deficit not primarily by selling more in the United States, but by barring American goods from European markets. If the tariff interests succeed in shutting off what few imports we now take, not only European producers will suffer, but American producers as well.

Protected industries argue that it is impossible for the American worker to compete against the sweated labor abroad. In inefficient industries, this may be true. But the generalization is obviously absurd, for we are selling the world twice as much as it is selling us. Dollars earned by European exporters are spent here.

In 1948-9, Europe took 26 percent of our total wheat and wheat flour production, 21 percent of our cotton and tobacco. In 1948, a quarter of our machine tool production and a fifth of our agricultural machinery was exported. We shipped out 233,000 cars, 201,000 trucks, 916 million square yards of cotton cloth, 4.5 million tons of steel and 647 million board feet of lumber.

The tariff interests can only cut our imports at the expense of other Americans: consumers, who must pay higher prices; taxpayers, who must give dollars away because we will not let others earn dollars, and our export industries, which depend on foreign sales for a substantial share of their output.

A Gradual Change

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has asked former Army Secretary Gordon Gray to find a solution to the dollar problem. But it is easier to see what is wrong than to find a politically palatable solution.

In the long run, a drastic tariff cut would work out to everyone's advantage. But in the short run there would be severe hardships in many industries which now depend on tariff protection. To attempt the change overnight could throw our whole economy into depression.

We know that, however important tariffs may be in the total trade picture, our continued prosperity is more important still. A business downturn in the United States very quickly affects our imports from abroad.

Thus it behooves us to make haste slowly. By accepting an increasing volume of goods and services from abroad, we could certainly enjoy a higher living standard. If the change is gradual, we can maintain prosperity at home while increasing prosperity abroad.

It is doubtful whether imports alone will close the dollar gap at high levels of trade. That is why we need to make an attack on all fronts, including a substantial investment abroad.

Only if we live up to our own responsibilities can we reasonably expect the rest of the world to make an end to the import quotas, tariffs, bilateral trade agreements and artificial exchange rates which bedevil world trade.

The problem calls for the highest degree of statesmanship from Congress, the Executive and the American people. The day is past when we can afford to logroll our international economic policy.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

PRESS ACCOUNTS of Margaret Truman's story, "Why Shouldn't I Sing?" in the Saturday Evening Post, didn't do justice to a first-rate piece, written in collaboration with Stanley Frank. It's high on human interest.

Her love of music began the Christmas she was 8, reports the President's only child, when she wanted a set of electric trains and was disappointed to find, instead, a baby grand piano. She recovered from the shock to begin the piano lessons with her father which she continued under other auspices until she was old enough to take up singing. Classical music was preferred by those around her. "I must confess we're strictly a long hair family from way back."

She was spoiled, Margaret admits, particularly by her doting father. The only real crackdown she remembers was a fine of 40 cents at dinner one night for excessive use of the word "dearie."

When told by her father he had been elected to the Senate and the family would move to Washington, "I raised an awful tantrum, screaming that I didn't want to go to mean old Washington." Coming into Gunston School at midyear, Margaret was snubbed by the other little 10-year-olds, who accepted her only after she had proved one day at recess that she could sing higher and louder than anyone else in the class.

Ralph McGill writes "Can He Purge Senator Pepper?" in the same issue. The "he" in question is handsome, 36-year-old Representative George Smathers, who is fighting for Pepper's seat in one of the country's hottest elections, the Florida primary May 2. In a frankly partisan piece, McGill relates how Smathers was reared by a father who always insisted he keep his neck and head sizes well balanced.

SMALL BOYS and their relatives, too, will read and save Holiday's "The Baseball Story," by Reporter Joe McCarthy. Baseball, according to one sports editor, has so risen in popularity in the last year that you can't print enough of it—not even in off seasons. McCarthy's story touches on the art of baseball—what it is that makes fans so frenetic, the happy present financial position of most clubs (with some unmentionable exceptions), the farm system, origin and development of the game, memorable plays, players and incidents.

Helen Eustis writes on her old alma mater, Smith College. "It takes all kinds to make one of the biggest women's colleges in the world, but one thing they all have in common," says the author, "that particular glow that comes to plain women or pretty as they emerge from their teens. Not to beat around the bush, they are in the mating season."

James A. Michener starts his new tales from the postwar South Pacific, and Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen describes "Jubilee Year in Rome."

A MacArthur Exclusive

J. P. McEVOY, roving editor of the Reader's Digest, sends in an exclusive interview with General MacArthur from Japan, where his son, Dennis, is editor of the Japanese edition. In it, MacArthur says democracy has really taken root in Japan, that it would endure even if we moved out tomorrow. A peace treaty is long overdue, but the Japanese should not be rearmed, the general says. Japan can and should become the Switzerland of the Far East, he argues.

A shocking story on "forgotten men" in our veterans' hospitals is written by Holman Harvey, also in the Digest. There are "tens of thousands" of these men, according to Harvey, who have been literally deserted by their families, which neither see nor communicate with them. He cites cases in which relatives lived in the immediate vicinity, too.

Comic Page Speaks Up

IN ITS 27 years of convening, the American Society of Newspaper Editors was addressed for the first time this year by some of the comic cartoonists on whom its members are so dependent. So notable was the event that Newsweek ran Milton Caniff, author of Steve Canyon, on the cover. A self-portrait or sketch, Caniff's Caniff is superimposed on a recent Sunday adventure of Steve's.

Once, Caniff told Newsweek, a European educator asked him what we in the United States meant by reading comic strips, "since he never had seen a person laughing while reading one." "It was difficult to explain to him," the cartoonist said, "that the pleasure was almost a secret confessional moment created between the cartoonist and his customer as a result of a long conditioning period they had gone through one with the other."

Our Literary Mausoleums

HAVE you been inside a public library recently? If not, it's not necessarily an indication of low-brow tastes. A recent investigation reported by Jack Harrison Pollack in Woman's Home Companion reveals that they are for the most part "ill-run, poorly stocked, nineteenth century mausoleums."

An exception, the Cleveland Public Library, points the way toward future reform. It has a handsome main building and 34 convenient branches plus 100 book stations in stores, factories, schools and firehouses. It lends, besides books, phonograph records, 16-mm. films and reproductions of fine paintings. It has lectures, exhibits, concerts, movies and discussion groups and also answers questions by telephone and mail.

Before much can be done by way of improvement, there must be a complete financial reorganization of public libraries, the report shows.

Despite the fact that there is no longer any excuse for the use of mechanical restraints, such as strait-jackets, for control of disturbed mental patients, we continue to punish sick people by the thousands in our mental institutions as though they were criminals, says Albert Deutsch.

The Companion also has a piece on birth by J. D. Ratcliffe and pictures of a baby's first day of life.

Pluto Proves as Black as Its Name

PLUTO, the outermost planet, is living up to its name, that of the God of the Realms of Darkness. It has been found to have a surface almost as black as coal.

Its diameter is 80 percent that of the earth, about 6400 miles. Its mass is about 80 or 90 percent that of the earth. It probably has no atmosphere.

These observations have been reported by Dr. G. P. Kuiper of the Yerkes and McDonald observatories to the American Astronomical Society.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Goodwin Loads Enemy's Guns

By Drew Pearson

A WELL-DRESSED, slightly pompous gentleman boarded a plane to Cincinnati about the middle of the last presidential primaries, sat down beside a fellow passenger and immediately engaged in conversation.

"My name is Goodwin," he introduced himself, "William J. Goodwin. I'm for Taft."

And during the flight to Cincinnati, Goodwin unfolded various interesting information about the Taft campaign. He said he had just been to Nebraska to round up delegates for Taft and was now going to Cincinnati to get the archbishop to support Taft. Goodwin was sure the archbishop's blessing would put a large part of the Catholic vote in Ohio behind Taft.

In fact, there was almost nothing Goodwin didn't tell his fellow passenger except that he drew a salary of $25,000 a year as lobbyist for Chiang Kai-shek.

As the trip neared its end, however, Goodwin finally got around to asking the name of the gentleman to whom he had imparted all this valuable information.

"My name is Kroll—Jack Kroll," said the fellow passenger.

Goodwin's eyes bulged. Kroll did not need to add that he was the head of CIO-PAC, the labor group busily engaged in raising money to defeat the same Senator Taft, whom Goodwin was determined to make President of the United States.

Note: A lot of people wondered why Taft, long a vigorous isolationist and originally opposed to too much American cooperation with Europe, went to the opposite extreme and even favored sending United States troops to Formosa. His old friend, China-Lobbyist Goodwin, is the answer.

Democratic Absentees

THIS column recently listed Republican Congressmen who achieved the doubtful honor of being the chief congressional hookey players. Today we name the House Democrats who make a habit of being elsewhere when the roll is called.

Topping the list is Representative Charles A. Buckley of New York, whom this column once dubbed "the Phantom Congressman" because he seldom shows his face in Washington.

"The Phantom" has missed 241 of 368 aye-and-nay votes and quorum calls since the Eighty-first Congress began in January, 1949. In other words, he has been absent 66 percent of the time.

Two other members of New York's "I T and T" Club (in on Tuesday and out on Thursday) are close behind Buckley—James Murphy of Staten Island and Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem were absent 235 and 227 times, respectively.

Fourth worst Democratic attendance record is that of charming Thurmond Chatham of North Carolina, with 214 misses. Others in order are Joseph Pfeifer of New York, 210; John Davies of New York, 188; William Byrne of New York, 184; Compton White of Idaho, 172; Manny Celler of New York, 165, and William Dawson of Illinois, 162.

Celler's absenteeism is due in part to his busy-beaver activity as chairman of the House Monopoly Investigating Committee. Davies had a serious illness in his family.

Young Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York missed 69 out of 129 roll and quorum calls in the first session of this Congress; but his attendance is better now that he has moved his family to Washington.

Other Democrats who have been conspicuous by their absence on votes and quorum calls are: Chase Going Woodhouse of Connecticut, absent 154 out of 368 times; James Hefferman of New York, 147; Earl Chudoff of Pennsylvania, 139; Eugene Keogh of New York, 138; Mendel Rivers of South Carolina, 133; Gary Clemente of New York, 117.

Others are Arthur Klein of New York, 116; Vincent Quinn of New York, 109; James Richards of South Carolina, 107; John Fogarty of Rhode Island, 105; William Green of Pennsylvania, 103; Frank Boykin of Alabama, 102, and Leonard Irving of Missouri, 91.

Unsung Bureaucrat

THE public sometimes gets the impression that a bureaucrat is a thing with horns, a forked tail and an insatiable desire to make life difficult for the poor public.

But one bureaucrat to whom this column pays tribute is a wily former Congressman from North Carolina who presides over a rundown office with paint peeling from its walls. He is Lindsay Warren, Comptroller General of the United States, and his job is to audit the books of all Government bureaus to make sure Uncle Sam is not shortchanged.

During his tenure, Lindsay Warren's General Accounting Office has recovered the amazing total of 660 million dollars.

Warren, a big man with gnarled hands, spiky graying hair and a drawl as thick as molasses, has licked his weight in wildcats in the wars of Washington. Right now he is drawing back for the one-two punch on the mighty Hoover Commission.

Hoover recommended that the GAO be abolished and its functions turned over to the Treasury Department. This idea, Warren told an entranced congressional committee, is based on "misinformation and downright lies. You can't argue against a proven success, and that's what the GAO is."

Warren is now preparing a report which will charge that Uncle Sam was euchred out of close to a billion dollars in "illegal and erroneous overpayments" through war contracts. He tells congressional cronies: "You fellows wouldn't let the Accounting Office make a final audit on termination of war contracts, and see what happened. We found fearful allowances for entertainment and presents in our early audits, but you wouldn't pay any attention to us."

The Gallup Poll

'Ike' 2-1 Over Truman in Trial

By George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

FRESH evidence of the great personal popularity of General Eisenhower is found in the results of a survey pitting the general against President Truman in a "trial heat" presidential race.

The survey was based on questioning of a representative cross-section of voters of all parties. It shows Eisenhower leading Mr. Truman by nearly 2-to-1 in this hypothetical race.

The survey put this question to voters:

"Of course, it's still a long time away, but if the 1952 presidential election were being held today, and Eisenhower were running for President on the Republican ticket against Truman on the Democratic ticket, how do you think you would vote—for Eisenhower or Truman?"

The results:

Favor Eisenhower at present	60%
Favor Truman at present	31
Don't know	9

In interpreting this survey, it is essential to bear in mind one highly important qualification. A voter's opinion of a candidate is only one factor that influences his choice when it comes to actual voting. The other very important factor is party preference, for in American politics a person's basic party allegiance has a great effect on his voting behavior.

Today, the leading party is unquestionably still the Democratic Party. Institute surveys find that a substantially greater number of Americans look upon themselves as Democrats than as Republicans, and that more people say they would favor the Democratic Party in an election today than say they would favor the Republican Party.

Voters questioned by the institute were asked how they would classify themselves politically, or toward what party they are leaning today. When the sample is limited to those most likely to vote, the figures show:

PARTY AFFILIATION
Entire Nation

Democrat	53%
Republican	41
Other and don't know	6

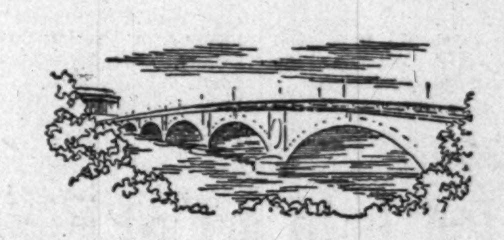
Probably the most realistic appraisal of the strength which Eisenhower and Mr. Truman could command in an actual presidential election lies somewhere in between the party strength figures and the popularity figures of the two men in the "trial heat" presented above.



Let us dress you for summer

For you, certainly for some men, the only practical summer suits should be of tropical worsted. You want to be cool but not at the sacrifice of being well-dressed. Even if the cloth is lightweight, it should hold the tailored style lines. We have such suits from Oxxford, Lebow, Freeman and Stanford Williams. Where else could you have such wonderful choice? If we recommend that you buy now it is only that the selection is greater than it can possibly be a little later.

Tropical Worsted Suits $45 & $50
Lebow Tropical Worsted Suits $75 & $80
Single or double breasted. Neat stripes, checks, and solid shades. All sizes — regulars, shorts, longs, stouts.

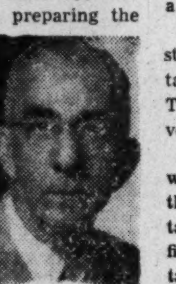
Light, Not Heat, on Kefauver Bill

By Harry N. Stull

THE Chevy Chase Citizens Association, at its last meeting, heard a factual discussion of the Kefauver bill by Dr. George B. Galloway, who assisted the Senate committee in preparing the measure. Dr. Galloway dispelled many illusions about the legislation and shed much light on a subject in which emotion, prejudice and sarcasm have been utilized by opponents in lieu of logical argument.



STULL

One might think from the attitude of certain individuals and organizations that this is some alien form of government that is about to be foisted on District residents. The election of city and town officials by the people is as old as the Nation itself. And since more than 900 cities and towns in this country are now ruled by a council-city manager form of government, that feature can hardly be called experimental.

The only real argument raised against it is that no city as large as the District has instituted it. It is definitely a success in a city of half a million people, however, and the machinery of this form of government is adaptable to cities of any size.

The appearance of a modern Paul Revere on F st. may remind many of our people that the imposition of taxes and the spending of the revenue without the consent of the people is, in effect, a tyrannical form of government. We have submitted for so long to political injustices that our sense of indignation has been dulled. It is hoped that this modest demonstration was witnessed by many who have given little consideration to the matter, as well as by those who, having a real or synthetic domicile in one of the States, are indifferent to the voteless plight of the rest of us.

Tax Repeal Moves Slowly

NO LEGISLATION has been introduced to carry out the recommendations of the District assessor that the personal property tax on household goods be abolished. It has received the approval of the Commissioners, and, it is understood, is now receiving consideration by the Corporation Counsel's office looking to the preparation of a bill.

It is always a difficult thing to repeal a tax statute unless, as in the case of the oleomargarine tax, great pressure is brought on the lawmakers. This, of course, is a practical impossibility in the voteless District.

When the sales tax was being considered, there was general agreement among those favoring it that when it was imposed, the District income tax would be repealed. When the legislation finally emerged, however, we found the income tax still in effect. This is another instance of Congress ignoring the wishes of the people.

The House vote by which the Federal payment was reduced 10 percent is a further indication that among certain members of Congress there is no consideration for the unanimous demand of Washington residents that Congress assume its full responsibility in its fiscal arrangement with the District, in view of its vast holdings here and the services it receives.

Civic-Minded Women

THE election of Miss Kathleen W. Noel as president of the Brookland Citizens Association brings to mind the fact that women are taking a much more active interest in civic affairs than heretofore. At several meetings visited by this writer, women constituted at least 50 percent of the membership present.

Since the citizen association movement was inaugurated by men, and for a number of years was conducted almost entirely by them, this increased participation by women is a wholesome sign. This movement might some day even extend to the Washington Board of Trade.

Everybody Has Byrd's Blessing

By Benjamin Muse

THIS COLUMN feels a certain reticence in presuming again to announce the policy of the Byrd machine—which, out of deference to all of the eminent gentlemen immediately concerned, let us call "the great Virginia Democratic organization." It may settle a few arguments, however, to let it be known that the organization as such is taking no part in the present race among three Democratic candidates for Congressman from the First District. That's from Senator Harry F. Byrd, no less.

MUSE

This is important, because currently the chief issue in the campaign in the district which includes Newport News, Fredericksburg and points east is the question of which is the organization man? Although there are just nine more days before the special election, national problems have not been discussed—that is, except by Nile Straughan, the Republican candidate, who is counted out as a possible winner.

The uncertainty as to who has the Byrd anointment is troubling nervous stalwarts. Apart from that, it has been a campaign only of personalities. That means good personalities, however, in this case. It is not too late for a mud-slinging bout on the home stretch, but thus far it has been a business of building up, rather than tearing down, the reputations of three men, each of whom is pretty well known and highly regarded in the district.

In This Corner . . .

TO TAKE them in alphabetical order, Blake T. Newton, 60, came up through a public school career to be, for the past four years, president of the State Board of Education. Edward J. Robeson, 59, has been with the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. since 1915. When he resigned last week, he was vice president and personnel manager. William A. Wright, 57, looks back on career of six years as a Delegate, 10 years as a State Senator and seven years as director of the Department of Conservation and Development.

Billy Wright's record puts him, beyond any doubt, on the organization honor roll. Besides his many years of following the organization line in the General Assembly and plugging for organization candidates in the primaries, few will forget the noble chore which Billy performed in riding all over the State with Organization Candidate Saxon Holt to keep Bob Daniel from beating him for lieutenant governor in 1937. Wright has been operating from the start like the anointed one, and he has, in fact, lined up most of the court house rings.

Newton's career has been a little removed from the ignoble strife of politics, but his organization friends point out that they also serve who only stand and wait. Robeson is the newest of all to the political game, but he is a former president of the Virginia Manufacturers' Association, and what better organization credentials could anyone want?

Woo Miller Vote

STRANGE as it may seem, in a district in which the organization is relatively weak—Miller got 11,619 votes to Battle's 13,682—there is no antiorganization candidate in the field. Each of the three candidates is handshaking hopefully the Miller voters, and, at the same time, tearing his shirt to corral the boys who want to follow the organization line.

But, as stated above, there is no organization line in this race. It is a free fight, and may the best man win—provided he is not a Republican. Nobody will be penalized for voting for the Democrat of his choice, and whichever wins on May 2 will enter into Abraham's bosom with the blessing of Senator Byrd.

Real Dirt Farmer

REPRESENTATIVE HOWARD W. SMITH to the author of this column: "Drew Pearson pictures me in top hat and tail coat, and you've got me in blue jeans. Why don't you newspaper fellows get together?"

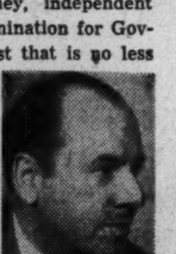
This column does not desire to insinuate that there is anything phony about Judge Smith's farming. The veteran Congressman came up as a farm boy and still spends as much time at the old family farm (turn left from Route 55 in Fauquier County, halfway between New Baltimore and Bethel) as congressional duties will permit. And he wears blue jeans every weekend.

Maryland Affairs

Mahoney Pal Is in a Fast Field

By James P. Connolly

THE appointment of Hugo Hoffman as campaign manager for George Mahoney, independent candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, focuses attention on a post that is no less important because it is behind the scenes. A campaign manager can be either a powerful force or a figurehead.



CONNOLLY

Mahoney's choice is a friend and neighbor in the Green Spring Valley, a businessman and real estate operator in Baltimore and New York, and a comparative newcomer to Maryland politics.

Hoffman's opposite number at organization headquarters is Robert Brawner (Bob) Ennis, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee and a distinguished veteran of the local political wars. That he has been on the whole a successful veteran goes without saying. In the political wars, you either succeed or you don't survive.

Came From Behind

BOB ENNIS managed Governor Lane's campaign in 1946, and, to an extent, Lane was bucking the organization then as Mahoney is now. The Curran wing of the party, then the dominant faction, was supporting Millard Tawes. H. Streett Baldwin's candidacy made it a three-corner fight, and for a while fortune was none too favorable to the Lane banner.

Ennis emerged from practical retirement to lead the Lane bid. Perhaps Lane, himself no babe in the political woods, persuaded him. Lane's try for the State House was carefully matured and timed, and the selection of Ennis as campaign manager seemed a calculated part of it. Ennis had been Lane's choice for chairman of the State Central Committee.

The two men had been associated in the long Ritchie regime, Lane as Attorney General, Ennis as an administration political leader and trouble shooter, and none knew better than Lane the Ennis background of skill and experience.

When the campaign neared a critical turn, Ennis happened to be in Florida. At an SOS from headquarters, he cut his stay short, came home and took off his coat—the way he likes to work, in his shirt sleeves. The rest is rather better known. Lane not only won but upset the balance of power in the party. The Curran outfit went under and the Lane alliance took control. It's still on top.

In the Ritchie heyday, Bob Ennis and Willie Curran between them ran the Baltimore Democratic organization for the administration. For 12 years Ennis was Ritchie's president of the Board of Election Supervisors, than which there is no better seat for a study of politics from the inside. During Ennis' tenure, voting machines were introduced, and he advocated permanent registration.

Born at Upper Marlboro, Ennis came on the political scene as an observer, a reporter covering City Hall and the State House. In 1915 he became secretary to the late Frank Furst, beloved foxy grandpaw of the party and an original sponsor of Governor Ritchie. In 1923, indorsing Ennis for chairman of the State Central Committee, Ritchie said:

"He is young, energetic, aggressive and deeply interested in the party's success. He has the confidence of those who make large campaign contributions. He probably knows more workers in both parties than any other man, and is friends with all of them. In fact, he has more friends and fewer enemies than any man I know."

Ritchie's quotes are still true today, except that Ennis is nearly 70, a 70 firm, round and fully packed. Among successful campaigns he has managed, besides those of Ritchie and Lane, were those of the late Senator William Cabell Bruce and former Mayor Howard W. Jackson. At the 1932 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, he was on the ground in advance and engineered the Ritchie Presidential boom.

Kept His Contacts

APPARENTLY the bond between Ritchie and Ennis was more than politics. It was after Ritchie's defeat and death that Ennis retired, quitting the presidency of the Concord Club, Baltimore's Democratic stronghold, and telling friends: "I'm through with politics." And he was—until he came back to field marshal the Lane fight. Against the day, he had kept his contacts.

Except for the presidency of the election board and the chairmanship of the State Central Committee, he has shunned public office and active and personal political leadership. In 1928 he shushed talk of himself as successor to the late Frank Kelly, Baltimore Democratic leader, saying:

"No one can pick a leader. It's a process of evolution, taking years, and then it's a hard, grinding job. Everybody gets after the boss. I'm a businessman."

The words were spoken with a smile, Ennis being known sometimes as "Smiling Bob." He is a businessman. He has or has had interests in the Arundell Corp., brewery and insurance enterprises and others. He maintains a home in Baltimore and a farm in Southern Maryland and regards politics as a hobby. But, as a friend said, if the game hadn't existed, he'd have invented it.

Hugo Hoffman may be overmatched.

Lean, Hard Churchillian Prose Swamped by Minutiae of 1941

By Ferdinand Kuhn

THE GRAND ALLIANCE. By Winston S. Churchill. 903 pp. Houghton, Mifflin, $6.

THE OLD master has begun to falter in his third volume. For the first time since Churchill began his great chronicle of the war, he has let himself be swamped by detail, and overwhelmed at times by the sheer mass of his material.

His story has moments of splendor, for it covers the tremendous events of 1941, but it also has long stretches where the lean, hard prose of the earlier volumes is gone. The narrative switches from one battle theater to another with little more than chronology to hold it together.

Maybe one reason is that Churchill is 75, an age at which not even Michelangelo or Titian could produce their finest work. Maybe another is that Churchill has been trying to lead a political party while writing his history, and wants to be Prime Minister again. Whatever the explanation, this volume is not Churchill at his incomparable best.

The Worst Stretch

ONE OF HIS difficulties in telling the story is that he had to sail such a confused and choppy sea in 1941. Churchill now says he cannot remember any other time when the stresses of the war bore so heavily upon him.

In the first half of the year Britain was still fighting alone, with resources far too small for her world-wide burdens. In the spring months, in the Middle East, emergencies fell from several directions at once on General Wavell, the British commander in chief.

The British had to break off a battle in Africa and move an army to Greece to meet a German attack; the troops were beaten in Greece and had to be evacuated to Crete; they were beaten again in Crete, although they destroyed the flower of the German airborne army, and had to be evacuated again to Egypt.

And at about the same time the hard-pressed Wavell had to move forces into Iraq to put down a Nazi-inspired rebellion; had to move others into Syria at a cost of 4600 casualties against the Vichy French, and carried on a wildly fluctuating battle on the Libyan desert.

'A Bitter Grief'

BLOWS and disappointments rained on Churchill without letup. In the icy North Atlantic, the battle cruiser Hood, the pride of the navy, blew up in a "mighty explosion" and sank "amidst a vast pall of smoke" during the chase of the German Bismarck. Only 3 of her 1500 men were saved; her loss, says Churchill, was "a bitter grief."

Off Greece the Germans sank two destroyers crowded with 700 men from a sunken British transport; only 50 men of the three ships survived. Off Crete the crusier Orion, crammed with 1100 evacuated troops, had 260 men killed and 280 wounded by a bomb that crashed through her bridge. Such horrors were almost commonplace in those days.

Against the advice of all his commanders, Churchill ordered a convoy with 307 tanks to make the perilous passage through the Mediterranean. The convoy got through, but the tanks failed in the battle that followed. All the risks of the convoy had been in vain. Churchill went alone to Chartwell, his home in Kent. "Here," he writes, "I got the reports of what had happened. I wandered about the valley disconsolately for some hours."

The Long View

AND YET, with all these calamities, the British held on. Churchill recalls proudly that the Crete battle "ruined the striking power of the German airborne corps"; the crushing of the Iraq revolt gave the British the mastery of wide regions; the conquest of Syria "ended, as it proved forever, the German advance toward the Persian Gulf and India," and the campaign in Greece delayed the German timetable so that, at the end of the year, Hitler's army found itself frozen in the snow outside Moscow.

Another of Churchill's difficulties in this volume, apart from telling the mixed-up Middle Eastern story, was the fact that the climaxes of 1941 took place so far from London. In 1940 Churchill saw the war reach its peak in the blitz on London; in 1941 he was far away when Hitler launched his fatal gamble against the Russians at the end of June.

But Churchill saw the invasion of Russia coming. As early as March, a trusted intelligence agent, presumably a Pole, sent word that the Germans were rerouting 60 trainloads of armor on the railroad from Bucharest to Cracow. 'To me," Churchill writes, "it illuminated the whole eastern scene like a lightning flash." He was sure that Hitler intended to invade Russia in May.

'Haughty and Purblind'

HE DID his best to warn Stalin, but got no thanks and no evidence that Moscow had taken the warning seriously.

"The Soviet government, at once haughty and purblind, regarded every warning we gave as a mere attempt of beaten men to drag others into ruin . . . The wicked are not always clever, nor are dictators always right."

The attack on Russia was, of course, the first step in forging what Churchill calls "The Grand Alliance." It was not a happy or easy alliance, for the Russians made huge demands and called insistently for a "second front." The more decisive events for Britain came later in the year with the Atlantic Charter meeting and Pearl Harbor.

By some odd omission, Churchill does not tell his first impression of President Roosevelt when he met him off Newfoundland. We learn only that the President "received me with all honors . . . and then gave me the warmest of welcomes." This is not the vivid Churchill of the 1940 volume.

But he pictures one memorable scene at the church service on the quarterdeck of the Prince of Wales, when the President and Prime Minister, their staffs and hundreds of their sailormen, prayed and sang together.

Churchill chose the hymns himself: "For Those in Peril on the Sea," "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "O God Our Help in Ages Past."

"Every word seemed to stir the heart," he remembers. "It was a great hour to live. Nearly half those who sang were soon to die."

'Weak and Naked'

THEY DIED later in the year when the Prince of Wales and the Repulse went down under Japanese bombs off Malaya. Churchill says that in all the war he never had a more direct shock than when he heard the news.

"As I twisted and turned over in bed, the full horror of the news sank in upon me. There were no British or American capital ships in the Indian Ocean or the Pacific except the American survivors of Pearl Harbor, who were hastening back to California. Over all the vast expanse of waters Japan was supreme, and we everywhere weak and naked."

Still, he knew victory would come in the end, for by this time the United States was in the war. He foresaw the future with the eyes of a prophet. On his way to Washington after Pearl Harbor, when the Pacific sky looked pitch black, he dictated three papers for Roosevelt to ponder.

One of them urged an American landing in northwest Africa in 1942, and the clearing of the whole North African coast. A second foretold initial disasters in the Pacific, but called for converted aircraft carriers in prodigious numbers as the surest way to roll Japan back to her home islands. And a third argued for a combined Anglo-American landing for the liberation of Europe in 1943.

His timetable was a little wrong, but Churchill now thinks the subsequent delays were a blessing; for if the invasion of Europe had come in 1943, he thinks there probably would have been "a world-wide disaster."

The present volume ends with a lively account of his mission to Washington after Pearl Harbor, his speeches to Congress and the Canadian Parliament, and the combined conference that fixed the grand strategy of the war. The next will tell of the turning of the tide.

Although this is an election year in England, one can only hope that Churchill will give his next book the care and the effort it deserves.

A Breath of Fresh Air

Dulles Has His Vanity —And Faith in People

WAR OR PEACE. By John Foster Dulles. 274 pp. Macmillan. $1.

THIS BOOK will astonish those who think of John Foster Dulles as a cold intellectual machine. The book has warmth and faith, and a sure belief that Western man is still the master of his fate.

Dulles is certain that the American people have greater capacity than some of their leaders give them credit for. "I have confidence," he writes, "that the people of the United States are ready to make a sustained effort for peace if this is called for by leaders, official and unofficial, whom they trust, in accordance with a program which they understand and believe in."

This is the opposite of the pernicious theory that Americans have to be frightened in their sleep before they will do what is needed to win the cold war. If Dulles affirms his belief and insists on it in his new work at the State Department, he may yet bring a breath of fresh air to policy-makers who have grown stale and weary, and who sometimes talk as if they do not trust their own people.

A Necessary 'War'

DULLES is not a fatalist as he examines the prospects of war or peace. He finds Soviet communism making "great gains," but he is not dismayed, for he thinks the West has hardly begun to use the resources at its disposal.

He sees no present alternative to the cold war; he says we began to fight it, and rightly, as long ago as the Foreign Ministers' meeting in London in September, 1945, when Secretary Byrnes refused Russia's demand to exclude France and China from the work of peacemaking. At that moment, he says, "our postwar policy of 'no appeasement' was born."

Dulles was never a shrinking violet; in reading his story of postwar foreign policy, one sometimes wonders what Truman, Marshall, Vandenberg and others were doing all these years.

He tells us that he pushed a hesitant Administration into world organization in the war years—as if Sumner Welles and his helpers at the State Department had been twiddling their thumbs. He pictures himself as the midwife at the birth of bipartisanship in August, 1944—as if Cordell Hull had not been practicing bipartisanship with Warren Austin and others long before.

He modestly writes that he led Byrnes to switch American policy on the Italian colonies in 1945; that he persuaded Truman to put the Japanese islands under strategic trusteeship; that his telephone call from Paris in 1947 gave the push that sent the interim aid bill through Congress. He even assures us that he expected the Russians to have the atomic bomb by 1949, and said so in a speech at Toronto the previous year.

Grateful to Truman

WELL, these and other little vanities can be forgiven, for Dulles writes without rancor and is sometimes generous to others. He praises President Truman in particular for having made him acting head of the American delegation at the U. N. Assembly in Paris in those 1948 days, so bitter and galling to Dulles, just after Dewey's defeat for the Presidency.

"That was a fine and generous gesture, made at the moment of victory toward one of the defeated opposition," Dulles writes now. "I was, and always shall be, grateful for this action."

A bid for Republican cooperation now, he writes, "is a sham unless it is made to loyal members of their party, trusted by party leadership." What leadership? Does he mean Senator Wherry, or Representative Martin, or Chairman Gabrielson of the National Committee, or who, or what? Couldn't he have been more explicit?

One can quarrel, too, with Dulles' overestimate of the role of the U. N., and with a few fuzzy-minded proposals. But surely he is right in his main thesis—that the moral power of world opinion, expressed in the U. N. and elsewhere, can be a giant counterweight to Soviet pressure.

The contribution Dulles makes in this book is to hold great principles and great ideals before our eyes. The job he sets for us is to mobilize our nonmilitary power—"to think less of fission bombs and more of establishing justice and ending terrorism in the world."

A Saintly Henry George Portrayed by Daughter

By Kathleen L. Barber

HENRY GEORGE: CITIZEN OF THE WORLD, by Anna George de Mille. University of North Carolina Press. 276 p. $3.50.

Printer, sailor, economic theorist and political leader, Henry George emerges from this sensitive, personal biography written by his daughter as something close to a saint. Yet the author, who spent 18 years preparing this work and died a few hours after her manuscript was accepted by the publisher, has done a careful, sustained piece of research.

This account reveals how totally both George's life and his all-absorbing idea were the products of his age, the latter half of the nineteenth century. Out of the periods of frustrating unemployment which George experienced even in the newly developing city of San Francisco, grew his conviction that poverty's chief cause was land monopoly.

He devoted the rest of his life, in books and from the lecture platform, to advancing his remedy for this economic maladjustment—a single tax on the value of land.

To George, this one great idea was not merely an economic remedy, but an almost divinely inspired mission. His single-mindedness made him the rallying point for the radicalism of millions of the victims of the railroad and other monopolies of the nineteenth century; it also dated his influence, a fact not recognized in this study.

Well developed in this biography, however, and not generally recognized in this country, is the importance of George's personal leadership in the land reform movements of England, Scotland, Ireland and Australia.

His daughter's accounts of his two campaigns for mayor of New York City, illustrated by contemporary political cartoons, are among the most interesting chapters of the book. A Tammany leader later admitted that George had been defeated in his first attempt through fraudulent returns. "Of course," he said, "they could not allow a man like Henry George to be Mayor of New York. It would upset all their arrangements."

The flow of political events of George's lifetime is interlarded with ingenuous little stories of his love for ice cream, his concern for the author's broken dolls and other appealing family details.

Frankly inspired by filial love, this biography makes a singular contribution to the definite work which will someday be written on the "Prophet of San Francisco."

SALAR THE SALMON. By Henry Williamson. Little, Brown. 301 pp. Ill. $3.50.

"SALAR," the story of a salmon through what would correspond in the finny world to the "seven ages of man," has been reissued in a handsome format with illustrations by C. F. Tunnicliffe, who also illustrated "Tarka the Otter." The author, Henry Williamson, is both naturalist and effective writer, and "Salar" will give pleasure to nature lovers who have not previously read the book.

ROOSEVELT FROM MUNICH TO PEARL HARBOR. By Basil Rauch. (527 pp). Creative Age. $4.50.

THIS "study in the creation of a foreign policy" seeks to demolish the theory of the late Charles A. Beard and others that President Roosevelt plotted to push us into the war. It draws on the flood of postwar memoirs and documents to show that Beard distorted the record and built his case on error. It is an absorbing and well written story, but it cannot clinch the argument for it rests largely on the personal recollections of the men around Roosevelt. Until our laggard Government publishes the full documents on the pre-Pearl Harbor period, from the White House files as well as from the State Department, how can any historian prove conclusively that Beard was wrong?

DOWN THE RIVER. By Richard Anderson. Binfords & Mort, Portland, Oreg. 209 pp. $2.50.

RICHARD ANDERSON has written a novel of the emotional cross-currents of a group of salmon fishers along the banks of the Columbia River, their responses to each other and to the river, with unusual perception and skill. His book should be of more than regional interest.

HITCH YOUR WAGON: The Story of Bernt Balchen. By Clayton Knight and Robert C. Durham. Bell. $3.50.

WHEN Bernt Balchen learned to fly as a Norwegian naval cadet, he was unknowingly qualifying himself to become a key figure in the spectacular expansion of aviation which began in the '20s. His knowledge of cold-weather aerial problems won the attention of Explorers Roald Amundsen and Richard E. Byrd, and the latter was responsible for his migration to America. Subsequently, Balchen flew the Atlantic with Acosta and Byrd, and piloted Byrd over the South Pole in 1929. Balchen's biographers provide a mass of factual detail on his venturesome career, including his World War II exploits and the background against which he moved. One of them, Robert C. Durham, worked with Balchen on many of his combat missions.

Beyond the Dark

LEO LANIA, author of "The Nine Lives of Europe" (Funk & Wagnalls), apologizes for being an optimist. But he assures the prophets of doom who may criticize his book that his hopeful view of the future is not based on an insulated and sheltered life. Says Mr. Lania: "I have survived two wars, three revolutions, four concentration camps and 50 years of wandering." The future, to such a man, can scarcely be as dark as the past.

Independent Mind s Interacting

Our Most Brilliant Friendship

JEFFERSON AND MADISON, The Great Collaboration. By Adrienne Koch. Knopf. 294 pp. $4.

ADRIENNE KOCH begins her fine book with several quotations, one of which is taken from John Quincy Adams:

"Mr. Madison was the intimate, confidential and devoted friend of Mr. Jefferson, and the mutual influence of these two mighty minds upon each other is a phenomenon, like the invisible and mysterious movements of the magnet in the physical world, and in which the sagacity of the future historian may discover the solution of much of our national history not otherwise easily accountable."

This 1839 statement is particularly apt in that it describes not only the friendship of two great Virginians but Dr. Koch's book.

"Jefferson and Madison appear to have met in 1776 as fellow members of the Virginia House of Delegates," according to Dr. Koch. "They became friendlier during the early months of Jefferson's Governorship, in the summer of 1779, when Madison, as a member of the Virginia Council of State, had the opportunity to confer with Jefferson daily."

Jefferson was then 36. Madison was the junior by eight years.

'Take Care of Me'

THE relationship, which Jefferson described shortly before his death in 1826 as "private friendship and political harmony," continued, in a sense, the 10 more years to Madison's death—for Jefferson, at Monticello, near the end had written, "Take care of me when dead, and be assured that I shall leave with you my last affections," and Madison heeded the injunction.

How profitable the friendship was for each of the friends—and for the country which benefited by their abilities—is indicated in the early years, when each of the men contributed to the development of the other. Jefferson loaned Madison the notes he had taken on the debates in the Continental Congress concerning independence. (Years later Madison was to loan Jefferson the notes he took on the Constitutional Convention).

When Jefferson was serving his country in France, he sent books to the scholarly Madison in the book-poor United States. In return, Madison kept Jefferson posted on political developments at home.

The only awkward moment in the long friendship appears to have been Madison's studied neglect to mention to Jefferson his connection with the Federalist Papers until they were published in book form. Jefferson seems to have taken the incident in his stride.

How strongly Madison felt the bond of friendship is indicated by assuring Jefferson that his marriage to Dolley would have no effect on the relationship between the two men.

The Political Aspects

BY and large, Dr. Koch's book is concerned with the political aspects of the friendship and in particular with certain revealing highlights of that.

These include Jefferson's belief that the Constitution should contain a bill of rights (a belief expressed in the first amendments to the Constitution); Jefferson's theory that "the earth belongs to the living" and his questioning whether the constitutions shaped and the public debts incurred by one generation should be binding on future generations; the struggles with Hamilton's theories; the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions; the founding of the University of Virginia. The period when Madison served as President Jefferson's Secretary of State, one regrets, is skimped.

Dr. Koch, who has shed new light in a number of corners in assaying the relationship of the two great philosopher-statesman, suggests that Jefferson was the more speculative and daring in his thinking, and that Madison was the more astute politician.

Madison, she makes clear, was not subordinate to Jefferson, but possessed an independent mind—one of the two independent minds that interacted in what is probably the most brilliant friendship in American history.—LEE GROVE.

The Mortal William

The Flesh-and-Blood Shakespeare as an Actor

By James G. McManaway

Dr. McManaway, an internationally known Shakespeare scholar, is consultant in literature and bibliography at the Folger Shakespeare Library; American correspondent for the annual "Shakespeare Survey," published by the Cambridge University Press, and chairman of the advisory board for the Shakespeare Quarterly.

SHAKESPEARE OF LONDON. By Marchette Chute. Dutton. 397 pp. $4.

"HE WAS not for an age, but for all time," wrote Ben Jonson about his friend and fellow playwright, William Shakespeare. He might have said with equal truth that he was not for a nation but for all mankind, for wherever his works are read or acted, he is loved.

Often Shakespeare the man is forgotten in the contemplation of Shakespeare the universal genius. This, perhaps, is as it should be, for indeed "the play's the thing" and the author merely "such stuff as dreams are made on."

Neglect of Shakespeare the man and indifference to the customs and attitudes and preconceptions of the men of Stratford where he was born and of London in which he flourished, can have serious results. It can and does rob us of the full enjoyment of his writings; for some people it can even lead to doubts about the authorship of the works. If the author is not presented to us as a flesh-and-blood man, we may make a myth of him and ascribe his writings to one or another contemporary or to a coterie of conspirators.

A Peerless Company

"SHAKESPEARE of London" is intended to give a personal acquaintance with the actor and playwright as he was known to his friends. As Miss Chute tells his story from contemporary records, we see him a leading member of a company of actors who lived and worked together, honestly, soberly, industriously and with such skill that during the two decades of Shakespeare's active life they were peerless.

The plague might bring temporary reverses; the boy actors might steal the affections of the London audiences for a season. But year after year the company of which Shakespeare was a sharer, in which he acted, and for which he wrote plays, was preeminent. And when James came to the throne in 1603, he crowned their efforts by naming them the King's Men.

Dazzled by the versatility and brilliance of the Elizabethans, and shocked by their occasional violence we tend to forget that Shakespeare's closest friends for over 20 years were property holders, businessmen, church wardens—not a rakehelly rout of rogues and vagabonds.

Criticism Excluded

CONCENTRATING on Shakespeare the man, Miss Chute excludes from consideration the criticism of his poetry and plays and leaves to others the appreciation of Shakespeare as literature. With only an occasional lapse in her references to textual and bibliographical problems, she presents a sane and balanced account of the mortal William; and her book, within her self-imposed limits, is trustworthy and interesting.

Gilbert and Sullivan

Unique Partnership—'Equal and Opposite'

Edited by John Barkham

THE WORLD OF GILBERT AND SULLIVAN. By W. A. Darlington. Crowell. 209 pp. $3.50.

"THERE never was a partnership so equal and so opposite in the theater: each man had exactly what the other needed." These words, from the foreword of Brooks Atkinson, exactly hit off the Gilbert and Sullivan collaboration. In this book, an old Savoyard, British Drama Critic W. A. Darlington, tells again the remarkable story.

Mr. Darlington is, of course, an adherent of the D'Oyly Carte tradition, which has preserved the performance of the operas as they were originally done. Some critics like to think that this preservation, or "ossification" (as they call it), should yield to fresher ideas. Be that as it may, no style of performance can hide the ironic gusto of the text or the rippling beauty of the music.

Mr. Darlington tells many of the stories behind the operas, to say nothing of the stories about the uneasy collaborators themselves. Although history has forever linked their names, the two men never got around to calling each other by their first names.

The comedy of Gilbert and Sullivan was basically a comedy of situation, and, as the author points out, most of the comedies that live have a bony structure of situation beneath their surface qualities. That, plus the magic of the music and the text, makes it difficult to imagine any generation of theatergoers that will not revel in the predicaments of Ko-Ko and Nanki-poo, or Iolanthe and the Lord Chancellor.

Lords of the Teletype

THE KANSAS CITY MILKMAN. By Reynolds Packard. 319 pp. $3.

REYNOLDS PACKARD is the male half of the husband-and-wife team which covered Europe and Asia so spectacularly for one of the larger news agencies before, during and after World War II. He is now working for a New York daily, and in this novel does a slashing debunk job on the methods and mores of the news agency business. Reynolds is smart enough to wrap his opinions in a fictional package, but the lords of the teletype who adorn his pages will have no difficulty in recognizing themselves.

The two foreign correspondents on whom the story is pegged are an old-timer, who adheres to the traditional principles of newsgathering and writing, and an up-and-coming youngster unfettered by such scruples. Wives, mistresses, Communists, office intrigues, the business of peddling the news—all these are stirred up into a swift, often tingling narrative. Through it all runs the note of cynical disillusionment implicit in the title: "The story is badly written if it can't be understood by the Kansas City milkman."

Reynolds Packard was probably working something out of his system when he wrote this book, but that, if anything, has enhanced its readability. Here's the how and who on the men who deliver your news.

Hindu and Moslem

THE WORLD IS A BRIDGE. By Christine Weston. Scribner. 276 pp. $3.

WHEN the British quit India, they left a vacuum which, rather unexpectedly, has been filled with racist violence. Hardly a week passes but the headlines tell of a Hindu-Moslem conflict that mocks at the ideals for which Gandhi died. In her new novel, Mrs. Weston writes of this new India, where the hatred of the Moslem for the Hindu, and vice versa, far surpasses anything either ever felt for the British.

The best thing about the book is the way in which it conveys these tensions to the printed page. The author has filled her story with a colorful gallery of characters who for the first time find themselves not Indians first, but Hindus or Moslems. Violence and intrigue stalk through the story, but always events and personal relationships revert back to the consequences of Partition.

If the function of fiction is to interpret reality, it is good fiction.

The State of Europe

THE NINE LIVES OF EUROPE. By Leo Lania. Funk & Wagnalls. 278 pp. $3.50.

MR. LANIA rather pointedly calls himself an optimist, but the picture of Europe he paints is that of a pessimist. His book is a report on that troubled continent as he found it on a visit last year. "Behind the ruins of today," he writes, "I tried to gain a vision of the future. It was a sad, frightening vision."

After this gloomy opening, it is hardly surprising to learn that our author found the German problem to be "as vexing as ever," that Britain would "not help" in forming a European federation, that France felt "debased as a pawn in the conflict between two giants," that people everywhere "wandered in circles as if lost." The West, he believes, suffers from a "sickness of mind," the East from a "sickness of soul."

Being himself a European by birth (this is his first book written in English), Mr. Lania tends to become too depressed by what he saw. It is true there is little in Europe to be complacent about, but he forgets how deep was the slough of despond from which western Europe has, with notable success, extricated itself. Barring bombs, the process will continue.

The reader will, however, find no difficulty in agreeing with Mr. Lania's rather self-conscious conclusion: let us do what we think right, and let Stalin worry about counteracting our offensive for recovery.

Giant Goes Native on The Veld

A GROVE OF FEVER TREES. By Daphne Rooke. Houghton Mifflin. 246 pp. $2.75.

THE hero's father and grandfather both died in a lunatic asylum—homicidal maniacs. Danny, however, wasn't really homicidal. It was only because he had hated his brother from childhood that he killed him. Edward was gifted and popular, and Prudence loved him.

And Danny tried to kill his own son because the boy reminded him of Edward. He forced his sister into an unfortunate marriage, and tried to ruin his secret flame Prudence's life.

The plot unfolds in an isolated English settlement on the African Thornveld. Its author, Daphne Rooke, spent her childhood on cane plantations in Natal and northern Zululand, and lived on a farm at the foot of the Lebombo Mountains next to the Native Reserve, as did the family in the book.

Thus her first novel, which shared the first prize with Elizabeth Webster's "Ceremony of Innocence" in the Afrikander Press novel contest, is dripping with sun-baked realism.

Her hero, Danny, a handsome giant, goes native most of the time, with his reactions about as primitive. It started when he saw a snake bite his sister, and could do nothing about it.

The story can't be taken too seriously. No great sympathy is built up for any of the characters. It moves at the clip of a serial and has several minor climaxes. Miss Rooke shows a definite talent for deft dialogue and precise phrasings, but the over-all plot construction is a bit uneven.—THOMAS SCHLESINGER.

Nightmare of Death and Fear In Africa's Shimmering Sun

THE SHORT CUT. By Ennio Flaiano. Pellegrini & Cudahy. 302 pp. $3.

THE time is the latter part of Mussolini's Ethiopian campaign, and the central figure a young Italian officer. The officer, who tells the story in the first person, has just been thrown from an overturned army truck. He decides to take a short cut.

The lieutenant, who has a toothache and is in a hurry to reach a dentist, expects to cut his traveling time in half. The short cut turns out to be long and harrowing for both the lieutenant and the reader.

He runs across an attractive native girl, Mariam, bathing in an isolated pool. After watching her with all the interest of an elder looking at Susannah, forgetting his sweetheart home in Italy, the lieutenant and the girl spend a night among the boulders.

Roused during the night by a marauding animal, the lieutenant fires at it, and returns to find his shot has found its mark in the girl's abdomen. Sure that he cannot find a doctor to heal her, he shoots her through the head as an act of mercy not unmixed with selfish motives of personal fear, and buries her in secret.

Flaiano's hero is no "hero." The lieutenant becomes convinced that he has contracted leprosy from Mariam, and his story becomes a prolonged nightmare flight from reality. But the nightmare ends with things turning out relatively well for the lieutenant, who concludes, as he prepares to return to Italy with his unit: "It seems to me pointless to talk of crimes since no one is looking for me."

And the lieutenant to whom he is talking replies: "No one will ever look for you. We are all innocent."

Which is to say, that men are victims of events beyond their control and of consciences that haunt them, and between them men make their own hells.

Whether the reader accepts this idea, or considers it merely a form of neuroticism, he will find the lieutenant's fear in an Africa of overturned trucks, shimmering sun and sordid life, contagious.—LEE GROVE.

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

LAST fall Norton published Lillian Smith's remarkable "Killers of the Dream." The book has now been followed up with a three-page printed report "in reply to hundreds of letters which cannot be individually answered now."

The report begins: "No—in answer to numerous queries—the Klan has not burned my home down. And people still 'speak to me' in Clayton (Ga., her home). Real friends are always friends; the others don't count.

"Yes—in reply to the second question—I receive my share of threatening, obscene, anonymous letters. But they have only nuisance value . . .

"As for reviews: Southern reviews, with the exception of Georgia, have been fairly good. In the North, the reviews have been more favorable than on 'Strange Fruit'—though in at least half 'Killers of the Dream' was totally misunderstood and reviewed as a book on 'the Negro problem.'

"But, Atlanta—oh, my! The book and its author are bitterly fought there. Not by Talmadge as you might think (at least, not yet), but by the conservative group, spearheaded by Ralph McGill and Jack Tarver, who, with Hodding Carter of Mississippi, think of themselves as 'the voice of the South.' It seems to excite them when other Southerners say things that deviate from the 'Leave us alone!' line."

After a discussion of the book's reception in the South, where "many of the liberal leaders" consider the book important and others have been silent, and in the North, where some people going into bookshops "pick up the book, look at it fascinated as if gazing at a rattlesnake, and walk out again," she writes:

"Is it being read? Yes, 20,000 were sold almost immediately; then about 10,000 more. And suddenly, nothing more happened. It looked as if the blanket of silence had done what the book's enemies wanted it to do. But a few weeks ago, it began to stir."

On a more personal note, she adds that in between work periods on a long novel, she is writing a movie titled, "Susanna and Her Sons," which is "about the Wesley family, the founders of the Methodist Church. I have fallen in love with that family, with John and Charles—who were so concerned with the common man's uncommon soul—and with their amazing mother."

Abstract Questions of Cost

Social Security Study Ignores Human Element

By John J. Corson

THE COST AND FINANCING OF SOCIAL SECURITY. By Lewis Meriam, Karl Schlotterbeck and Mildred Maroney. Brookings Institution. $3.

THESE authors warn that the present Social Security system is faulty and that the changes proposed may bring taxes larger than this country can pay.

Two-thirds of this little volume are devoted to descriptive analyses of each part of the system—old age, survivors and disability insurance, unemployment compensation, proposed health insurance, public assistance, benefits for veterans and private pension systems. The authors' focus is always on the costs and the factors which tend to increase them.

In summary, they (a) deplore the growing costs, (b) contend that the present "trust fund" for financing old age and survivors insurance is a fiction—serving only to confuse, and (c) object that the system is not "insurance" in any real sense.

Bad as the existing system is, Mr. Meriam and his colleagues argue, current proposals for expanding the system are even more dangerous. The cost of each provision is estimated and added together to yield a prediction that the aggregate cost of Social Security in the year 2000 would be between 33 and 55 billion dollars.

Rigid Limitations

THE MERIAM prescription for remedying these deficiencies is not new. It was presented in fuller form in his book, "Relief and Social Security," in 1946, and has been reiterated in two or more Brookings publications since. He would have the Federal Government provide benefits only for the aged, the widowed, orphaned and disabled who are in need. For these, he would provide only enough to insure minimum health and decency.

Veterans, he agrees, might be given "special recognition" by more generous treatment when determining if they are in need. He would make no public provision for the sick. And he would offer no objection to the further development of private pension systems.

There is no denying the main contention of this volume: Social Security costs large sums now and will cost more in the future. Yet this discovery must be viewed in perspective.

Social Security today claims less than 5 percent of the national income; in 2000, taking this volume's maximum estimate, it will likely still claim less than 7 percent. Moreover, much of this cost has always been borne by individuals; a Government Social Security program simply provides a more orderly system for assuring that funds are available to all in the usual times of adversity.

Thoroughly Studied

AS FOR the two criticisms of the financing of old age and survivors insurance, they were disposed of by eminent authorities repeatedly within the past decade. Old age and survivors insurance is insurance in the sense that it constitutes an orderly provision in advance for a future contingency. Certainly it differs from private insurance; Congress learned in 1939 that it is folly to pattern this social insurance strictly along the forms of private insurance.

Congress has studied, too, the criticisms of the old age reserve. It consulted with an advisory council of leading citizens in 1939, and concluded then that the reserve did not, as these authors contend, encourage wasteful spending or dissipate the funds contributed by those who would subsequently expect security. In 1947 the reserve was again reviewed and approved by a second advisory council.

In the hands of these authors, the problem of subsistence for an increasing number of aged, orphaned, widowed, unemployed and sick becomes an abstract matter of taxes, cost, prices and profits. Whether Americans—flesh and blood men and women—want something better than relief when they are old, unemployed or sick is not considered.

Whether Americans want to contribute (as Sir William Beveridge contended the Britons do) toward the cost of their own security through direct taxes would, to these writers, seem wholly irrelevant. Such evidence as there is that the American people generally approve of existing Social Security arrangements and want them expanded and improved, is not found here.

About Books

BOOKS have always a secret influence on the understanding. We cannot at pleasure obliterate ideas. He that reads books of science, though without any fixed desire of improvement, will grow more knowledge. He that entertains himself with moral or religious treatises will imperceptibly advance in goodness. The ideas which are often offered to the mind will at least find a lucky moment when it is disposed to receive them.

Bosox Lose in 15th on Lehner's Homer

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

NEW YORK, APRIL 22.—Much of the Yankees' interest in Ray Scarborough stems from their desire to keep him away from the Red Sox who have offered Washington $150,000 and four players for the pitcher . . . While in the Navy during the war, Pitcher Tommy Byrne was begging another chance with the Yankees, and wrote Manager Joe McCarthy from Africa that he was pitching for a Navy team and "at last I have found my control." . . . McCarthy wasn't excited, except to comment: "He gets 3000 miles away from the Yankee Stadium pitching mound, and then he finds his control." . . . Dizzy Dean, doing the pregame radio programs for the Yankees, is out of patience with the umpires who are calling all those balks under the new rules. "If I am a pitcher and they call that kind of balk on me," says Dean, "I am handing my glove to the umpire and telling him 'here, you know so much about pitching, take this and try it'." . . . After watching one Washington pitcher commit a balk by failing to come to a full stop before delivering the ball, Dean said: "He should-a come to a full stop before he came into the park, and then not bothered to come in." . . . Milt Gross pens the latest Yogi Berra-ism. When Berra was chided for not buying a new suitcase to replace his beaten-up bag, he explained: "I only use it for traveling."

POVICH

FRANK LANE, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, points out that he is taking every care to make his non-English-speaking shortstop, Alphonse Carrasquel, happy with the Chicago club . . . "We even bought Luis Aloma, a pitcher, from Buffalo, so Carrasquel could have an interpreter with him," pointed out Lane. To get Aloma, Lane used Carrasquel's uncle, Alex, as trading material . . . Branch Rickey is raising hob with the television people who persuaded the Ebbets Field ground keepers to cover pitching mound and baselines with black loam to make them more photogenic. It cost the Dodgers a run the other day when Gil Hodges, sliding into the plate, hit the new dirt and stopped dead. . . . Lou Nova, who once was hit by the hardest punch Joe Louis ever threw (once was enough), now is a full-fledged sportswriter who covers the New York scene for four California newspapers . . . The Nats were happy to see the Red Sox sign Ken Keltner, which crowds their roster and will force Boston to ask waivers on one more player before the May 18 25-player limit . . . when that date comes, and the Yankees are also forced to cut down, either Gus Niarhos or Ralph Houk will leave the club. The two catchers jointly rented an apartment with the understanding that the man who stays with the club picks up the lease.

THE GIANTS, already running a bad third in three-team New York, sacrificed too much hitting in the trade with the Braves to get Leo Durocher "his kind of team." Durocher's kind of team isn't pleasing the Giants' fans . . . American League pitchers are squawking that the umpires should have enforced the new balk rule during the training season so they could have been prepared for it . . . The famous Man O' War was not the first thoroughbred runner by that name. Early in the century, the original Man O' War was a cheap selling plater that took many a beating on American tracks . . . Offers of exhibition dates and endorsement fees have been showered on the Bauer Sisters since they turned pro. Manager Freddie Corcoran has revised upward his estimate that they will gross $50,000 in the next year. He now has set the figure at $100,000 . . . Frank Walsh, one of the top teaching pros, defends Marlene Bauer's much-criticized backswing as a good one, and not at all unsound . . . They're the same old Yankees in one sense: Joe Page figured in three of their first four games . . . Jackie Robinson has now replaced Bob Feller as the ball player with the most sidelines . . . Robinson lends his name to miniature bats, gloves, candy bars, clothes and also conducts a radio program when the Dodgers are at home.

DESPITE HIS DISLIKE for General Manager George Weiss, Bucky Harris is still popular with the Yankee players he managed in 1947-48. One of them walked into the Washington dugout to shake hands with Harris the other day, and when informed he could be fined $200 for fraternizing with the opposition, he retorted: "It would be worth it." . . . Harris has one distinction in his job with the Nats: He has more authority to make deals than any other manager in the league except Connie Mack, who happens to own the club he manages . . . Hank Greenberg has put himself squarely on the spot with a prediction that "Luke Easter will win or lose the pennant for the Indians," also putting Easter on the spot . . . The White Sox are one of the clubs that would like to see the Browns' franchise moved to a more profitable locale. They drew only 27,000 fans in the 11 games they played in St. Louis last season, and didn't pay hotel and train expenses . . . Of the five home runs hit in Friday's Nats-Yankee game, only Eddie Robinson's would have been a homer in Griffith Stadium.

Braves Win 3d Straight, 3-2, Over Phils

Boston, April 22 (AP).—Boston's unbeaten Braves won their third victory of the infant National League season today, shading Philadelphia's Phillies 3-2 on Bob Elliott's two-run homer into the right-field pen in the eighth inning.

A chilled crowd of 7,607 saw the Tribe come from behind to pull out the victory — Lefthander Warren Spahn's second of the campaign.

Elliott's game winning homer—first of the year at Braves Field—was his second of the season. Sam Jethroe, who had walked, scored ahead of the Boston third baseman.

Cubs Defeat Cards On Smalley's Homer

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—Roy Smalley smashed a homer in the ninth inning to lift the Chicago Cubs to a 7-6 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals before 24,122 today. It was the third straight victory of the season for the Cubs.

Smalley's homer broke a tie that had endured from the sixth inning as relief hurlers Walt Dubiel and Howie Pollet dueled. Dubiel allowed only one scratch hit in the final three and two-thirds innings.

After Cub Pitchers Bill Voiselle and Johnny Vander Meer were kayoed in the first two innings, the Cubs moved out in front with a five-run explosion that routed Gerry Staley in the fifth Preston Ward put the dynamite in the rally with a bases-loaded triple.

Stan Musial of the Cards doubled across the tying run in a two-run uprising that routed Paul Minner in the sixth. Dubiel came in to retire the side on a double play with the bases loaded.

Nagy—A Lefthanded Leonard

A LOT of fans were asking last night, who is Steve Nagy, what's he got, and how did the Nats happen to get him?

They got curious after the little lefthander held the world champion New York Yankees to nine hits and beat them, 7-6, yesterday at Yankee Stadium.

A glance at Nagy's career points up a striking parallel with that of Dutch Leonard, Nats' ace pitcher of a few years back.

Both were cast aside after trials in the National League, and were drafted by Washington when they were 29 years old and supposedly over the hill. Neither one could boast of much of a fast ball, but relied on control and lots of savvy.

Leonard, a righthander, depended on his knuckler to win 20 games for Washington in 1937. Nagy's chief stock in trade is a sharp curve.

Nagy, only 5 feet 9 inches tall, and 174 pounds, is a Newark, N. J., native, and got his schooling at Seton Hall. His coach there was Al Mammaux, oldtime Pirates pitcher.

Steve started in pro ball with Durham, N. C., in 1942, and had trials with Brooklyn in 1946, and Pittsburgh in 1947, winning one and losing three for the Pirates.

Last year, while he was winning 15 and losing 14 for San Francisco in the Coast League, Nagy was spotted by Bucky Harris, then piloting San Diego. Harris suggested to Clark Griffith, his old boss, that the Nats get hold of Nagy. Griff did, much to his pleasure, it now develops.

Houtteman Blanks Chisox

Detroit, April 22 (AP).—Young Art Houtteman turned in his second win of the young American League season as he blanked the Chicago White Sox 5-0 today to give the Detroits Tigers their fourth straight triumph before a crowd of 15,548.

Houtteman pitched a masterful game, allowing only four hits as nary a Chicagoan got to third base.

The Tiger righthander pitched two innings and got credit for the Tigers' opening day 7-6 win over the Cleveland Indians.

It was a tough loss for pitcher Bill Wight, who pitched good ball only to see his White Sox team drop its fourth consecutive game. Wight pitched two-run, six-hit ball through the first seven innings before he was lifted for a pinchhitter in the eighth.

Priddy Fined for Violating Curfew After Tavern Tour

Detroit, April 22 (AP).—Detroit Tiger Second Baseman Gerry Priddy was fined by the ball club today for violating curfew rules in a tour of taverns with a Detroit detective last night.

Manager Red Rolfe called a special press conference before today's Detroit-Chicago game to announce levying of the fine, but he declined to disclose the amount.

Best guesses were between $50 and $100.

Rolfe told newsmen, "our investigation shows that Priddy broke only one rule, the midnight curfew. He was not drunk."

The Tiger manager added, "it looks as if Priddy was just unfortunate in being in company with a policeman who reportedly took a drink while on duty. As far as we can learn Priddy was not out much later than midnight, but it was late enough to break our rule."

Priddy said he was "not kicking about the fine." But he added:

"What burns me up is that it looks like I was out of the town. I wasn't. I don't like to be tied up with a guy who gets in trouble."

The second baseman said he met Patrolman Donald E. Pape while eating dinner in a downtown restaurant. The officer offered him a ride back to his hotel, Priddy said, but said he had to make a few stops in his squad car on the way.

"I tell him okay," the player went on. "We make a couple of stops. I don't do anything wrong. But when I get back to the hotel, it's a quarter to one. I get up Saturday morning and see in the papers that the detective goes on and gets in trouble. So I guess that makes me guilty of something or other."

Pape was suspended today for being drunk on duty and allowing a private citizen to ride in a police car.

Middleground 2d to Virginia Derby Hope

By John Chandler

New York, April 22 (AP).—Hill Prince, Virginia's big hope for the Kentucky Derby, showed today that his floundering exhibition in the Experimental Handicap a week ago was all a big mistake when he romped to a sparkling victory in the Wood Memorial.

Coming from far off the fast pace set by Alfred Vanderbilt's Next Move, Hill Prince caught the leader just as they straightened into the drive for home.

From there on, everybody in the crowd of 44,111 knew that the Virginian and Jockey Eddie Arcaro were going to make it without any difficulty.

Middleground Second

Middleground, the chestnut beauty from King Ranch, closed ground in the stretch to overtake Next Move and Mrs. Andy Schuttinger's Ferd and grab second money.

The King Ranch colt was two lengths back of the winner at the wire.

Ferd passed the tiring Next Move, only filly in the field of 11 starters, inside the sixteenth pole and took third, a length and a half back of Middleground, and three fourths of a panel ahead of the Vanderbilt miss.

Hill Prince's time was a dazzling 1:43 3-5—fastest for the Wood Memorial since Count Fleet romped home on top in 1943.

The winner was the choice of the huge Jamaica crowd in spite of last week's effort, and returned $5.00, $3.40 and $2.80. Middleground paid $3.00 and $2.60 as second choice, and Ferd, $4.50.

Arcaro His Derby Jockey

Immediately after the race, the grinning Arcaro said he will ride Hill Prince in the Derby at Louisville two weeks from today.

"He was Hill Prince today," Arcaro said. "He's a real tough horse." The bob-tailed colt, who stumbled, bounced off the fence, and finally smacked into the rear

Bums Outslug Giants, 7-6

Brooklyn, April 22 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers, helped by an error by rookie first baseman Jack Harshman, shaded the New York Giants, 7-6, today for their third straight victory of the season. The loss was the Giants fourth of a winless campaign.

Harshman's error, a wild pitch and George Shuba's double down the right field foul line broke a 6-6 tie in the eighth inning and scored Pitcher Jack Banta with the winning run.

Handsome Jack Kramer, former American Leaguer, made his National League debut for the Giants against Negro Dan Bankhead, who was making his first appearance for the Dodgers since 1947. Kramer helped his own cause with a two-run homer in the fourth and had a 5-1 lead going into the fifth when he was belted out.

Bombers Going Out of Business

St. Louis, April 22 (U.P.)—The St. Louis Bombers of the National Basketball Association are going out of business, President C. D. P. Hamilton announced tonight.

Hamilton said that a last-ditch effort to sell the franchise to a group of local businessmen has failed. The group refused to take a gamble on a club which has lost money for the past four seasons. General Manager Emory Jones of the Bombers will attend the association's meeting in Chicago Monday and arrange for dissolution of the club

Kellner Goes Route as Macks Beat Kinder, 6-5

Philadelphia, April 22 (AP).—Pinchhitter Paul Lehner opened the last half of the fifteenth inning with a home run off Relief Pitcher Ellis Kinder to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 6-to-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox in the major league's longest game of the season.

Lehner, who was thrown into a deal by the St. Louis Browns last winter that sent Third Baseman

Bob Dillinger to the Athletics for $100,000 and four players, handed Kinder—a 25 game winner in 1949—his second straight loss of the campaign. The diminutive outfielder batted for left hander Alex Kellner who went the route for the A's, allowing 12 hits while walking eight and striking out eight.

Kellner, a 20-game winner last year, was off to a shaky start when Vernon Stephens doubled home two Red Sox runs and he wild pitched another across. Boston scored again in the third on Stephen's single and Al Zarilla's two bagger.

The A's reached starting pitcher Charley Stobbs for three runs in the fourth on Bob Dillinger's double and singles by Pete Suder, Kellner and Eddie Joost after a walk to Sam Chapman. Ferris Fain's home run in the fifth made it 4-4.

Boston broke the tie in the seventh on two walks and Tom O'Brien's clutch single. But the A's chased Stobbs in the eighth and tied the count on singles by Mike Guerra, Kellner and Eddie Joost. That's the way it remained until Lehner's payoff shot over the right field wall.

Detroit Evens Stanley Series

Detroit, April 22 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings staged a thrilling uphill battle tonight to beat the New York Rangers, 5 to 4, and even their Stanley Cup hockey series at three games apiece. The deciding game will be played tomorrow.

The New Yorkers surged into a two goal lead in the first seven minutes of the game and held a 3-1 margin until the five minute mark of the second period.

But then the Detroiters, champions of the National Hockey League, came to life and tied it up before the second period ended.

New York moved out in front again 4-3 in the see-saw battle but Detroit tied it up again and finally bounced in their fifth and winning goal at the midway point of the period to thrill the small crowd of 12,045.

Kiner Swats 500-Foot Homer As Pirates Crush Reds, 9-2

Pittsburgh, April 22 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates kept their heavy artillery rattling today, smashing out four home runs to crush the Cincinnati Reds 9-2 for their fourth straight triumph.

The crowd of 14,533 cheered as Ralph Kiner skyrocketed his second round tripper of the season over the left field wall for probably the longest homer of his career. The 500-footer cleared the fence by more than 60 feet and was gaining height as it left the park.

Encouraged by Kiner's batting, three of his teammates—Ted Beard, Nanny Fernandez and Wally Westlake—helped themselves to four-baggers. It was Kiner's second in two days and Westlake's third. Beard's clout was inside the park.

Pittsburgh's Danny Murtaugh claimed two doubles and a single for a perfect day at bat.

Bob Chesnes racked up his first win of 1950, allowing the Reds eight scatered hits. None of the earned. The Bucs collected 12 earned. The Bucs colected 12 hits and drove John Hetki from the mound in the second.

NBA Suggests Longer Rest For Fighters

Hoping to reduce the number of serious injuries incurred in boxing, the National Boxing Association yesterday sugested that the intervals between rounds be increased.

The executive committee, holding a two-day meeting here, recommended that member States experiment with a 90-second interval instead of the present 60 seconds rest period now used.

Three States, Michigan, Florida and Rhode Island, are now experimenting with the 90-second rest period.

Seeking to form a closer relationship with the European Boxing Union, the NBA executives adopted the recommendation of the European Boxing Union that all boxers leaving the United States for Europe be cleared by the NBA and that European boxers be similarly cleared for appearance in this country.

The Association will concur with the British Board of Boxing Control in any action of suspension of Manuel Ortiz, the bantamweight champion of the world, if a violation of contract to box in London is officially reported and substantiated by the BBBC.

The Conference recommended acceptance of recognition of cablegrams and telegrams authenticated and confirmed by the Commission concerned, as binding contracts when such cablegrams and telegrams include the weight, purse and opponent concerned.

West Virginia Loses 7th Game, 8-1

George Washington University won its seventh straight by outclassing West Virginia, 8-1, behind the two-hit pitching of Ed Hughes and Joe Kennelly at Griffith Stadium yesterday. It was also the seventh straight loss for the Mountaineers.

Hughes, sophomore righthander, who used to pitch for Coolidge High, worked easily through five innings, and yielded both West Virginia hits, one an infield single. Kennelly fastballed his way through the last four innings, permitting only one runner to reach third base.

Joe Famulette and Lou Ciarrocca led the Colonials' 11-hit attack, Famulette getting two singles and a double and Ciarrocca a triple and double.

Navy Defeats Brown, 9 to 4

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—Ted Rook celebrated his debut in intercollegiate baseball today by pitching Navy to a 9-4 victory over Brown.

The bespectacled right-hander from Norfolk, Va., gave up seven hits, four of the scratch variety, in an eight-inning relief role. He fanned three and walked two.

Midshipman Jack Berrier led the Navy attack, driving in four runs, scoring two, and batting two for four. Berrier cleaned the bases with a three-run triple to center in the third inning.

Navy gained its second victory in three Eastern College League starts and brought its over-all record up to an even four wins, four defeats and a tie. Brown lost its third straight after one victory.

Feller of Old Fans 8, Indians Trim Browns

St. Louis, April 22 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians matched their bats and Bob Feller's pitching against the young St. Louis Browns and Psychologist Dr. David F. Tracy today—and the Indians won, 6 to 2.

It was the first victory in three starts for the Indians this season and likewise it was the Browns first defeat against two victories.

Only momentarily were the Browns able to solve Feller. Sherman Lollar was most successful, hitting a home run in the ninth with the bases empty, and a double in the seventh. Rookie Pitcher Tommy Fine also doubled against Feller—his came in the third and he scored on Tommy Upton's single.

But from the second inning on, the Indians had little cause to worry.

Three sharp singles off Starter Stubby Overmire and an error by Dick Kokos put two runs across for Cleveland in the second. Three more singles and two walks off Fine accounted for three more.

Eight of the Brownies who faced Feller went back to the dugout with three strikes. Five others walked to first.

The crowd of 10,166 thought St. Louis had started a rally in the ninth after Lollar homered and Ray Coleman, batting for Frankie Gustine, singled. But Owen Friend grounded into a double-play.

The Indians final run started with a single by Manager Lou Boudreau. In an atempt to pick Boudreau off first, Bill Kennedy of St. Louis threw wild, Lou racing to third. He scored on Mickey Vernon's long fly.

American U. Wins First Of Year, 7-3

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Baltimore U. and American U. split a doubleheader baseball game, each thus managing to win its first game in Mason-Dixon Conference play.

Baltimore came from behind to cop the opener 12-9. The visitors from Washington, D. C., took the second by a 7-3 score.

Art Morales, American U. outfielder, was the batting star of the games. In the first inning of the opener he hit a home run with the bases loaded. He socked another roundtripper in the second game with two teammates in front of him.

County League Opens Today

The Upper Montgomery County League opens its season today with three 2:30 p. m. games.

Gaithersburg plays at Rockville, Upper Montgomery Fire Department at Burtonsville and Germantown at Redland. Each of the six teams will play a 20-game schedule.

The Upper Montgomery loop is the second in the county to open its season.

Last week, the big Montgomery League had a three-game inaugural slate, and today, three more games are scheduled: Bethesda at Colesville, Frederick at Damascus and Rockville at Silver Spring all at 3 p. m. Bethesda, Frederick and Rockville won last week.

Ballston Indians Win

Hal Newpher and Buddy Ringruber each hit homers as the Ballston Indians of the Old Dominion League defeated Lincolnia of the Fairfax League, 12-2, in an exhibition game at Ballston.

Marines Slam Homers, Win, 14-5

Quantico, Va., April 22.—With a 17-hit attack that included three homeruns, the Quantico Marines trounced Western Maryland, 14-5. It was Quantico's 18th victory in 21 starts.

Mike Ilitch, Stan Sidloski and Don Niedringhaus homered for the Marines, Sidloski's coming with a man on base.

D. C. Physician Runs Trotters

Dr. Bache Gill, prominent Washington physician and sportsman is hopeful that one of these days he'll come up with a harness horse that'll be another Rodney (Horse of the Year in 1948) or a Miss Tilly (winner of the 1949 Hambletonian.)

Eager to cash in on purses amounting to $550,000 offered by Maryland's trotting tracks, Gill has moved his six-horse stable from Warsaw, Va., to Rosecroft Raceway. Opening of the 20-night meet at Oxon Hill, Md., is Monday night, May 22.

Gill believes he has two horses that will do big things this year. One is William Wells, 4-year-old trotter which he bought at last fall's Harrison sale from Ben White, famous trainer and driver. With a record of 2:04½, William Wells raced all over the Grand Circuit, under White's handling last year, but finished seventh in the Hambletonian at Goshen.

Gill's other acquisition is Clay Scott, a consistent money winner, timed in 2:06. Clay Scott was purchased at Harrisonburg from 82-year-old Nat Ray, who won the first Hambletonian, in 1926 with Guy McKinney.

Gill also is proud of Quick Trick, 7-year-old, which has won more than $24,000 as a 10-class pacer.

Eight Records Shattered in Kansas Relays

Lawrence, Kans., April 22 (AP).—Eight meet records toppled and another was equaled as baton-carrying teams set dizzy paces in the twenty-fifth Kansas Relays today.

Only one of the new marks was by an individual performer. Oklahoma's Bill Carroll set a pole vault standard of 15 feet 5 inches, 3 inches above the previous record. Carroll was voted the outstanding performer of the day.

The Rice Institute Owls were the only double winners in relay competition. The speedy southwesterners broke one record, capturing the University Mile relay in 3 minutes 15 seconds. That was five-tenths of a second under the old mark by Texas A. and M. in 1948. The Owls won the quarter-mile University Relay in 41.3 seconds.

The other meet records by relay teams: Kansas, University 4-mile in 17 minutes 343 seconds.

North Texas State, college half mile in 1 minute 26 seconds; Compton (Calif.) Junior College, college sprint medley in 3 minutes 27.1 seconds.

Don Gehrmann, Wisconsin's amazing little middle distance star, won the Glenn Cunningham mile run for the second straight year. His time of 4 minutes 16.4 seconds was well above his usual winning times.

Seton Hall's Relays to NYU

Newark, N. J., April 23 (AP).—New York University today swept to three victories in the seven championship events of the fourth annual Seton Hall relays.

Veteran Coach Emil von Elling's team captured the sprint medley, the 440 and 880 yard relays, then added a pair of seconds in the mile and two mile tests for good measure.

But NYU didn't come up with the top relay performance. That honor went to Morgan State College of Baltimore in the mile relay. The little Negro school broke its own 3:18.5 record when it ran the distanee in 3:15.3. The quartet was made up of Sam La Beach, Bob Tyler, Bill Brown and George Rhoden.

Two other meet records were set despite the heavy track. The Villanova distance medley team ran the 2½ miles in 10:32.7 to break the 10:36 set by Princeton last year. The other new standard was set by NYU in the 880. The Violets' 1:28.3 race beat the 1947 Manhattan record of 1:28.4.

Joe Payne, of Howard University, Washington, D. C., placed second in the 100-yard dash. The Howard sprint medley team finished third behind NYU and Seton Hall.

Bowling Congress Fined $2500

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—A Supreme Court judge held today that the American Bowling Congress may not restrict its membership to males whites only.

Superior Judge John A. Sbarbaro ordered a $2500 fine against the organization.

His original opinion directed State revocation of the group's charter. But he substituted the fine in order to allow ABC officials to revise their by-laws at their convention next month.

Terp Frosh Whip Mt. St. Joseph's, 8-4

Nats Whip Yankees In 10th on Coan's Hit

he got no help from Kozar. Pinch hitter Johnny Mize lashed a hot grounder to the second baseman and on the false assumption Johnson was streaking for home, Kozar threw to the plate, retiring nobody.

But Nagy got out of that inning with the help of Eddie Stewart. He held Rizzuto to a modest fly ball into right field, and when Johnson tried to score after a catch, Stewart unloosed an on-the-nose throw to the plate for a double play.

The Nats belted Bob Porterfield into the showers in the second inning with four runs after Rizzuto's bunt, Bauer's two bagger and Berra's fly set the Yanks up in a 1-0 lead.

Nats Score 4 in Second

They packed four hits into the inning and got the help of three walks. Yost doubled, Kozar singled, Nagy himself drove in a run with a single to center, and Dente drove in two more with a single to center. There'd have been more than four runs except that the Yankees nipped Yost at the plate when he tried a double steal with Kozar.

Against Jack Sanford, who took up the Yankee pitching in the third, the Nats compounded another run in the fourth when Kozar led off with a double to left and scored, two outs later, on Coan's double that bopped over the low wall in right.

In their five-run sixth, the Yankees filled the bases before Nagy could get anybody out, on singles by Coleman and Porterfield, and Rizzuto's bunt which Nagy handled too tardily. Bauer's fly to center fetched one run in.

Kozar Comes Through—for Yanks

And then Kozar booted Henrich's grounder, Sanford scoring from third and Rizzuto scrambling home from second as Kozar literally booted the ball into right field. But the Yanks weren't through. Berra dumped a short hit over Dente's head which evolved as a double, plus. Henrich, after stopping at third, went all the way home when he noted Dente showed no further interest in the play.

That sequence tied the score at 5-5, but the Yanks got yet another run out of Nagy when Coan played Billy Johnson's long fly into a two-bagger, muffing it after a long run.

Irv Noren, who has hit safely in all of the Nats games, got the important blow that helped tie the score in the seventh. Dente opened with a pass, Noren dumped a fuzzy two bagger into short left to put him on third. Eddie Robinson got Dente home with a single to left which Lindell claimed to have caught, but the umpires said he trapped it.

IN SHORT . . . President Gabriel Gonzales Videla of Chile was given the honor of throwing out the first ball today. He could admire Yankee hospitality, but doubt their mechanical genius. The loud-speaker system broke down and there was no Chilean national anthem, as advertised . . . The Yankees are getting full value out of the $35,000 they're paying Joe Page. He's been in four of their first five games . . . Sam Dente held his hands to his head in shame after realizing his boner in holding the ball while Henrich scored the tying run in the fifth inning . . . No fewer than 13 Yankees were batting .300 or better before today's game . . . The ghost of Jake Ruppert is probably doing conniptions what with a rival beer firm advertising its product all over the stadium he built . . . Jack Sanford today tied the 1950 endurance record for Yankee pitchers when he stayed in for six innings . . .

The Yanks may not get Ray Scarborough in a deal, but they'll draw him tomorrow as the Nats' starting pitcher, against Allie Reynolds.

Virginia's Blue Team Wins In Football

Charlottesville, Va., April 22.—A 30-yard touchdown pass from Bill King to Harold Hoak in the third period paced the Blue team to a 9-6 win over the Orange before 5000 yesterday in Virginia University's annual Orange-Blue game in Scott Stadium.

The Oranges took the lead on a 2-yard touchdown plunge by veteran Steve Osisek in the second quarter.

Early in the third period the Blues scored 2 points on a safety when Carl Smith nailed Barney Gill in the end zone.

The first quarter ended in a scoreless tie.

Coach Art Guepe said he was particularly pleased with King and called him "the best back on the field." It was the fifth straight for the Blues who have never lost a spring intra-squad game.

Demaret Misses 2-Foot Putt, Ties Ferrier at 65 in Specialists

Harper And Kroll Stroke Back

By Robert Moore

Virginia Beach, Va., April 22 (AP).—Dapper Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., muffed a 2-foot putt on the final green today to wind up in a first-place tie with Jim Ferrier of San Francisco in the first round of the $10,000 Cavalier Specialists Open Golf tournament.

Both Demaret and Ferrier posted four-under-par 65's.

Like Demaret, Ferrier had his troubles on No. 18 also. Just like jovial Jimmy he came up to that 200-yard trouble maker on the banks of Linkhorn Bay and had to take a one-over par 4.

It was the first time Demaret's putter failed him all afternoon. Sizzling with the same brand of golf which earned him successive victories in the Masters and the North Fulton Open, Demaret dumped his tee shot into within 25 feet of the pin. His initial putt was 2 feet short. The next try on the velvet stretch of green seemed a sure dropper but veered and went over by 6 inches.

Harper, Kroll, Tie

Ferrier's difficulty wasn't putting on No. 18 of the 6065-yard layout of the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club. He pulled his tee shot into a trap at the right, banked his way out to within 12 feet of the hole and two-putted.

Deadlocked for the next spot a stroke back in the 54-hole test here there were Ted Kroll of Philmont, Pa., and Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va. Another stroke behind with 67's were Al Smith of Winston-Salem, N. C., Norman von Nida of Snyder, Australia; Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., and Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C.

Jack Burke, jr., of White Plains, N. Y., and Wally Ulrich of Minneapolis, were the only others to shatter par. They had 68's.

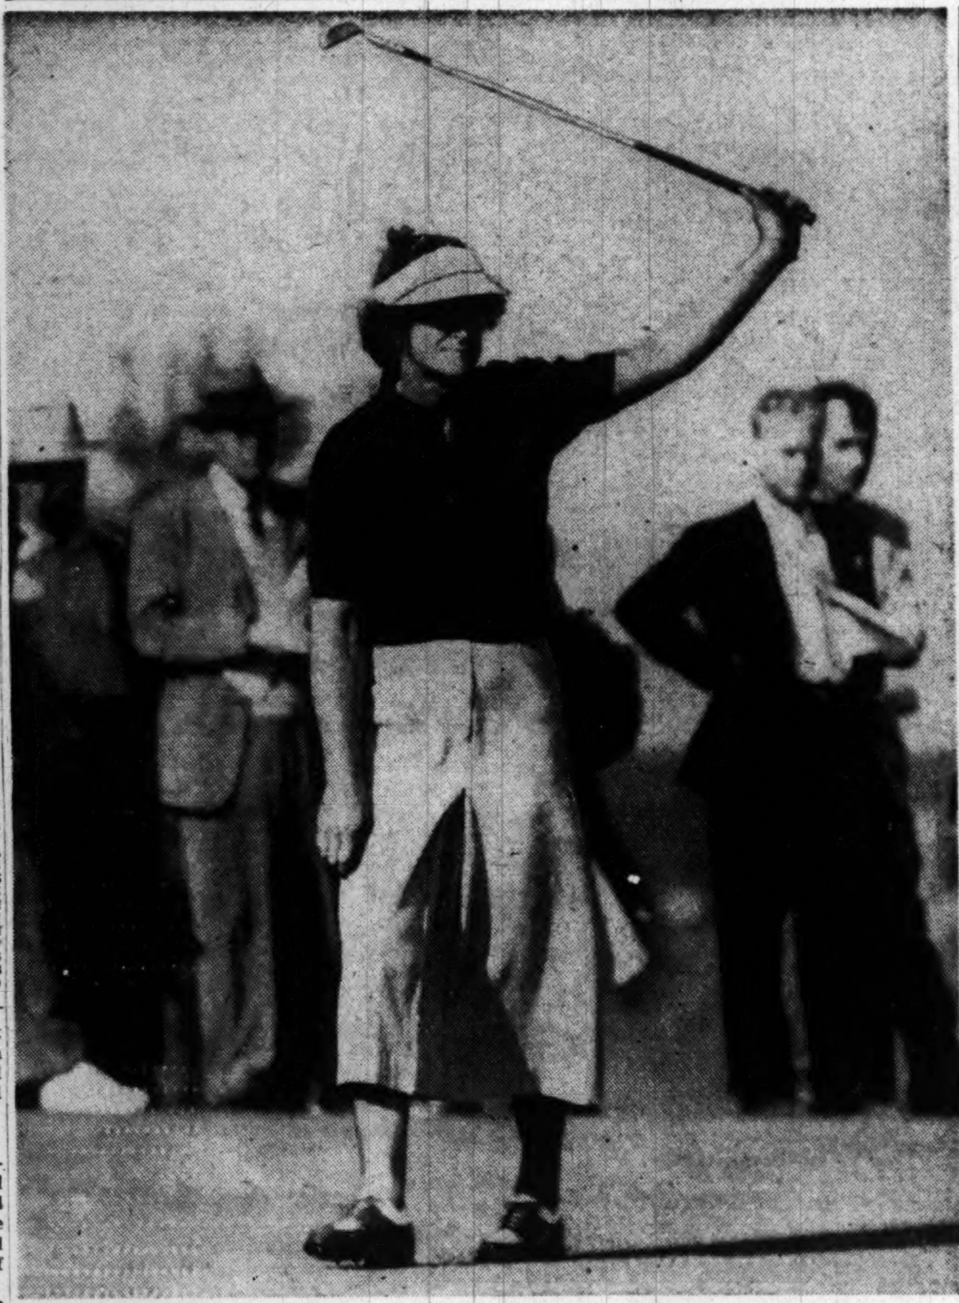
While both Ferrier and Demaret closed out with bogies they both canned eagle pieces on the incoming nine.

Ferrier's Eagle Spectacular

Demaret, wearing his usual rainbow attire, picked on the 317-yard thirteenth for his two below-par effort. His drive came to rest on the fringe of the green, 45 feet from the cup. Most of the gallery of about 2500 had begun to follow Demaret by the time he reached the thirteenth. And they indicated their admiration as the 39-year-old golf veteran rammed the putt straight into the hole.

Demaret was never over par on the front nine and made three birdies along the way. He almost scored an eagle on the 450-yard sixth by sending a deadeye second shot to within 6 feet of the pin. He missed the putt by a hair. He sank a 4-footer on No. 1 and a 10-footer on No. 7 for the other birdies.

Ferrier's eagle was even more spectacular than Demaret's. The tall, husky Australian ace dropped his tee shot 175 yards short of the pin on the 400-yard hole. Then he proceeded to hole out a four-iron shot that hit 10 feet in front of the cup, took one hop and trickled in.



SHE'LL BE HERE—Babe Didrikson Zaharias, greatest woman athlete in the history of American sports, will play in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club June 3-4. Babe won the women's championship in the 1947 and 1948 Celebrities, and her husband, George Zaharias, said yesterday in definitely entering her in the 1950 tournament: "May as well get another title ready for her. She's back on her game"

Navy Defeats Terps, 6-5 In Lacrosse

Duff Arnold's goal with less than four minutes to play climaxed an uphill fight yesterday as Navy came from behind to hand Maryland a 6-5 lacrosse defeat at College Park.

It was Navy's nineteenth consecutive victory over college opposition and preserved a streak dating back to 1948.

The last two Navy scores were registered while Maryland was playing shorthanded because of penalties. The Terrapins led 4-2 going into the final chapter, but could not hold on.

Steve Schoen initiated the last-period assault for the Midshipmen with a high, hard shot from the right side of Maryland Goalie Bill Larash.

Less than two minutes later, at 4:25, Chester McDonough tied it up at 4-4 by batting in a loose ball from a scramble before the Maryland net.

Maryland took the lead again at 6:32 when Bart Nagle took a pass from Hank Lowry and rifled a backhander into the webbing.

But Ed Givens scored another one for the Navy with six minutes left, knotting it at 5-5 and setting the stage for Arnold's wining goal.

It was Maryland's second loss in six 1950 college games.

Plebe Netmen Romp

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—Navy Plebe netmen swept Wyoming Seminary's tennis team from the academy courts today, winning all nine matches with a loss of only 25 games.

Plebes Rout Wyoming

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—Batting around the lineup, Navy's Plebe baseball team scored five runs in the fifth inning and moved on to a 12-5 victory over Wyoming Seminary of Kingston, Pa., today.

Both clubs made eight hits, but Wyoming fielders committed nine errors. Navy centerfielder John McCullen homered in the third.

Navy Bows in Tennis

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—Dick Savitt paced the Cornell tennis team to a 7-2 victory over Navy on the Naval Academy courts today.

Savitt demolished Midshipman Hank Goelzer in straight sets on the No. 1 court, 6—3, 6—0.

The Cornell net team won all but one singles match and all but one doubles match.

SINGLES—Savitt (Cornell) defeated Goelzer, 6—3, 6—0; Steiner (Cornell) defeated Haynsworth, 6—3, 6—2; Riihilvoma (Cornell) defeated McGavack, 6—3, 6—4; Kennedy (Cornell) defeated Wills, 6—0, 6—4; Dockerill (Cornell) defeated Organ, 6—3, 6—3; Nelly (Navy) defeated G. Gardiner, 7—4, 7—5.

DOUBLES—Savitt and Steiner (Cornell) defeated Goelzer and Haynsworth, 6—3, 6—0; Riihilvoma and Dockerill (Cornell) defeated McGavack and Organ, 6—3, 6—2; Carter and H. Gardiner (Navy) defeated Kennedy and G. Gardiner, 8—6, 7—5.

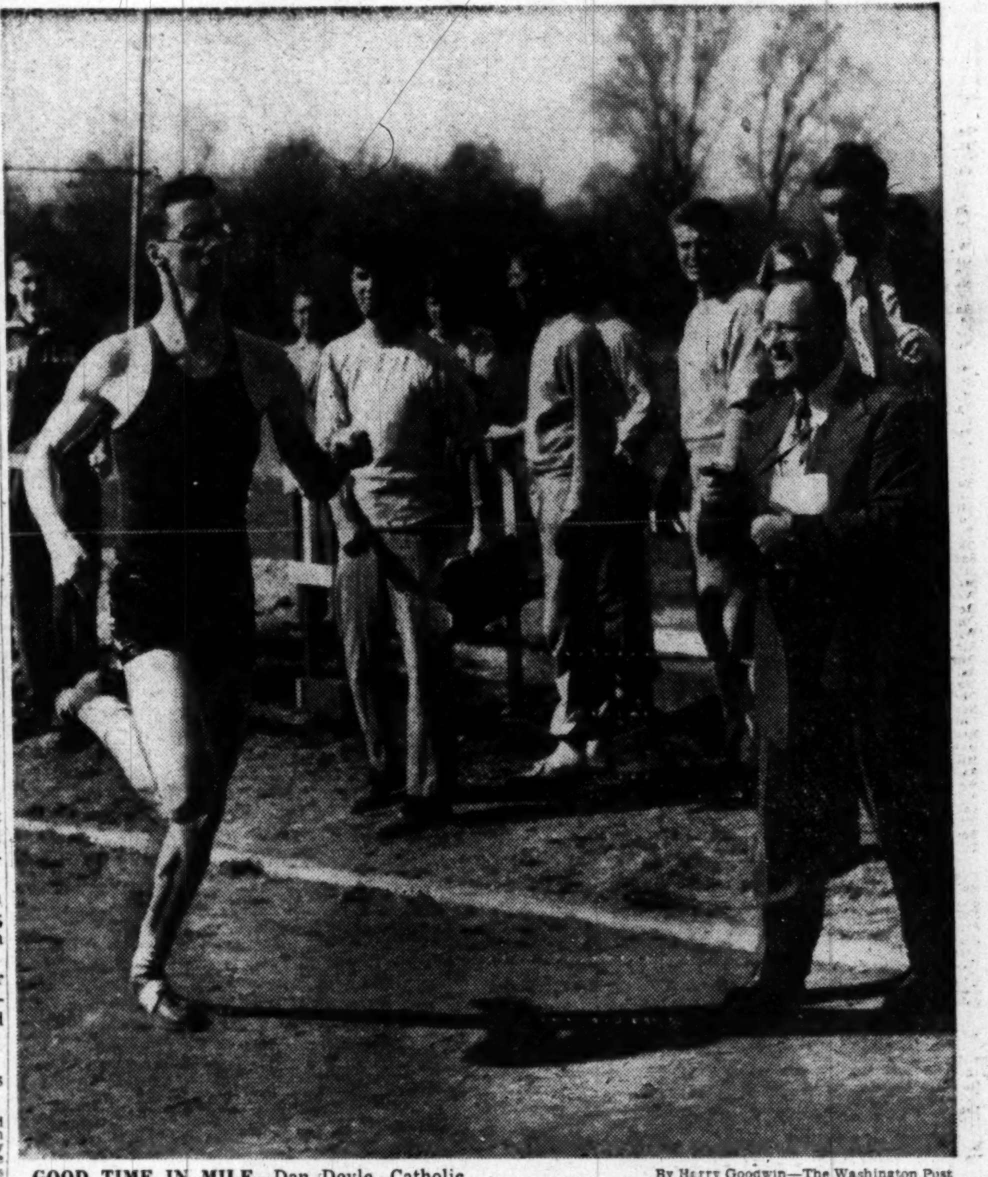
Navy Wins in Golf

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—Navy golfers outscored Penn 5-2 today over the Naval Academy course.

Summaries: Williams (Navy) defeated McCabe, 3 and 2; Sullivan, Navy, defeated Bode, 6 and 4; Fontaine, Navy, defeated Sussel, 2 and 1; Wiseman (Navy) defeated Lipsey, 3 and 2; Neuber (Penn) defeated Baggett, 3 and 2; Inman (Navy) defeated Tequignot, 1 up (19 holes); Leibo (Penn) defeated Hart, 3 and 1.

Plebe Golfers Win

Annapolis, Md., April 22 (AP).—With Midshipman Bill Thompson shooting a six-over par 77 for the medalists honors, Navy Plebe golfers defeated Maryland freshmen today, 5-2.



GOOD TIME IN MILE—Dan Doyle, Catholic University senior and cocaptain of the track team, wins the mile run in yesterday's five-school meet on the C. U. cinders. Doyle was timed in 4 minutes 43.8 seconds

British Golfer Shoots 163-Yard Ace at Age of 79

London, April 22 (AP).—Walter Jackson, who will be 80 next month, shot a hole-in-one today. He got the ace on the 163-yard 12th hole of the South Herts golf course.

Jackson was a member of the club when Harry Vardon was in his prime. He plays a full round every weekend and sometimes two rounds during the week.

Anacostia Places First In Relays

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Anacostia High of Washington piled up 100 points today to outscore 11 other teams for the open championship of the Poly relays.

Mount St. Joseph's of Baltimore was second with 84 and Washington-Lee of Arlington, Va., was third with 75.

Anacostia's best performance was in the mile, where it captured its only first place of the meet. The victors added five third places, a pair of fourths and one fifth.

The winning mile team outraced a full field, which made it necessary to run the event in two sections and select the winner from comparative times. Anacostia—represented by Phil Stroup, Jim Donley, Art Sullivan and Jack Rea—turned the four laps in 3:35.8 to beat out George Washington, the runner-up.

Washington-Lee also copped one first place, covering the 440-yard run in 45.3.

OPEN DISTANCE MEDLEY (2½ miles)—1, Poly (Waggner, Klima, Cromer, Pflaging); 2, Patterson Park; 3, Anacostia; 4, George Washington; 5, Washington-Lee. Time, 11:19.6.

COUNTY 440-YARD RUN—1, Elkridge (Whitehead, Lawson, Benham and Redmiles); 2, Towson; 3, Kenwood; 4, Dundalk. Time, 0:47.8 (new meet record).

OPEN 440-YARD RUN—1, Washington-Lee (Byrd, Harrison), Brady, McCowan); 2, Baltimore City; 3, Anacostia; 4, Poly; 5, Patterson Park. Time, 0:45.3.

440-YARD RUN (170 pounds and over)—1, St. Joseph's (Mahoney, Gallagher, Kammerer and Sariano); 2, Washington-Lee; 3, Anacostia; 4, Patterson Park; 5, George Washington. Time, 0:46.8 (new meet record).

COUNTY MILE—1, Elkridge (Watts, Drake, Lee and Whitehead); 2, Towson; 3, Dundalk. Time, 3:49.5 (new meet record).

OPEN MILE—1, Anacostia (Stroup, Donley, Sullivan and Rea); 2, George Washington; 3, Baltimore City; 4, Patterson Park; 5, St. Joseph's. Time, 3:35.8.

OPEN MILE—1, Anacostia (Stroup, Donley, Sullivan and Rea); 2, George Washington; 3, Baltimore City; 4, Patterson Park; 5, St. Joseph's. Time, 3:35.8.

OPEN 4-MILE—1, Poly (Hile, Schlerf, Jensen, Manger); 2, Baltimore City; 3, George Washington; 4, Towson; 5, Anacostia. Time, 20:09.8.

OPEN 480-YARD SHUTTLE HURDLE—1, Poly (Hladin, Criswell, Allen, Hambleton); 2, St. Joseph's; 3, George Washington; 5, Washington-Lee; 5, Baltimore City. Time, 0:58.5.

1640-YARD COUNTY MEDLEY—1, Dundalk (Dowdy, Jackson, French, Kane); 2, Elkridge; 3, Kenwood; 4, Towson. Time, 3:42.2 (new meet record).

OPEN 880-YARD RUN—1, St. Joseph's (Rowan, Pulitano, O'Hara, Strempek); 2, Baltimore City; 3, Washington-Lee; 4, Anacostia; 5, Poly. Time, 1:35.6.

Yale Crew Downs Middies

Derby, Conn., April 22 (AP).—Yale made a clean sweep of its annual regatta with Navy over the Housatonic River 21-mile course today.

Celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of Eli-Middie rowing, the Blue oarsmen overcame an early deficit and swept to a two-length victory in the varsity race. The time was Yale 10:03.6; Navy 10:10.

The Eli's also took the earlier races, winning the junior varsity event by a scant one-third of a boat in 10:05 as compared with 10:06 for Navy. The Blue freshmen captured their race by a length and a half in 10:26.4 against 10:21.6.

Loyola Takes Track Meet; Catholic 2d

Loyola of Baltimore outdistanced four of its Mason-Dixon Conference foes in a track meet yesterday at Catholic University.

Loyola had 56 1/3 points to 48½ for Catholic U., 29 for American U., 16 2/3 for Gallaudet and 3 for Towson, Md., Teachers.

Host Catholic U. took firsts in seven of the 13 events but the Baltimoreans had more entries who placed second and third.

Russ Johnson, C. U.'s promising high jumper, set a Brookland Stadium record, winning that event with a leap of 6 feet 2½ inches.

American University came up with a double winner in Jim Ferguson, a freshman, who was unknown on Wilson High's championship team last year. Ferguson ran off with the 100-yard dash and 220 with times of 10.2 and 23.2. He took second place in the broad jump with a 20 feet 6 inches effort.

Another American U. entrant who did surprisingly well was husky Eddie Moffatt, star of the basketball team in the winter. Eddie tossed the shot 41 feet 11½ inches, farther than any Mason-Dixon field man has putted this season.

Catholic U. Track Results

440 YARD DASH—Won by Ackson, Catholic U.; second, Celshein, American U.; third, Gede, Towson; fourth Hockworth, Loyola. Time—52.7.

Weighs Football Offer

Justice Talks With Redskins, Agrees to Play—in Celebrities

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THE ONLY THING Charlie Justice definitely agreed to in Washington yesterday was to play in The Washington Post's National Celebrities golf tournament June 3-4.

After huddling for two hours with the Washington Redskins, at whose behest he was in town, the All-America halfback said "I accept" only to a bid from Post to be on hand for the fourth annual Celebrities event at the Army Navy Country Club.

To the invitation extended him by Coach Herman Ball to join the Redskins, Justice didn't say either yes or no.

"We made him a good offer, an attractive offer I'd say," Ball reported, "but Charlie wasn't prepared to give us a definite answer. He wants to go back to Chapel Hill and discuss it with some people. Naturally, we are hopeful he will play with us, but it's entirely up to him."

The boyish-looking Choo-Choo, who has a mannish approach to financial matters, insisted he hadn't made up his mind whether he wants to play pro football.

"It's mighty tough to give up football after playing 11 years," he said, "and I don't know that I will. On the other hand, the job I have with the North Carolina Medical Foundation won't permit me to play pro football and keep that job, too. It's a lifetime job, you know, with an $8500 starting salary.

"The job will require my full time, so before I make any decision about pro football I must talk it over with the folks back home."

The Redskins aren't the only ones waiting for an answer from the 25-year-old two-time All-American triple-threater. Owner Harry Seibold and Coach Keith Molesworth, of the Richmond Rebels, who have reportedly offered Justice $15,000 to play minor league pro football, were also in Washington yesterday, hopeful that Justice would call on them.

The Richmond officials said they hadn't talked to Justice, and that their presence in Washington at the same time as Justice "was just a coincidence."

"But we've talked to him before and our offer still goes," Owner Seibold added.

This is not the first time Seibold and his Rebels have competed against the Redskins for a player. Last year, when the Redskins attempted to lure Rebel Center Joel Williams to Washington, the Rebels took the case to court and the Redskins were restrained from tampering by a court order.

Navy Leads Dinghy Race; Colonials 2d

Annapolis, Md., April 22.—Navy took the lead today at the half-way mark in the qualifying races for the Middle Atlantic dinghy championships.

Both Navy skippers were high in their divisions, giving Navy a total of 61 points to 51 for George Washington. The elimination races wind up tomorrow.

Midshipman Chuck Robertson of New London, Conn., was high skipper with 31 points out of a possible 32 by winning three of his four races. Midshipman Bill Lepphin, who also won three, was right behind with 30 points.

George Collins of George Washington was third skipper with 26 and John Brown of Princeton had 25.

Fourteen skippers representing seven colleges competed in a total of eight races over a mile and three-quarters triangular course on the Severn River sailing Navy Academy dinghies in a light southeasterly wind. They competed in two divisions.

Point totals at the end of first day: Navy 61, George Washington 51, Princeton 45, Stevens 37, Haverford 35, Lafayette 28, Drexel 20.

Penn State Gets Rip Engle From Brown as Coach

State College, Pa., April 22 (AP).—Charles A. (Rip) Engle signed today as head football coach at Penn State College and immediately announced he would use a single wing attack with the winged "T."

The 42-year-old Engle succeeds Joe Bedenk who resigned last month after one year as head coach of the Nittany Lion gridders. Bedenk, who served for 29 years as line coach before taking over the top job, remains at State as baseball mentor.

Engle quit Brown University to accept the Penn State position. Brown won 15 of its last 18 games under Engle. His appointment was announced by the college athletic advisory board after a two-hour session today. Salary terms were not disclosed and Engle, first nonalumnus to head Penn State football since 1929, will work on a year-to-year contract. He also will be a professor of physical education.

Spencer Loses In North-South

Pinehurst, N. C., April 22 (AP).—One fine iron shot on the 37th hole carried William C. Campbell of Huntington, W. Va., to a thrilling one-up victory over Wynsol K. Spencer of Newport News, Va., today in the finals of the North and South amateur golf championship. It was a golden shot that climaxed the golden anniversary of the North and South.

Virginia U. Beats W-L in Lacrosse

Lexington, Va., April 22 (AP).—The University of Virginia cut short Washington and Lee's hopes for the State lacrosse title today by topping the Generals, 11 to 5.

The Cavaliers were paced by their All-American attackman Billy Hooper in taking the one-sided contest. Hooper tallied four times and also figured in four other goals with timely assists.

Napoleon, Dagwood Win Boys Games

Napoleon and Dagwood won their opening games in the senior division of the Washington Boys' Club Baseball League yesterday on the Ellipse.

Dagwood defeated May Hardware, 12-3, with pitcher Lewis Kesias' two triples and a single leading the way, and Tom Gray's one-hitter paced Napoleon's to a 2-0 triumph over Federal Storage.

Episcopal Wins, 16-7; Gamble Stars

Episcopal of Alexandria had easy going after they scored seven runs in the fourth inning, and won 16-7, over Virginia Episcopal of Lynchburg in the State Prep League at Alexandria yesterday.

Virginia Episcopal	0	4	0	0	2	0	1—	7	8	4
Episcopal	0	0	2	7	5	2	x—	16	8	4

Loeffler to Give Trophy

Public and Private Courses Arranging Team Play

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

WHAT MAY develop into the most colorful golf rivalries in the Washington area has been promoted almost singlehandedly by Keith Kallio of East Potomac. Kallio plans an annual home and home match between a ten-man All-Star team from Washington's Public Links and a similar team from private clubs.

"I've already talked with Frank McArdle, President of the District Golf Association, representing the private clubs, and he's all for it," said Kallio.

"Eddie Edwards of Belle Haven, and Bobby Brownell and Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase, all directors of the District Board, are for it, too. At the next meeting it will be voted on. We expect it will be approved without any trouble."

Kallio said that S. G. Loeffler has promised the cooperation of the public links and has agreed to donate a trophy to the winner of the series. Loeffler operates the area's four public courses.

"One match will be played at Prince Georges and the other at East Potomac," Kallio said. "We'll be picking our five members of the publinx team, Earl Marcy, Andy Oliveri, George Graham, Ernie Garlem and Hank Robinson, but the other places are wide open."

ERNIE GARLEM reigns as favorite to cop the crown in East Potomac's Open today. Dubbed "Lady Alice" by the pro staff there, Garlem is famous for his accurate putts.

Ernie was dropping in 25 and 30 footers all over the place and ended up with two over par for 27 holes of play in his first and second round matches.

Play in the Open has produced some mighty close matches to first flight play. Tracey Foust beat Bill Hurley one up in 21 holes. In the second one flight Jack Sayers took Waymond Moore one up in 20 holes and Bryant Brown nipped John Grace one up in 21.

Congressman Earl Wilson (Ninth District, Indiana) is one of the area's most ardent golfers. A member at Prince Georges, the legislator often arrives at the club at sunrise to shoot a fast nine holes and still get to his office at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Incidentally, Congressman Wilson "walked away with the championship of the class B division of the Midwestern Amateur meet at French Lick, Ind., last week. His scores were 80, 81 and 88.

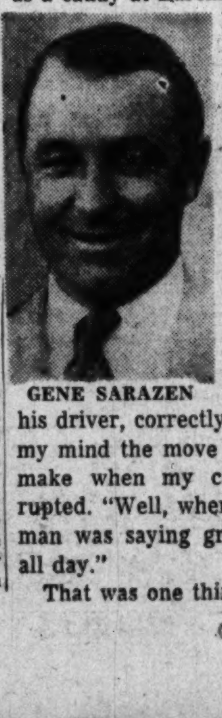
Sarazen Introduced to Golf and Learns Caddie's Castle (of Sand) Falls Quickly

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of anecdotes about the colorful golf career of Gene Sarazen, who will play in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament here June 3-4.)

By Gene Sarazen

I WAS 8 when I first heard about golf. Following the example of some neighborhood boys, I applied for and received a job as a caddy at Larchmont. My first morning I just hung around the caddyhouse trying to absorb the strange new vocabulary.



GENE SARAZEN

Midway through the afternoon I went out on my first job. Knowing how green I was, the caddymaster wisely assigned Danny, a veteran, to caddy for the other member in our twosome. On the first tee I handed my man his driver, correctly, and was rehearsing in my mind the move I was next supposed to make when my calculations were interrupted. "Well, where's my tee, caddy," my man was saying gruffly. "We haven't got all day."

That was one thing Danny had forgotten to tell me about. I looked over to him for help and he signaled me to follow him to the tee-box, that bygone feature of pre-wooden tee golf, divided into two compartments, one filled with sand, the other holding a pail of water. I watched Danny take a pinch of sand and moisten it in the water, aand did likewise. "Now put that on the tee and put the ball on top of it," Danny instructed.

I did this, moving as quickly as I knew how, and was beginning to breathe easily again when, just as my man was about to lurch into his back-swing, my sand tee collapsed and the ball dribbled away. My man shot me a disgusted look, and I scooted back to the tee-box, grabbed a pinch of sand, wet it, and made him another tee. Fortunately this castle didn't crumble, but the moment my man hit his drive I blacked out again.

I took off down the fairway after the ball at full tilt, with my man hollering, "Don't you dare touch that ball!" It was a lucky thing he yelled, because I believe I had the idea from my cramming session that it was the caddy's job to pick up the ball and return it to the tee, the faster the better.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 22.—Loser Weeper brought joy to his backers and tears to the favorite players here this sunny afternoon. Just as the supporters of the Palatine Stable's Hash Night had visions of thick juicy steaks, along came Loser Weeper—and many a guy cried in his beer.

In the colors of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, making their first and only appearance of the meeting, Loser Weeper drove through the stretch like a wild horse to win the $10,000 added Edward Burke Handicap by a length in a finish that was everything the time-worn expression "going away" implies.

Crowd of 17,000 Bets Million

Hash Night had to be satisfied with second money and took that by the none-the-imposing margin of a neck. S. W. Talbrot, jr.,'s Taran was fourth. Only three others competed in the scratch-riddled field, the withdrawals including W. P. Taylor's Magnet.

With a crowd of 17,000, in a million-dollar betting mood, backing Hash Night into favoritism, Loser Weeper returned a $9 mutuel. Black Jack Robertson, who is outriding almost every jockey he meets these days sent the son of Discovery the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 2-5.

Hash Night had a mild excuse. He was bumped while between horses at the clubhouse turn and forced to drop back to fourth position. Brick set the pace at this stage with Cochise second and Loyal Legion third. Loser Weeper was lobbing along in last position.

Daily Double Paid $80.40

Apprentice William Willis, a North Carolina boy, rode the first winner of his career aboard Bobanet Stable's Retintin, a $4.80 favorite in the seventh race. This was the day's second Bobanet victory for Brazen Brat, a fleet 2-year-old filly, took the third event as a $3.20 choice. Apprentice Eddie Sanders carried off the day's riding honors, however, with three winners.

A foul claim against the winner of the second race added some zest to the daily double. Mrs. Edward Decamillis' Blue Fedora was the winner under Noal Griffith's handling, but Joe Servis, who rode S. W. Labrot's Jr.'s Dutel into second money, maintained he was forced wide. The result stood, Blue Fedora paying $14.40 and putting the finishing touches on an $80.40 double pay-off started when W. J. Stevens' Jacopoly, at $9.20, took the first race.

JACOPOLY, $9.40, $5.40, $3.20; GAY PATTY, $9.00, $4.80; PRINCESS GALA, $2.60.

JACOPOLY, trailed during early stages, circled entire field and wore down GAY PATTY. The latter sprinted into a long early lead, held sway well into stretch, but could not resist winner. PRINCESS GALA improved her position steadily, then lacked rally.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs (chute). For 4-year-olds up. Purse, $2500; claiming. Went to post at 2:20. Off at once. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Winner, ch. g. (5) by Opera Hat—Blue Iris. Trained by E. Decamillis. Time, 1:12.

Last Endeavor, H. G. Bedwell	(Dickey)	107	6	6	7^{1}	10	10	10	93.80

BLUE FEDORA, $614.10, $6.60, $5.00; DUTEL, $4.60, $3.40; AURA LEE, $5.80.

BLUE FEDORA, eased back when in close along the rail in vicinity of the half-mile pole, rallied from the outside to assume command and withstood the late rally of DUTEL. The latter, aways within striking distance, rallied well to the stretch, then was ridden with poor judgment while going to the outside of BLUE FEDORA and continued wide. Servis' claim of foul against the winner was not allowed. AURA LEE showed her usual speed to set the pace, but faltered badly. WILY caught tired horses. SHINE ON stopped badly when unable to attain the early lead. AIRDROME was outrun. LEADERSHIP may have needed the race.

DAILY DOUBLE, JACOPOLY AND BLUE FEDORA, PAID $80.40.

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. For 2-year-olds. Purse, $3500; allowances. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:51½. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Winner, ch. f. (2) by Sky Raider—Geraldine. Trained by A. Dunne. Time, 0:52⅘.

BRAZEN BRAT, $3.20, $2.60, $2.40; ISWAS, $5.20, $3.80; TOP SPRING, $2.80.

BRAZEN BRAT outsprinted the opposition from the start, was under restraint turning into the stretch, then held a commanding advantage while being mildly roused in late stretch. ISWAS showed speed from the start, but was no match for the winner. TOP SPRING was slow to respond and was getting to ISWAS. BIG BULL raced along the inside, but failed to rally. STAG failed to make up ground. KISS ME KATE was outrun, as was POLYPHONY.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). For 3-year-olds. Purse, $3500; allowances. Went to post at 3:19. Off at 3:19½. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Winner, b. f. (3) by Ladysman or Roman—Crystal Maze. Trained by D. W. Kerns. Time, 1:12⅗.

IDA C., $22.20, $8.80, $4.80; MARYLAND DAY, $6.20, $4.00; YARLE, $4.00.

IDA C. was not hurried early, swung to the outside for her challenge and responded well to wear down MARYLAND DAY. The latter assumed command early, set the pace under rating, but tired badly in the final sixteenth. YARLE, close up early, swerved in behind horses during the stretch run, then settled down nicely to close fastest of all. HALLEY raced within striking distance and tired. GREAT ADMIRAL quit when outrun for the early lead. IMPRINT showed speed and ran out while tiring.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs (chute). For 3-year-olds. Purse, $4000; allowances. Went to post at 3:48. Off at 3:48½. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Winner, b. f. (3) by Mr. Bones—Tellevane. Trained by D. C. Harrison. Time, 1:10⅗.

MISTAMBO, $12.20, $6.40, $3.60; OUIJA, $6.00, $3.80; CECIL M., $2.80.

MISTAMBO showed speed to be a factor from the start, moved to the lead approaching the stretch, drew clear after shaking off CHORALIER and responded well to hold OUIJA safe. The latter was slow to settle into stride and responded well to be wearing down the top one. CECIL M. was shuffled back while along the inside leaving the backstretch, then failed to threaten. CHORALIER raced forwardly on the outside, moved with the ultimate winner, but tired in the drive. ADOPT caught tired horses and should improve with additional distance. BUSY PAT was kept in a bit close while between horses rounding the bend and tired. LONG GONE held a clear lead through the opening quarter and quit.

SIXTH RACE—One and one sixteenth miles. For 3-year-olds up. Purse, $10,000 added; the Edward Burke Handicap. Went to post at 4:18. Off at 4:18½. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Winner, ch. h. (3) by Discovery—Outdone. Trained by W. C. Winfrey. Time, 1:44⅖.

LOSER WEEPER, $9.00, $4.20, $3.20; HASH NIGHT, $3.20, $2.60; COCHISE, $3.80.

LOSER WEEPER, allowed to trail the field in the early running, commenced his rally leaving the backstretch, was taken up and steadied when lacking room along the rail near the three-eighths pole, continued to save ground to the stretch, then was taken up and to the outside to wear down the leaders. HASH NIGHT, bumped twice by LOYAL LEGION on the first turn, was steadied until midway of the final bend, engaged the leader from the outside, outgamed COCHISE, but could not resist the winner. COCHISE wrested command from BRICK when ready, drew clear and held on tenaciously in the drive. TARAN, rated off the leaders, moved menacingly when roused in early stretch, then tired. BRICK faltered after showing in front for more than 5 furlongs. LOYAL LEGION vied for the early lead and quit. ADILE turned in a dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one eighth miles. For 4-year-olds up. Purse, $2500; claiming. Went to post at 4:47. Off at once. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Winner, blk. h. (8) by Full Sail—Reserva. Trained by A. Dunne. Time, 1:53⅘.

RETINTIN, $4.80, $3.00, $2.40; OOZO, $3.40, $2.40; PADDOCK ACRES, $3.00.

RETINTIN, hard held during the early stages and kept under restraint to the quarter pole, responded smartly when roused and drew clear to win easily. OOZO raced with PADDOCK ACRES early, was steadied when that one drew clear leaving the backstretch, again assumed command when ready, but was no match for the winner. PADDOCK ACRES set and pressed the pace to the stretch, then went wide. NAPANGO lacked a rally. PEACELAW showed nothing. ISLAND HOP loomed a threat nearing the stretch and quit. DARK GLASSES showed nothing.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one sixteenth miles. For 4-year-olds up. Purse, $2500; claiming. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:16½. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Winner, ch. f. (4) by Heliopolis—Nellie Lyons. Trained by J. W. Camac. Time, 1:47⅘.

SKETCH, $6.20, $3.40, $2.60; SHIFTY PLAY, $4.40, $4.00; MISS CUPE, $5.40.

SKETCH, under steadying restraint while within striking distance of the leaders, assumed command without need of pressure and held sway thereafter to win easily. SHIFTY PLAY, hustled into a forward position early, attained command leaving the backstretch, was no match for the winner, but continued on well. MISS CUPE, a trailer for more than a half mile, caught tired horses while rallying mildly. JUST LOVELY tired in the drive. TWO G'S stopped when unable to get the early lead. BROWN FOX flattened out badly. REPAND turned in a dull effort.

Hill Prince Wins Wood By 2 Lengths

of another horse in last week's Experimental, will leave Monday for Churchill Downs.

There were reports that Arcaro would have switched to Middleground for the Derby had the Texas horse won today.

Lotowhite, Hal Price Headley's surprise winner of the Experimental, never was a contender this time, and wound up ninth.

Next Move broke in front and sailed into a lead that opened to a length or more at times. Ferd followed with Middleground in the third slot. Hill Prince, a notably slow starter, was ninth heading into the backstretch.

That was just about the order of things for the top three all the way around, but the leaders never had a chance when Arcaro turned Hill Prince loose on the home stretch.

Hill Prince worked out the full Derby distance of a mile and one quarter at the end, and was clocked in a scorching 2:02 2/5—a brilliant showing for Jamaica's sharp turns.

The winner netted $34,500 from the gross pot of $49,050—second richest Wood since the race began in 1925.

Make Hay Does Just That

Chrles Town, W. Va., April 22—Joseph Paoli's Make Hay, winning his fourth consecutive start, dashed to a front-runing three-quarter length victory over J. N. Barnes' highly regarded Miss Prime in the Annapolis Purse, sixth and feature race on today's program.

S. Delisi's Queen May, coupled with the winner as an entry, finished third, two and one-half lengths farther back. H. B. Langdon's Trigger Moose finished fourth in the field of eight.

The winner, with John Regalbuto doing the honors, paid $4.20. The entry was sent postward in the role of favorite by 5500 fans.

Ponder Wins $50,000 'Cap

San Bruno, Calif., April 22 (AP). Ponder, Calumet Farm's 1949 Kentucky Derby winner, ran off today with the $50,000 added Tanforan Handicap.

Old Rockport was second and Miche third, in a photo for those places.

Ponder ran the mile and a quarter in 2:02 2/5—one second off the track record set by Miche in December last year.

Bill Bennings Says:

At Havre De Grace
DEAR FOLKS:

Like the form of horses, the ability of jockeys seems to ebb and flow. At high tide right now is Jack Robertson. Jack, after riding all over the country, fell in love with a Baltimore girl, married her and has adopted Maryland as his home State. "I've always been lucky around here and I'm going to stay," he said. Perhaps Jack has been lucky but his rooters say he's a sharp rider, alert enough to take advantage when things break his way. At the present time, Robertson is awaiting news as to Brookmeade Stable's Sun Glow going in the Kentucky Derby. Jack won the Chesapeake Stakes with the colt and has been assured the mount if Trainer Preston Burch gives the go signal. In his present form I'd take Robertson over Arcaro. BILL.

Irish Oyster 2d Ahead of Pedagogue

By Harry De Mawby Jr.

Middleburg, Va., April 22.—Irl A. Daffin's Irish Monkey scored a brilliant four-length victory over C. Mahlon Kline's Irish Oyster here today in the rich Mary Mellon Steeplechase at the finale of the Middleburg Hunt Race Association meet.

Irish Monkey's time of 3:48 was the fastest the 2-mile brush race has ever been done at the Glenwood Park race course.

Irish Monkey, a 6-year-old by Redeswood—Rossfarran was ridden by E. Carter. Carter waited until after the third fence for racing room to move the bay gelding up to the place position behind the terrific pace-setter Page County.

Irish Monkey took the lead at the last fence and was never seriously threatened through the stretch drive.

Oyster Favored

The favorite Irish Oyster, seeking his fourth straight victory on the Glenwood course, made a determined move behind the "Monkey" with "Paddy" Smithwick doing the urging but could not do better than the place position.

S. B. Eckert's Pedagogue was third, two lengths behind Irish Oyster.

Smithwick scored a double for today, winning with W. B. Cock's Extra in the co-featured Gerald B. Webb, Jr. Memorial and on C. Mahlon Kline's Easter Vigil winner of the Covert, 1 mile flat race.

Extra's time of 3:27.2 bettered the mark for the 1¾ mile hurdle test as did L. C. Williams' Pilgrims Way, who galloped to a three-length win in the secondary brush race, the Panther Skin, in 3:51.4.

The Creek Wins

F. Ambrose Clark's speedy gelding, The Creek, topped an 11-horse field of classy hurdlers in the Wanquepin test for maiden 3-year-olds and up. The Creek earned a hair-splitting decision over C. Mahlon Kline's fast closing Hywhinnion.

M. Ferral, who had the leg up on Page County in the feature race, sustained a dislocated shoulder in his fall at the tenth fence.

Summaries:

THE WANQUERIN: About 1½ miles over hurdles; for maiden 3-year-olds and upward; purse, $400. 1, The Creek, owned by F. Ambrose Clark, ridden by E. Carter; 2, Hywhinnion, owned by C. M. Kline, ridden by J. Murphy. Time, 2:40⅗. Also ran, Roman Way; Snob Tourist, Fredsel, Morroccan, Commique, Dewena, Doctor Ober, Hobby Horse.

Daffin, ridden by R. Gough; 3, Night Patrol, owned by F. Ambrose Clark, ridden by E. Carter. Time, 3:27⅖; also ran, Kabul and Crown Royal.

THE PANTHER SKIN—About 2 miles over brush, for 4-year-olds and upward; purse, $400. 1, Pilgrim Way, owned by I. C. Williams, ridden by C. Harr; 2, Yolbiac, owned by C. M. Kline, ridden by A. P. Smithwick; 3, Land's Corner, owned by W. J. Strawbridge, ridden by Mr. E. Weymouth; time, 3:51⅘. Also ran, Greens Keeper, Crooning Wind, Courage Road, Hitchhiker, Ballyskylight.

THE MARY MELLON STEEPLECHASE—About 2 miles over brush; 4-year-olds and upward; purse, $2000, added. 1, Irish Monkey, owned by Irl A. Daffin, ridden by E. Carter; 2, Irish Oyster, owned by C. M. Kline, ridden by A. P. Smithwick; 3, Pedagogue, owned by S. B. Eckert, ridden by C. Harr; time, 3:48. Also ran, Ginancoke, Adaptable, Silver Duck, Repose, Replica II, UMS, Monkey Wrench, Page County.

THE COVERT—About 1 mile on the flat; 3-year-olds and upward; purse, $250. 1, Easter Vigil, owned by C. M. Kline, ridden by A. P. Smithwick; 2, Smoky City, owned by Mrs. H. A. May, ridden by J. Murphy; 3, Friese, owned by Paul Vipond, ridden by C. Williams; time, 1:33⅗. Also ran, Artic Fox, McDoel, Tourville, Errolford.

Channel Bass Anglers Haul In Big Ones in Oregon Inlet

By Ralph Murdock

Murdock

A red letter day for channel bass anglers in Oregon Inlet. Sixty-three hefties ranging from 30 to 55 pounds were hauled in by the fishermen who trolled the Dare angling grounds at Nags Head, N. C.

The 55-pounder was bagged by Lt. Col. S. H. McKinnon of Arlington, Va., and Frank Hall, of Great Bridge. The catch made from the fishing cruiser Lucy, piloted by Capt. Omie Tillett, youngest guide in the Dare Coast fleet, was 20 fish.

It was estimated that the haul weighed approximately 800 pounds, or an average of 40 pounds each. McKinnon grabbed himself a 41-pound bruiser on the same trip.

Capt. Joe Perry had a good day when his party nabbed 11 of the bronze beauties. The party included John Scarborough, Windsor, N. C. Bill Smith and Ed Naud of Winston-Salem. Their largest fish hit the beam at 50 pounds.

Incidentally, Nag's Head is one of the few salt water resorts along the Atlantic Coast that also offers good fresh water fishing. Large-mouth bass fishing here is tough to lick. C. Willard Dodson and Dr. E. Howe Miller, of Danville, Va., got their limit three straight days. The gamesters were taken in Carratuck Sound.

HERE ARE the newly-elected officers of the National Capital Casting Club for 1950. Clifford R. Netherton, president; Milton Silver, vice president; Harry H. Millard, secretary; Richard R. Ward, treasurer, and Jack Browning, assistant secretary and publicity chairman.

Bait casting instructors in the proper use of fresh water tackle will be given to the public today by Ben Dement, sr. and Jay Reed as western end of the beautiful Memorial Pool.

A two-day study of the trout situation in the Savage River, in Maryland, reveals these interesting facts which were compiled by wildlife technicians of the Maryland Game and Inland Fish Commission at five trout checking stations.

Despite the cold weather on the first day, April 15, 949 fishermen checked through the stations and 652 on the second day, a total of 1601 anglers. Of the 5600 stocked trout in the Savage River and its tributaries, 528 were caught on the first two days.

A 41-POUNDER—Lieut. Col. S. H. McKinnon, 715 South Taylor st., Arlington, landed this 41-pound channel bass in Oregon Inlet, N. C.

Terps' Junior Varsity Wins

Boasting three double winners, Maryland's junior varsity easily conquered the Baltimore Olympic Club track team today, 87 to 46.

Stuart Wolly won both the 440 and 220-yard jaunts; Morty Cohen placed first in both hurdle events; and Jim Harris galloped three miles to make up wins in the mile and then the two-mile run.

100-Yard Dash—1, Pyfe (Md.); 2, Ruckert (BCC); 3, Cox (BOC). Time, 0:10.2.

220-Yard Dash—1, Wolly (Md.); 2, Pyfe (Md); 3, Gallagher (BOC). Time, 0:23.3.

440-Yard Dash—1, Wolly (Md).; 2, Sharkey (BOC); 3, Morrison (BOC). Time, 0:52.3.

880-Yard Run—1, Dick (Md).; 2, Riley (Md.); 3, Henck (Md.). Time, 2:45.

1-Mile Run—1, Harris (Md.); 2, Tibbets (BOC). Time, 4:46.8.

2-Mile Run—1, Harris (Md.); 2, Tibbets (BOC); 3, Symons (Md.). Time, 10:37.2.

120-Yard High Hurdles—1, Cohen (Md.); 2, Tucker (Md.); 3, Jimison (BOC). Time, 0:25.9.

1-Mile Relay—Won by Maryland (Johnson, Dick Riley and Wolly). Time, 3:55.7.

Done Sleeping Wins Grand National Race

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Appearing as usual to get stronger near the end, Done Sleeping unleashed a great stretch drive today to win the forty-eighth Grand National steeplechase over 12 other jumpers.

Owned by Alvin Untermeyer of Greenwich, Conn., and ridden by Michael Smithwick, the 8-year-old gelding didn't take the lead until the eighteenth and last fence.

Then he sprinted in two lengths ahead of Ben H. Griswold 3d's Edward M to the cheers of approximately 10,000 watchers. Former Maryland Racing Commissioner Stuart S. Janney, jr's Philstar was third, seven lengths behind the winner.

Done Sleeping thus showed he had lost none of the stamina which last year won him seven out of 10 races for the best timber record in the country. Earlier this month, the son of Rondo and Sleepy Essex won the Virginia Gold Cup and now is primed for next Saturday's Maryland Hunt Cup.

All 13 starters except Clifton's Dan, which fell at the fourteenth jump, finished in the gruelling course near Butler in Baltimore County.

Edward M. took the first crack at Mrs. J. B. Hannum's Our Hobo, the early leader and winner last week of Maryland's My Lady's Manor.

Edward M went to the fore before the fourteenth and fifteenth fences. Jockey Smithwick gave the call then to Done Sleeping and the gelding started his move from sixth place.

By the last fence, Done Sleeping had caught Edward M and was pulling away in the stretch.

The Hannums fared better in the program's other race, the Western Run Plate, run over 17 fences on the same course. John B. Hannum III rode his Our Cow to victory by two lengths over Crack Lad.

Six went to the post in this event and only three finished.

Friday Night

Terps Finish Grid Drills With Game

Maryland winds up six weeks of spring football practice with its third annual Terrapin-Oold Liner intrasquad game Friday night at Byrd Stadium.

Jack Hennemier, varsity line coach, will be in charge of the Terrapins with Bill Meek, varsity backfield coach, guiding the Old Liners.

It will be the first public appearance of several promising players up from last year's frosh. Among these are Tacklers Dick Modzelewski, 240-pound "baby brother" of Halfback Mighty Mo Modzelewski; Bob Morgan, 230-pounder who was an all-State Pensylvania high school lineman; Joe Petruzzo, White Plains, N. Y., halfback; Ed Fullerton, Elizabeth, N. J., halfback, and John Scarbath, Baltimore quarterback.

Johnny Idzik, halfback last year who has been converted to quarterback, and Bob Armsworthy, basketball star who's also bidding for the quarterback job, will see action in the game.

Game time is 8 o'clock. A 60 cents admission charge will be made, with proceeds going to the school band.

Hybla Valley Racing Today

Stock car racing opens the season on the Hybla Valley Speedway, Alexandria, Va., this afternoon with an action-packed program.

The show will start at 1 p. m. with time trials and the first race will take place at 2:30 p. m. Hybla Valley's races are under the promotion of Bob Streeter, one of the country's top auto race promoters.

Hill Netmen Rout Landon, 8-1

Hill School, national scholastic tennis champion from Pottstown, Pa., defeated Landon, 8-1, yesterday at Landon.

Only Tim Coss, Landon's No. 1 player was able to get a point for the Washington school. He mowed down Hill's best player, Gil Rothrock, 6-2, 9-7. It was Hill's fourth straight victory. Landon has a 1-1 record.

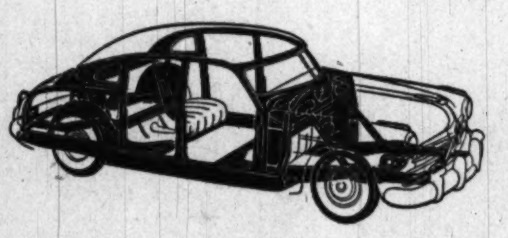
Safety Engineering Magazine commends Hudson in an award as . . . "a leader in the cause of public safety through the design and construction of its motor cars."

The unmatched protection of America's safest car

Only Hudson, with America's lowest center of gravity, offers the security of "The New Step-Down Ride"



Hudson's exclusive Monobilt body-and-frame with recessed floor ("step-down" design), shown above. You ride down within this rugged foundation frame. Box-section steel girders, welded into a single unit, encircle the passenger compartment and extend even outside the rear wheels, a safety feature found in no other car.*

*Trade-mark and patents pending.

If you're going to buy a car in the low-price field, see the NEW, LOWER-PRICED PACEMAKER which, for just a few dollars more, brings you all of Hudson's exclusive advantages.

In Hudson, safety is inherent—as deep-rooted as its exclusive Monobilt body-and-frame* with recessed floor ("step-down" design), shown at the left.

Your very first view of Hudson's free-flowing lines tells you that here is the car with America's lowest center of gravity, yet with full road clearance and more head room than in any other car.

The low-built Hudson has a tenacious road-hugging stability and ease of control that helps prevent accidents . . . with the added protection of all-welded, steel-girder construction that encircles the entire passenger compartment.

What's more, Hudson alone provides Triple-Safe Brakes . . . the finest hydraulic system with reserve mechanical brakes operating from the same pedal, plus finger-tip-release parking brake.

And Hudson brings you room for free movement while driving . . . in fact, here is more room than in any other car! Behind the wheel you command an alert, high-compression, six- or eight-cylinder engine; and a Curved Full-View windshield and rear window provide unhampered vision.

Won't you accept our invitation to try "The New Step-Down Ride" — a wonderful new way of motoring that, among many other advantages, is unmatched in safety! Come in, see the car that is so advanced in design and quality that it is a leader in resale value, as shown by Official Used Car Guide Books!

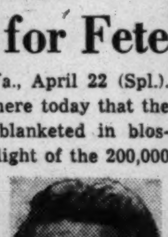
Apple Trees Seen in Full Bloom for Fete

Winchester, Va., April 22 (Spl.). Hope mounted here today that the valley will be blanketed in blossoms for the delight of the 200,000 visitors expected here Thursday and Friday for the twenty-third annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.



Johnson

Already a variety of apple blossoms dots the countryside and good weather should bring the full bursting bloom by Thursday, festival officials said.

Besides the beauty of the blossoms, the names of Vice President Alben Barkley and Movie Star Van Johnson are expected to attract many to the famous festival.

The Veep's stepdaughter, Anne Carleton Hadley, will reign over the festival as Queen Shenandoah XXIII.

And the country's most famous crowner of queens, the Veep himself, will place the crown on the head of the beauteous, 18-year-old girl who became a part of his family when he married Mrs. Hadley in St. Louis.

Miss Hadley, currently a New Orleans student, is due to arrive here Wednesday to make ready for her coronation at 3 p. m. Thursday in Handley School Bowl.

She will welcome Van Johnson to the festival Thursday night and the movie star will lead the grand feature parade at 2 p. m. Friday.

Scores of colorful events are on tap from 9 a. m. on both Thursday and Friday.

The pageant "In Springtime" in Handley Bowl will be presented at 3:30 p. m. Thursday following the coronation and again at 10 a. m. Friday.

Among several dances scheduled are those at 10 o'clock both nights in the National Guard Armory—Thursday it will be Tony Pastor and his orchestra and Friday Tommy Tucker and his orchestra.

Fireworks displays, square dances, Armed Forces exhibits, concerts, will be a few of the many features.

Winchester is about 70 miles from Washington and may be reached either via U. S. Route 50 or State Route 7.

29 in Fraternity Will Make Blood Donations Here

Some 29 members of the Washington Alumni Chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity are expected to make blood donations at the Red Cross Washington Regional Blood Center, 1730 E st. nw., Wednesday, according to E. E. Brown, the fraternity blood-donor chairman.

The Red Cross Blood Center last week distributed a total of 781 pints of blood to hospitals in the District and communities covered by the Bloodmobile in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The Bloodmobile is scheduled to make two visits in the coming week as follows:

Leesburg, Va., at the Leesburg High School, on Monday, April 24, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.; and Alexandria, Va., at Gadsby's Tavern, Royal and Cameron sts., on Tuesday, April 25, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

2 Planes Plunge Into Bay, Pilots Escape Unhurt

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Two National Guard pilots were dunked today when their fighter planes plunged into the water while on training flights from the Baltimore Municipal Airport.

One, Lieut. Peter M. Delo, got only a short distance away when the engine of his F-47 failed while he was at an altitude of 1000 feet.

His plane crashed into the Baltimore harbor about 500 yards off shore and sank almost immediately. He was picked up unhurt by a crash boat.

The other, a Republic Thunderbolt piloted by Capt. Kenneth Kessler of the 109th Fighter Squadron, crashed into Chesapeake Bay as passengers on a crowded Sandy Point-Matapeake ferry watched.

He was taken from the sinking plane by the crew of the ferry Herbert R. O'Conor five minutes after the crash. Kessler also escaped injury.

Cissel's Subdivision 4 of Patuxent Beach, as shown on a plat thereof by Charles Heard, made August 24, 1927, and duly recorded in Liber J. M. M. No. 5, Folio 428, one of the land records of St. Mary's County, Maryland. Being all and the same land which was conveyed by R. Harry Moreland and wife to Jack Fruchtman, et al. by deed, duly recorded in Liber C. B. G. No. 16, Folio 352, etc. Including in said sale all the equipment, furniture and fixtures now in said hotel.

This is a very desirable real estate and in addition to the hotel and equipment, there are two cottages and other outbuildings. The hotel is modern in every respect, and has legalized slot machines and a 7-day liquor license. It is located about 7 miles from the Patuxent River Naval Air Station, and about 50 miles from Washington, D. C. Contains about 6¾ acres. Hotel has 27 rooms and a large dining room.

TERMS OF SALE: Cash on final ratification of sale. A deposit of $5000 will be required of the purchaser at the time and place of sale. Cost of conveyancing, including State and Federal stamps to be at the expense of purchaser. Taxes will be adjusted to date of sale.

PAUL J. BAILEY,
JOSEPH D. WEINER,
Trustees.

MARYLAND

3 MOST BEAUTIFUL HILLS
AT THE NATION'S CAPITAL
These hills have a frontage of nearly a mile and a half on River rd. and Bradley overlooking Congressional Country Club. You know River rd. is going to be changed soon to Mass. ave. extended. Now the most beautiful hill has the most beautiful setting for a home in the United States. I offered it to the public and you wouldn't buy it, now I won't let you have it. I am going to build my own home on it. The home will look a good deal like George Washington's home in Mount Vernon, but it will have a better setting. This home has a far better setting than our own White House lot. I have been dealing in acreage all my life and why should I let this beautiful homesite get out of my own hands. Mr. James E. Elgin, the best builder in Washington, will build the best home on the best setting of any home built in or around Washington. We hope to get the house started in 30 days. Ride up on the hill and watch the construction. I have 2 other beautiful hills there. If you want one, ride up on these beautiful hills and look at them. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Broker's attention.

Celebrities Are 'Just Folks' in Friendly Little Leesburg

SELMA, a light blue mansion nestled at the feet of the Catoctin Mountains, typifies the luxurious and productive farms which surround Leesburg, Va. Miss Elizabeth White, owner of Selma, relaxes on the grounds of her estate with her cousin, E. B. White

Proud of Its Past, Town Plots Progress for Future

By Norma Lanum

COUNTRY folks and smart society get along well together in Leesburg. This little town in the rocky hills of northern Virginia has long been a favored spot for the large estates of Government and industrial leaders.

"But it hasn't spoiled the place too much," say the townsfolk. Leesburg is still a friendly home to them, as well.

Gen. George Marshall, Gen. Patrick Hurley, David Finley, Sterling B. Lacy and Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis are just a few who reside in the quaint town today.

The countryfolk are proud of their distinguished neighbors, but they would just as soon talk about Leesburg history. In fact, history of their community is a popular avocation of many Leesburg citizens.

Seek to Restore Colonial Atmosphere

ONE of the more seriously minded historians is B. Powell Harrison who can trace his ancestry back to Burr Harrison, an early explorer of the wilds of what is now Leesburg.

Mr. Harrison, an enterprising young businessman, is chairman of Colonial Leesburg, Inc., which operates much the same as a chamber of commerce in campaigning for restoration and preservation of the old buildings and the Colonial "way of life."

He proudly points out that it was Colonial Leesburg, Inc., that persuaded the City Council to restore the town's brick sidewalks in lieu of building new cement walkways. Because of the efforts of his organization many of the stores along Market and King streets have been "colonialized." The display windows are small and wood-paneled and there are few large advertisements.

Open House Program Slated

AT PRESENT Mr. Harrison and other Colonial Leesburg members are making last minute preparations for their biggest project, a city-wide open house next Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Six of Leesburg's historic houses will be open to tourists and several of the town's stores will feature special displays of antiques, Colonial costumes, and other heirlooms contributed by the old families of the area.

At the conclusion of the open-house program Mr. Harrison and his committee will resume their projects for restoring the town's old buildings.

Most of the townsfolks go along with this "colonializing," but a few hold out for "up-to-date" stores and buildings.

'Hobby' Likes Modern Things

"I LOVE ANYTHING MODERN," declares Horace Littlejohn, the town's beloved pharmacist. "Hobby" Littlejohn has been filling prescriptions for Leesburg folks for over 50 years and his drug store across King st. from the County Court House has big modern show windows. Well, they're "modern" for Leesburg.

"How'd the people know what I have to sell if I had all that wood paneling across my windows the way they'd like me to do it?" he queries.

Doc Littlejohn, known fondly by many as the most generous man in town, can trace his family back to the Colonial days, but he doesn't want to talk about it. "I'd rather have people know me by what I do," he declares.

Townsmen say it was a relative of the druggist who carried the keys to the vault which held the Declaration of Independence and other famous documents during the British siege of Washington.

That was in 1814 when the documents were brought to Leesburg for safe keeping.

Littlejohn's drug store stays open nearly all night—for two reasons. First, the proprietor likes to be on hand to fill emergency prescriptions when the town's other druggists are closed. And the other reason is that serious game of set-back the townsmen compete in every night except Saturday and Sunday in the store's back room.

Doc Littlejohn insists the "boys" don't play for money, but the games are as serious as if the stakes were stupendous. The score sheet, which continues from night to night, is stuck to the wall with a straight pin.

HQ for Political Strategists

LOCAL POLITICIANS find Littlejohn's backroom a favorite after hours meeting place and many a campaign has been mapped out amid dusty containers of castor oil and face cream.

Besides running what some regard as the town's best drug store "Hobby" Littlejohn is very active in civic affairs. He has served for a number of years as treasurer of the Loudoun County Hospital and vestryman for St. James' Church and as a member of the Virginia State Pharmaceutical Board.

Doc Littlejohn is always the lenient member of the board. When a young graduate from pharmacy school flunks an examination for his certificate, the druggist from Leesburg always argues to "give the youngster a break, give him another chance." That's the kind of fellow "Hobby" Littlejohn is.

Estate Run on Business Lines

MISS ELIZABETH WHITE is one of the hardest working as well as one of the wealthiest ladies of Leesburg. She owns and runs Selma, a luxurious estate on the fringes of town.

And, typical of most estates thereabouts, Selma is a big business farm.

Col. E. B. White, son of the leader of the Laurel Brigade, bought the property for breeding Percherons and he soon became the outstanding breeder of the work horses in the country.

There are a few of the sturdy animals left at Selma, but Miss Elizabeth, the Colonel's daughter, devotes most of her 1100 acres to raising beef cattle.

The spry little lady, who lives by herself, is known as one of the town's shrewdest farmers.

Her Sows Were Anti-Wallace

LEESBURG country folks still laugh about Miss Elizabeth's reaction to the Department of Agriculture instructions on farming which were so copious in early New Deal days.

"She just did the opposite of what the Government advised and came out better than the rest of us," they say.

"My pigs didn't understand Henry Wallace (then Secretary of Agriculture) either," laughs the little farmerwoman.

"He said the sow should produce five pigs in a litter, but mine all gave 12 or 15!"

Another proud Leesburg citizen is young Monroe Bush, who looks more like an undergraduate student than president of the Loudoun Community College.

The college, which will be open to its first freshman class next September, will occupy an old stone building on Market st.

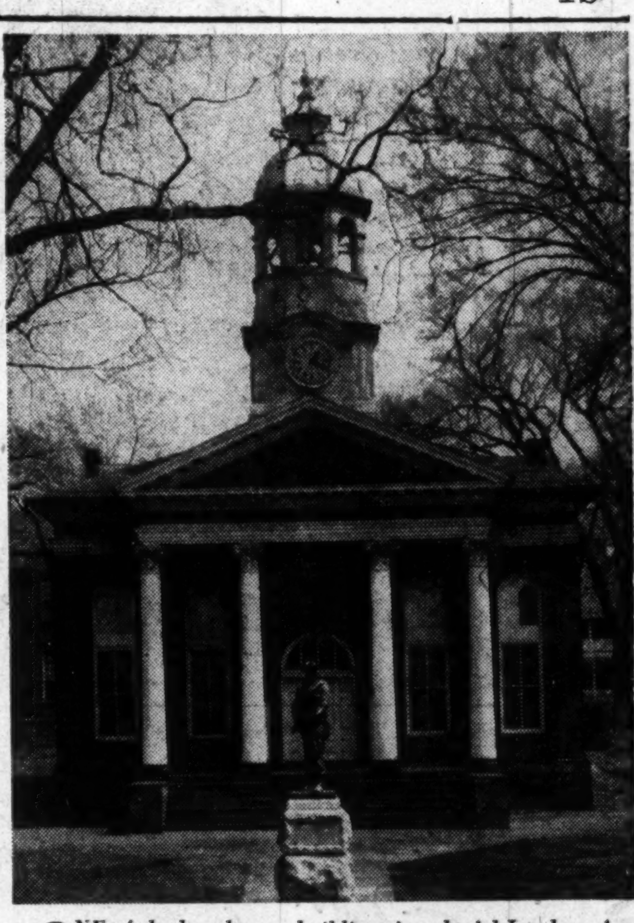
It will be a nonresidential college geared to the needs of the young people of the county. "We're devoting our program to the Loudoun boys and girls who can't afford to go away to college," says Mr. Bush. "If they can afford to go away to school we want them to."

Operating a community college is a life-long dream of Monroe Bush, who was graduated from theological school and served for a time as a Presbyterian minister.

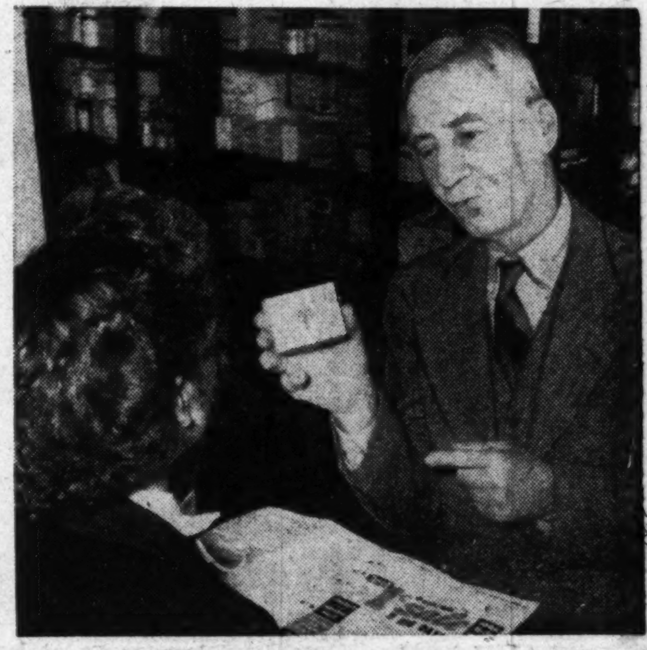
Youngsters Schooled in Riding

THE younger children of the community are the concern of Betsy Brundage. Mrs. Robert V. Brundage, a well-known Loudoun County horsewoman, teaches riding to the younger set every day of the week except Sunday, in a little meadow on the east side of town.

She has 25 young students of horsemanship who take their mounting and posting as seriously as their school lessons.



ONE of the best known buildings in colonial Leesburg is the Loudoun County Courthouse on King st. The structure occupies the site of the original courthouse built in 1759.

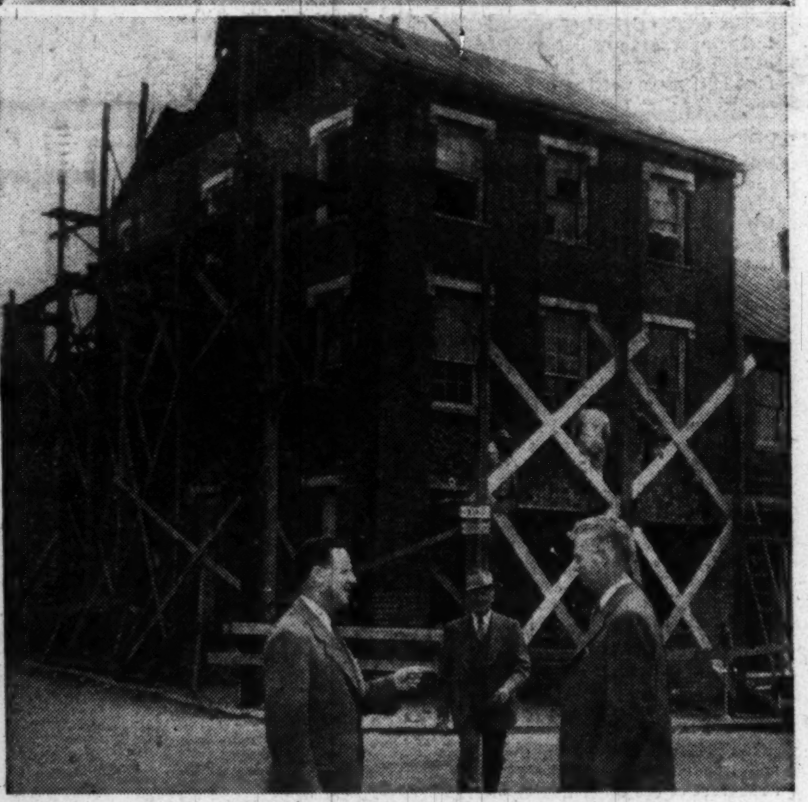


DR. HORACE "HOBBY" LITTLEJOHN, Leesburg pharmacist, is known as the most generous man in town. And his drugstore across from the County Court House is the favorite meeting place for politicians, policemen and teenagers alike

Leesburg To Hold Open House

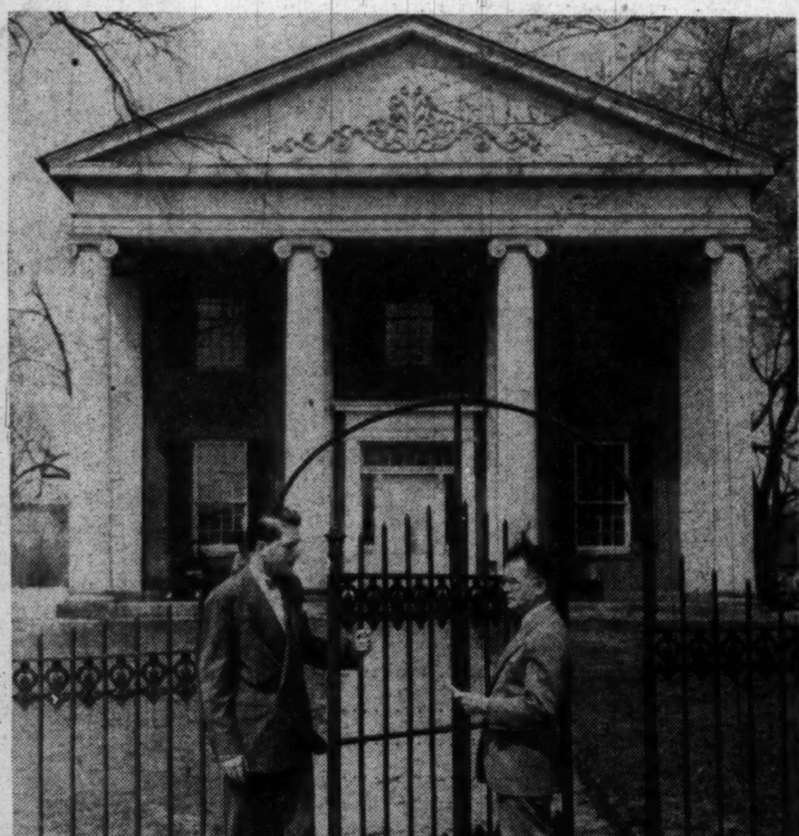
Thousands of tourists will crowd the narrow byways of Leesburg, Va., next Saturday, Sunday and Monday, for the town's Open House sponsored by Colonial Leesburg, Inc.

Six houses to be open for the tour are Osburn's Tavern, Harrison House, the Janney House, the Rust House, the Knox House, and the Welbourn House and garden.



Photos by Harris & Ewing

RESTORATION projects are not an uncommon sight along the byways of Leesburg, Va. B. Powell Harrison (right), chairman of Colonial Leesburg, Inc., discusses remodeling of an office building on King st. with Judge Lucas D. Phillips, owner of the site. Stilson H. Hall, State legislator, is in background



MONROE BUSH (left), president of the new Loudoun Community College, stops outside the County Clerk's Office for a chat with H. I. Tiffany's, local banker. Bush's new school will open next September

LEESBURG small fry receive their rudiments in riding from popular Mrs. Robert V. Brundage. Betsy Brundage, one of the town's most active horsewomen, has begun a daily series of pony classes for the youngsters. She has 25 students who meet everyday except Sunday for lessons in riding, sportsmanship, and even a little jumping. Here Mrs. Brundage fixes Nicky's White's stirrup before beginning the afternoon's riding.

Diplomats Hope to See First Derby

By Marie McNair

"NOBODY who goes to see the Kentucky Derby ever sees the race," a born and bred Kentuckian once said. She meant there is so much else to do that the racing classic itself is incidental.

True, there are breakfasts, luncheons, cocktail parties and dinners, crowding the calendar in Louisville for the weekend of May 6.

But if they can't see the race, the Dominican Ambassador and Senora de Thomen are going to be disappointed. They've been invited to see their first Derby by Mr. and Mrs. David Olson, who divide their time between their "old Kentucky home," Washington and Florida.

The Derby's going to run without Vice President Alben Barkley this year, as there's a conference to be held at Hot Springs, Va., that weekend and he and Mrs. Barkley will be there.

Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, usually in their places for the parade from the paddock, may be absent this year, because Mrs. Vinson is just back from Kentucky and a long visit to her mother, who is ill. But the Gordon Grays will be on hand for the event.

Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan are going there as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Wyatt; the Paul Porters are assured of a perfect weekend with their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Ethridge, and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert got an early start for the Derby, taking off Friday for Atlanta for the three-day opera season and thence by private car to Churchill Downs. She'll be back May 10.

Stories of blue grass Kentucky, like its bourbon, improve with age.

Representative Tom Underwood is fond of telling this one. He was standing one day in the lobby of a hotel in Lexington, when a group of ladies from a patriotic society coasted up. "Can you tell us where the grave of Nancy Hanks is located," inquired the leader whose arm was looped through an oversized memorial wreath.

Mr. Underwood, who was secretary of the Horsebreeders Association, obliged. "Take Pike 23 to an ornate fence and iron gate," he said. Returning to the hotel after placing their tribute on the hallowed spot, they were anxious to have one question answered. Why is it that Lincoln's mother has a life-sized horse erected in her memory, they asked of Mr. Underwood.

What Mr. Underwood DIDN'T say was that Kentucky horselovers know only one Nancy Hanks. That was the famous trotting mare.

Welcome Back

SURE TO GET a warm welcome back to the town where she made her debut, is Senora de Espil, wife of the former Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil. The former Courtney Letts is arriving in early May, will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Munson in Georgetown.

Among parties already planned is Mr. and Mrs. Munson's dinner dance May 5 at the 1925 F Street Club. The Espils returned to Argentina six years ago. Since then Courtney Espil has

Is It Wrong to Marry Just to Have a Family, If No Deep Conviction of Emotional Unity Exists? Girl and Man in Late Twenties Ask

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Do you think it is wrong to marry simply in order to have a family, something both of us want very much? I am 29 and Cliff is 28, and we have known each other for about 15 years, and a short time ago we started having an affair, something unprecedented in our experience.

We had dated together off and on during the past 10 years, and in recent months found ourselves confiding in each other more and more, prior to the affair.

I doubt that either of us could explain why, after all these years, we suddenly developed this confidential relationship, in which we discovered many common interests and similar goals, including a mutual desire for home life and children.

Our respective educational and social backgrounds are on a par; there are no marked differences in taste; we both have good health and hold well-paid positions, and I am willing to give up my job to take care of a home and have children. So, are we justified, or would we be using common sense, to go ahead and marry each other, to have the things we both really want?

During all the years we've known each other, neither Cliff nor I have found a person we thought would be "the right one" for life companionship. But is it possible that we are "the right one" for each other, and just haven't sensed it with deep conviction yet? Please give us your advice. C. B.

They Are Lonely; Need Relatedness

DEAR C. B.: All human beings have more in common than they have of difference, if only they knew it. In substance we are all alike in needs, feelings, desires and aspirations, with some more fortunately nurtured than others,—that's the main difference.

Thus it is not surprising that you and Cliff, having spoken your hearts to each other, should discover much common ground.

As to why you've recently developed an intimately confidential relationship with each other, after 15 years' desultory acquaintanceship, it is probably an unreasoning attempt at mutual defense against loneliness of spirit, that weighs on both of you, and that you don't recognize—because you manage to keep too busy to "know thyself" in the realm of feeling.

Loneliness of spirit has to do with an uneasy sense of being a supernumerary on the human scene; a "dispensable" man or woman, somebody who isn't really deeply wanted or needed by anybody, and who would be little missed or mourned if his (or her) existence ended.

Flight from such distress usually consists in grabbing at relatedness with the nearest person who will respond, and in the case of unmarried persons, usually the aim is to find "romance," as the supposed key to abundant living.

Character Blend Makes a Marriage

I THINK this explains why you and Cliff finally formed an alliance, like two castaways on a desert isle discovering each other with reciprocal sympathy, if not with romantic ardor.

And I should say this interpretation seems corroborated by your joint insistence on wanting a home life and children; in short, a central role in a group situation, where you would feel vitally and intimately necessary to others' welfare, and presumably would be cherished accordingly.

Could a good marriage be made on that basis? I am sure that many have been developed from very much the same materials and the same approach. What is important in the contracting parties is not grand passion nor a conviction of special affinity, but rather good reliable character and good common sense; so that, having put the hand to the plow, there is no havoc-making business of chasing phantoms of what-might-have-been if "the right person" had come along.

Alexandria Tour to Show Early Deed by Washington

One of George Washington's earliest known signatures is shown on the deed for the land on which stands the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Harrison Spring Stevens, at 312 Queen st., one of the houses to be open May 6 and 7 for the Alexandria tour of old homes.

A copy of the deed is owned by Mr. Stevens and will be on view when the house is open for the benefit of restoration projects of the Alexandria Association. The association annually sponsors the springtime tour of historic homes in George Washington's "home town."

The deed for the Stevens property is dated August 21, 1752. At this time Washington was only 20 years of age, but already he had acquired prominence, and he had been busy for some time assisting Surveyor John West in laying out the town of Alexandria.

The deed, original of which is in the possession of descendants of William Ramsay, who was the first lord mayor of the city, was signed by Ramsay and George William Fairfax as "gentlemen directors and trustees" of the city and by the youthful Washington, William Waite and John West as witnesses. It shows that the half-acre lot No. 34 of the town was sold to Daniel McCarty, gentleman, for the sum of 6 pounds 9 shillings, or little more than $32.

The deed required that "the said Daniel McCarty, his heirs and assigns shall erect, build and finish on the said lot one house of brick stone or well-framed timber of the dimensions of 20 feet square or proportionately thereto, and 9 feet pitched at least, with a brick or stone chimney and place the same according to the rule and direction of the said trustees within two years after the date hereof. Otherwise the said lot of land to be revested in the said trustees to be by them sold again as if this deed had never been made."

The present house was built shortly afterward, and thus is one of the oldest of the 21 homes to be shown this year.

Historical documents and maps and fine portraits may be seen at several of the other houses on the tour also, including the Fairfax House, the home of Col. and Mrs. Charles Beatty Moore, 207 Prince st. Mrs. Moore (Gay Montague Moore) is the author of "Seaport in Virginia" which tells the history of the fine houses and early buildings of Alexandria.

Cotton the Cinderella of U.S. Fashion Industry

FILMY, sheer cotton in MacPherson clan's plaid is used to create this cool, dainty afternoon frock. Cloth has been given a permanent finish and the neckline is rimed in black nylon velvet—so the whole dress is washable. Available at Lelia Noyes

PART of the "Cinderella Story" of cotton is told in this diaphanous coat of "Cubist Sheer," floating over cotton taffeta, to make one of the news-worthy costumes of the season. Adele Simpson interpreted the cotton coat as a redingote and made the sheath dress serve as both dress and slip. To be available after May 1 at Julius Garfinckel

Apron Fabric Transformed By Chemistry

By Peggy Preston

FROM scullery maid to glamour girl.

That's the Cinderella story of cotton, which as a dress fabric has risen from kitchen to ballroom, and now floats airily in the wardrobes of the "best dressed."

Unlike Cinderella, who was transformed by a single stroke of her fairy godmother's wand, the new social status of cotton is the result of multiple magic, performed over a period of years in the laboratories of scientists and chemists. Miraculous new finishes, which continue to be increased and improved, are responsible for cotton's acquired charm and grace.

Cotton, indeed, has become a luxury textile. Today it has many, many faces. An ordinary piece of unfinished fabric may be quickly turned into cotton chiffon, diaphanous and sheer; into cotton satin or taffeta, with the rustle and sheen of silk but cool and washable. It may even resemble wool, or it can look and feel like linen, boucle or moire.

New Finishes Resist Wrinkles

NOR does it behave as of old. Time was when it had to be reserved for the most informal occasions because it behaved badly, wrinkling and crushing easily. But in the 1950 wardrobe may be found wrinkle-resistant chambray, crush-resistant seersuckers, cords and ginghams which rebound to smoothness after they have been subjected to the wrinkling effect of heat and pressure. There are cottons, too, that no longer shrink or stretch out of shape, that shrug off spots and stains. These are but a few of the miracles that have come to cotton from the finisher's laboratories.

Fashion-wise the sheer cottons are this season's most important. Both New York and Paris are using them extensively, making them into coats, evening skirts, shoulder capes and boleros.

Adele Simpson uses embroidered organdy and gold-painted cotton to make short evening dresses. She also makes a waferweight redingote of Hope Skillman fabric, for wear over a sheath dress of cotton satin.

Others design satin-webbed sheer coats to float over cotton taffeta sheaths. Shimmering mists of filmy cotton are made into fetching evening accessories such as stoles or shawl collars.

Opaque Fabrics Also in Favor

NOT ALL the new summer cottons need to be called "sheers." Many that can be termed featherweight are woven for sportswear or little business suits where a filmy cloth would be unsuitable. Claire McCardell, Tina Leser and many more topflight designers use fabrics such as these for dresses and suits. These are cottons that are cool, crisp and sheer, yet are sufficiently opaque not to require special underclothing or petticoats.

Hope Skillman, one of the leading fabric designers, points out that the care of sheer cottons has been greatly reduced by the new finishing processes. Sheers, treated with a wrinkle-resistant finish, do not need to be pressed after each wearing. Others, given a permanent finish to prevent wilting, will main-ain their crispness through countless launderings without benefit of starch. Cottons may be given one of the finishes, but they cannot be treated with both.

As a general rule, according to Miss Skillman, expensive clothes will have a permanent finish, while medium priced or budget costumes will be processed for wrinkle-resistance.

But regardless of the finish, pattern or color, cotton has made the grade as a luxury textile. In this summer's fashion parade, the fabric that was once only suited for a kitchen apron, takes the lead in the drawing room.

POLISHED cotton satin, peppermint striped, is a trend-setting fashion fabric and is used here to create a short, summer evening skirt. Bodice is of tissue-thin cotton taffeta. Both are Hope Skillman fabrics which are carried locally at Woodward & Lothrop's

COTTON lends a helping hand in this accessory item for summer use. A wooden handbag, an adaptation of an early American dough box, it is lined with gaily printed quilted cotton. Available at Jelleff's managed several trips back to the United States. She'll undoubtedly include New York on this visit to see her daughter, Louise, now Mrs. Hugh Chisholm Leighton.

Melvyn Douglas to be Honored

DEMOCRATIC California colleagues of Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas will be her guests at the Gayety Theater opening of "Two Blind Mice" on Monday.

Mrs. Douglas, however, wouldn't be here to see the first night performance in which her husband, Melvyn Douglas, is the star. She's campaigning in California for Sheridan Downey's seat in the Senate.

That doesn't mean that the good-looking Congresswoman, once a stage and screen star herself, has missed the play. She saw it on its tryout in Philadelphia, and again on Broadway, where it ran for several months.

Mr. Douglas, who arrives in Washington on Sunday, will be guest of honor at a reception to be given that afternoon by the American Newspaper Women's Club at its 20th st. clubhouse.

Tobe Says...

Now Paris Is Backing Shantung Too

Although shantung has been one of our biggest and most important summer dress fabrics for the past two years, it is only now that it is having big Paris sponsorship as well. You see this is the first time since the war that the French textile industry has been able to import the partcular kind of raw silk that is used in making shantung.

Every Paris dressmaker used a lot of shantung in his spring and summer collections—shantung dresses, shantung suits, wonderful new shantung summer coats, shantung cocktail and evening gowns. This means that shantung has even greater fashion standing than ever for us—and that it will stay in fashion for a long time to come!

Alice McAden Jones Wed To Howard Clinton Noble

OF INTEREST to Washington was the marriage Saturday in Charlotte, N. C., of Miss Alice McAden Jones to Howard Clinton Noble of Hartford, Conn. She is the daughter of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Chamberlain Jones of Charlotte.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Nanty gown in Renaissance style. The side-pouffed satin skirt swept to a train, and the deep pointed decolletage was edged with lace.

Mrs. Norman R. Boehmer, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing bouffant aqua net. Miss Ida Katherine Constable, the maid of honor, was similarly gowned. Bridesmaids included Miss Joanne Noble of Boston, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Morton L. Church, jr., Mrs. John Tillett, jr., and Mrs. Charles Johnson of Charlotte; Mrs. Reid Towler, Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. Michael Stovall, Houston, Tex.; Mrs. Robert L. Hardy, Durham, N. C., and Mrs. Robert E. Jones, jr., Conway, S. C.

The bridegroom's father, Howard B. Noble of Hartford, was best man, and ushers were the bridegroom's brother, Holcombe Noble; the bride's brother, Erwin Jones; Robert Bellamy of Wilmington, N. C.; Ambrose Hardwick, Bethlehem, Pa.; Spencer Gourie, Atlanta, Ga.; Harry Klinger, Birmingham, Mich.; Rudy Vincent, Baltimore; Harvey Spaumburg, Hartford, Conn., Norman Boehmer, Charlotte, N. C.; Albert Kelsey, Haddam, Conn., and Samuel Dean, New York.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. After a Southern trip the couple will live in Hartford, where he is associated with Noble & Westbrook Manufacturing Co.

Mrs. Noble, who attended St. Mary's School in Raleigh and Miss Finch's in New York, was graduated from the University of North Carolina where she was a Chi Omega. She helped lead the Debutante Ball in Raleigh in 1946 and has been a member of the Spinsters' Club. Her paternal grandfather, Col. Hamilton Jones, is a former president of the North Carolina Bar Association.

Miss Essary And Mr. Gill Are Married

St. Mary's Chapel at Washington Cathedral was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding of Miss Elene Forman Essary and John Worden Gill.

Miss Essary, daughter of Mrs. William John Murphy and the late J. Frederick Essary, was given in marriage by her stepfather, Captain Murphy. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Nicholas Gill.

Wearing a fitted satin gown with off-shoulder neckline and wide train, the bride carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. She was preceded down the aisle by her sisters, Mrs. Clyde Bruce Aitchison and Mrs. Samuel T. Ansell, both of Tokyo.

William B. Kerkham was best man and the ushers included Alfred S. Brandt, jr., Rufus Lusk, jr., John Rolph, Harry B. Croswell, Arthur Deffenderfer, jr., Lawrence M. Connell, all of Washington, and Philip V. Nash of Warrenton, Va.

Mrs. Gill, whose father was well known as a Washington correspondent, was graduated from the National Cathedral School and attended Sweetbriar College. She is a member of the Washington Junior League. Her husband was graduated from Landon School, attended the University of Virginia and George Washington University.

SLIPCOVERS are in the air with the first warm days, and at Top Recker's you'll find fresh new fabrics for summertime coolness.

THERE'S A GROUP OF PRINTS in sparkling colors on a heavy cotton that looks like linen—closely-woven and sturdy for long wear and, of course, vat-dyed and preshrunk. "Virginiai Gardens" combines our dogwood and magnolia in deep red, green and white on silver grey, and "Netherfield" is a Jacobean pattern on a deep green ground. Modernists will like "Saguaro Cactus"—the desert guardians in green on yellow—and "Counterpoint," a flowing arabesque. All of these are $2.85 a yard, and there are lots of others ranging from $1.75 a yard in prints and $1.25 a yard in plain fabrics.

SLIPCOVERS ARE MORE than a warm-weather change, in Top Recker's philosophy. A well-tailored slipcover can rejuvenate the shabby but beloved chair you can't part with—it can provide a practical and permanent cover for furniture upholstered in muslin or inexpensive colored twill—it can make soothing color harmony where clashing colors fought with your nerves. If you're dissatisfied with your furniture as it is and can't start all over again—the answer is slipcovers!

AT TOP RECKER'S you may borrow large samples (usually a yard and a half) to try in your own home. The fabric you select is ordered specially for you and the covers are cut by an expert in your home. Labor prices, including cutting, making, zippers and installation, are $25.00 for a standard sofa, $15.00 for a standard lounge chair, with smaller pieces priced in proportion. If you prefer to make your own, you can choose your fabric from the same wide selection of Top Recker's samples.

Miss Villaret And Mr. Clark Are Married

Miss Frances Marie Villaret became the bride of Raymond Gordon Clark, jr., on Saturday at 11 a. m. in a nuptial mass at the Blessed Sacrament Church. A reception at the Fort McNair Officers' Club followed.

Daughter of Col. and Mrs. Gustave Villaret, she was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of ice blue satin, trimmed in lace, was complemented by a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Henry E. Price, the matron of honor, wore shell pink marquisette and carried blue delphiniums. The bridesmaids carried out this color scheme in gowns of ice blue marquisette with bouquets of delphinium and pink gladiolas. They were Miss Georgia Hinrichs of Bethesda, Miss Barbara Kuhn of Silver Spring, Mrs. John Eiseman and Miss Eleanor Landreau of Chevy Chase and Miss Elise Clark.

Mr. Clark's attendants were Lieut. Daniel Herlong, USN, the best man, and John H. Eiseman, John W. Utecht, Robert B. Griffin, jr., Charles S. Butts, Thomas M. Burckes and Joseph M. Fronefield, ushers. Daniel Herlong, jr., served as ringbearer, and Penny Price as flower girl.

After a trip to Irvington, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Clark, jr., will live in Alexandria, Va. The bridegroom's parents live in Washington.

The bride attended Georgetown Visitation Junior College and the University of Maryland, where she belonged to Sigma Kappa. The bridegroom attended Notre Dame and the University of Maryland. He is a member of the Potomac Boat Club, of Delta Tau Delta fraternity and of Scabbard and Blades, an honorary society. He is a grandson of Kentucky's late Lieut. Gov. Edward J. McDermott.

Joint Dance Held to Mark Anniversaries

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Orme, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Buchanan, jr., celebrated their tenth wedding anniversaries at a dance which they gave jointly last evening at the Sulgrave Club. Spring flowers decorated the rooms and Sidney's orchestra played.

Mrs. Buchanan wore a pink bouffant gown by Dior, and Mrs. Orme was in smoke white tulle. The 300 or more guests who were invited were mostly from Washington. Others came from Leesburg and Warrenton. Mr. and Mrs. John Potter and Mr. and Mrs. William Cox came down from Darien, Conn.

Dinner parties were given previously by Mr. and Mrs. A. Lothrop Luttrell, Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Waggaman. Mrs. Waggaman's dinner at 1925 F Street Club included Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Jean-Pierre Benard of the French Embassy, Comdr. UN's Most Glamorous Advisor

Myrna Loy Gleans New Fan Mail

By Sonia Stein

MYRNA LOY long ago lost count of her fan mail. But now the film star is receiving a new kind of fan letter which she counts and cherishes, finding it more exciting than the econiums to her acting have ever been.

Newly appointed by the State Department as a member at large of the United States National Commission for UNESCO, Miss Loy has been an unofficial advisor to the Commission since the San Francisco conference in 1948. She attended the Paris conference in October as an advisor on motion pictures, was an invited observer at the conference held here last week and will probably be at least an observer at the conference at Florence, Italy, in May.

Miss Loy's work for the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization has made news wherever she has gone and has made friends for her wherever the news has gone.

From India, for example, she has a letter from a man who read about her work in Paris and wanted to pay her warm tribute for what she is doing.

Recognizes the Reason

THERE'S a reason why she gets such warm letters from all over the world, and the level-headed actress knows it. "I've worked in a medium which, fortunately, is so fantastic it makes you known almost intimately to people in all corners of the world."

But it's all to the good, and she realizes that, too. "People write to me now, reaching out in that terrible need we have to understand each other before we blow ourselves to Kingdom Come," she says.

Although she's a serious student of international affairs and a serious worker in UNESCO matters, Miss Loy is perfectly willing to be interviewed, televised, broadcast, photographed and lionized if necessary to get the world acquainted with the work of UNESCO.

"It's hard to sell people on constructive ideas. It's the quarrels in the security council that sell newspapers. Conflict is always more interesting than harmony," she lamented. "Our problem is to dramatize the constructive things that are being done, and the responsibility lies with the ones who can tell the story," she explains.

Wants to Be Useful

SHE ACKNOWLEDGES that sometimes when a constructive story is told through someone who happens to be as well-known to people all over the world as she is, there's a hope of getting it noticed.

"I don't mind being used that way," Miss Loy says. "I want to help in whatever way I can help best."

One of the ways she has helped is in forming a committee in Hollywood to provide material to the producers which would further the cause of UNESCO and still provide exciting theater. "One little incident to help battle international prejudices, dropped into the middle of an entertaining film, can be so valuable," she explains, her blue, blue eyes shining with enthusiasm for the project. Chairman of the Hollywood committee, she's found the producers and writers keenly interested in the material from UNESCO.

"There has been such a wrong emphasis on international affairs at times," Miss Loy points out. "All of the things we are doing for Europe we are doing sincerely, but the story is so improperly told. It's told in terms of the cold war, yet it goes much deeper than that," she added.

"Films can tell that story as honestly and forcefully as they can tell any story," she says with conviction. Apologizing for citing a picture in which she starred, Miss Loy mentioned that "The Best Years of Our Lives," award-winning film on postwar America, was popular in Germany and Italy because it was an honest, forceful picture. "It had to do with human beings anywhere, and the fact that they were the conquered and we the conquerors didn't hurt the impact of the picture."

Can Explain Backgrounds

"THAT'S SOMETHING that our films can do for UNESCO. We can encourage the brotherhood of man by explaining the background of the peculiarities that seem to strike us so funny," Miss Loy says. It's quite a joke about the Englishman always carrying an umbrella, but it's not absurd when it's made clear that he does it because it's always raining in England," she expanded her point.

With her new assignment as advisor to the United States National Commission, Miss Loy will be a more frequent visitor to Washington than ever, although the job is not a fulltime one nor a paid one. But most of her time will be spent in New York where she often attends the U. N. General Assembly, and in California where she will continue to make one or two pictures a year on a free lance basis.

As for aspiring to be a Congresswoman—an idea that has evidently had more consideration in the press than in Miss Loy's redhead—she says, "That is the most fantastic story! I don't know how it got started. I suppose when people saw me here in Washington they just naturally thought I was up to something."

"But I have my hands full with what I'm doing. I don't know anything about politics. I think I'm more suited temperamentally to what I'm doing," she explained.

"And besides it's so very important to get people interested in arts, science and education as international problems," she stressed. "Oh, I know it sounds dry, but when you see what I saw in Europe—children practically brutalized, living in caves. We take education for granted but when you see it suddenly taken away, children not given an opportunity to learn—well, it's just frightening," she finished, her clear voice suddenly turning husky.

NOT a movie script this time. Myrna Loy, lovely red-headed motion picture star, is a new member at large of the United States National Commission for UNESCO, and has matters of international consequence to study

Vassar Club to Hear Career Talks By Members

PARRY-PHRASING

Ten 'Most Useful' Cited; Any Other Nominations?

By Ellen Buell Parry

NOW that Easter is over, when fashion was perhaps foremost in our minds, let's think of the Washington women who, in addition to being well dressed and good looking, contribute greatly to the welfare of the community.

Hundreds of Washington women might be named. I dare to cite 10 outstanding ones—excluding career women and feminine politicians, and a few of their projects.

MRS. MONTGOMERY BLAIR—Planned parenthood her biggest interest.

MRS. FREDERICK H. BROOKE—National and local Girl Scout leader.

MRS. JOHN ALLAN DOUGHERTY—Helped organize Police Boys' Club and Thrift Shop . . . has run scores of benefits.

MRS. DAVID E. FINLEY—Does a full-time job for the Red Cross as chairman, Volunteer Special Services.

MRS. W. LAWRENCE GRONER—Has been president of Columbia Hospital Board, chairman Frontier Nursing Service and president Thrift Shop.

MRS. JAMES LAWRENCE HOUGHTELING—president, Home for Incurables.

Miss ELIZABETH HOUGHTON—Assists Red Cross, Council of Social Agencies, Emergency Hospital, Girl Scouts.

MISS CECIL LESTER JONES—Helps with Travelers Aid, Georgetown Neighborhood Council, Children's Hospital, Community Chest.

MRS. ROBERT W. WILSON—Works for Travelers Aid, Red Cross and Community Chest.

MRS. G. HOWLAND CHASE—Was a leader in American Women's Voluntary Services. Now works with Red Cross . . . is chairman, Cathedral Flower Mart.

MRS. MYRON T. COWEN, attractive, dynamic wife of our American Ambassador to the Philippines, visiting in Washington with her husband, is an ambassadress on her own.

"I'm trying to get Philippine women interested in their own lovely native fabrics," she told me, showing me an exquisite hand-embroidered pineapple cloth blouse.

"Just before leaving Manila to come on this trip, I helped with a fashion show for the Red Cross. All the clothes in the show were of native fabrics—even the shoes and bags.

"The models were debutantes and young society matrons. Philippine women have beautiful figures, they're chic, they have marvelous style sense. Unfortunately, they prefer imported clothes. They particularly adore anything American."

SENATOR McCARTHY has always enjoyed seeing something on the fire. Cooking is his hobby—frying chickens, his specialty.

When he first came to Washington he often indulged his hobby in friends' kitchens. Now he's busy making it hot for bigger game.

Miller of Washington

MRS. MYRON T. COWEN

"Philippine women . . . have marvelous style sense"

Mrs. Noel Trenthan says she has a brand-new shiny vacuum cleaner—full of paint!

It all happened when she tried to use the spray attachment to paint a bed.

"I put the paint in the bottle, attached the nozzle to the vacuum cleaner, stepped on the button—but—no paint on the bed!!!"

It seems that one end of the cleaner pushes air out . . . the other end sucks it in.

CAPS off to Admiral Richard F. Whitehead.

Admiral and Mrs. Whitehead were driving down Wisconsin ave. from the Bethesda Country Club late one night. All of a sudden they hit a deep hole in the street, causing a terrific jolt to the car.

A few days later he noticed a hub cap missing from one of his wheels. "I have a feeling that I lost the hub cap when we hit that hole last Sunday night," he told his wife. "Anyway, I won't be satisfied until I go back and look."

He returned to the hole. In the bushes, on the side of the street, he found his hub cap. What's more—he found seven other hub caps piled up there, too!

Mrs. Truman To Preside at Flower Mart

Flower Mart Day at Washington Cathedral has become the springtime focus toward which hundreds of women in the metropolitan area are working. Mrs. Harry S. Truman is expected to preside at its official opening, scheduled for 11 a. m. May 5.

Others prominent in official and social life are planning the hat booth, the orchid booth, the "pantry shelf," and the hot lunch which will be an attraction at the 1950 mart.

Costumed young ladies who are seniors at the National Cathedral School for Girls will become "candy and cake" vendors in booths featuring sweets for sale. A deluxe fruit and vegetable booth will be decorated and staffed by Mrs. Jean de Lattre Seguy's committee. Among those assisting are Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Price Whitaker, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Frank Conger Baldwin and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling.

Mrs. G. Howland Chase, president of All Hallows Guild, is also chairman of the Mart. Her committee includes Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. Frederick B. Lee, Mrs. John Joss, Mrs. Lewis Clark, and Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour.

Mrs. W. Stuart Symington and Mrs. Andrew Keck are among those assisting Mrs. Monroney with plans for publicizing the Mart. Mrs. Forrester Davison has designed the poster.

First Batch of Prize Winners in 'Babies Are Bright' Contest

PAUL TARDUGNO comes off high man — correction, high babe — in the first week's judging in The Washington Post 'Babies Are Bright' Contest. To his mother, Mrs. Rena Tardugno, will go a check for $25. To the parents of each of the seven other youngsters pictured here will go a check for $5.

The entries were so many and good the judges had to make some close decisions.

Not all the pictures and captions submitted have been judged. Many received in the first week's batch are still in the running for weekly prizes later.

If you have a photograph of your youngsters in an amusing or winsome pose, there is still plenty of time to submit it. The competition will continue for several Sundays.

A caption must accompany the photo and the more amusing it is, the better. Captions received so far have dealt with such matters as (1) flying saucers, (2) Senator McCarthy, (3) Where will the Senators place this year? (usually the baby had his tongue out), (4) shorter skirts, or French bathing suits, (5) If I knew you were comin' I'd have baked a cake (many of these) and (6) "And aren't you now, or weren't you heretofore, a Communist Party member?"

Pictures may be years old or brand new but must be of children who were under 18 months of age when photographed. Photos must come directly from parents or guardians with written authorization for their publication. Write your name and address and the baby's name on the back of the photo. Send postage if you wish the picture returned. Employes of this newspaper and their families are excluded from participation. Mail entries to: "Babies Are Bright" Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

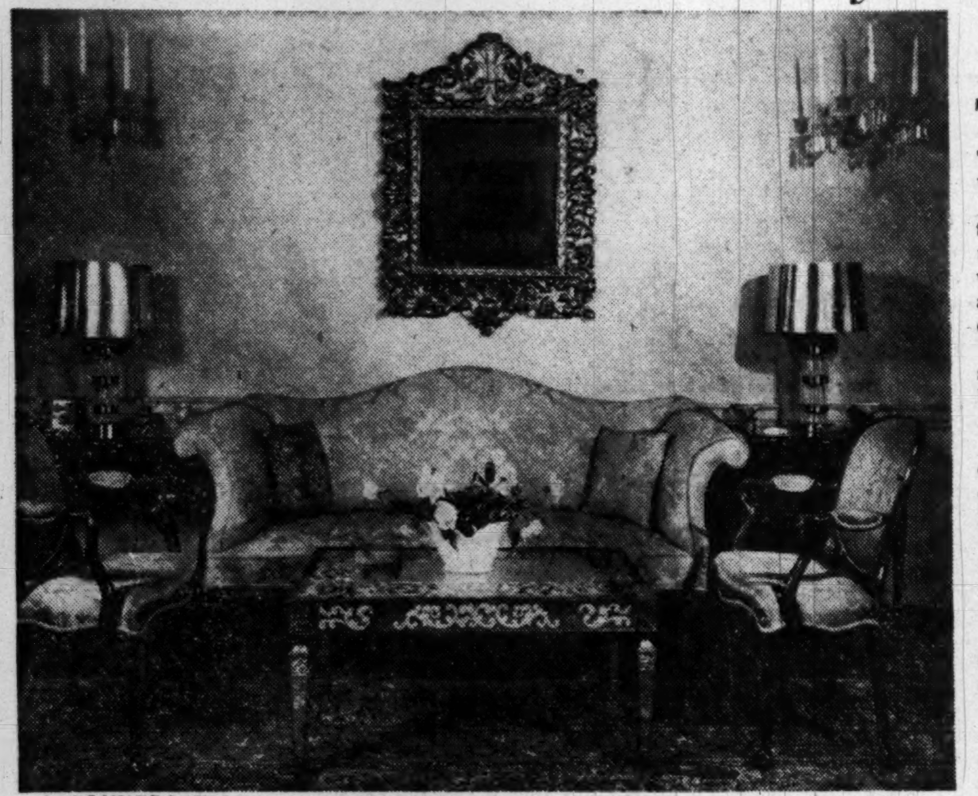
Ireland Sends Us an Embassy Family Full of Charm



A CONVERSATION piece in the drawing room of the Irish Embassy. Walls are greige, the furniture is covered in blue or ivory brocade, the mirror is edged in gold

This is the twenty-fifth in a series of articles on embassy homes, hosts and hostesses.

By Elizabeth Maguire

THERE'S something nice about everyone, but there's everything nice about them. Who? Well you ought to guess. The Irish no less. And that happy emerald isle, land of poets and wee folk, is now represented by an embassy in Washington.

John J. Hearne is the first Irish Ambassador to Washington. Only two other embassies are representative of his country, one in Ottawa, and one at the Holy See. Before coming here, Mr. Hearne was High Commissioner in Canada, and before that he was legal adviser to the Foreign Office in Dublin. He has represented his country at 35 different international conferences.

The Ambassadress, Monica Mary Hearne, has coloring found in story books and seldon found in fact. Her hair is red gold, her brown eyes are flecked with orange, and her skin is typically Irish, opalescent pink and white.

Permanent waves are unknown to her as she has naturally curly hair. "In Ireland," she says, "practically everyone has curly hair. And everyone has red cheeks, but I'm afraid not the Hearnes, as we have just had influenza."

Besides the Ambassador, "the Hearnes" she refers to are Maurice Isadore. age 15; John Justin, age 13; David Anselm, age 12, and Mary Elizabeth, 8. They are a handsome brood, wide awake looking, bright, and look more for humor than trouble.

Mary Elizabeth wears two hair ribbons in her long fair tresses. She has a firm look in her eyes and a few freckles on an aristocratic little nose, that turns up like the petal of a flower.

"She has so little triumph over the three boys," explained the Ambassador, "she has to fight her way all time." And then he added, "They are all like their mother except Mary, she's like me."

Maurice the eldest, like many Irish, is more imaginative than mathematical. "He writes a wonderful letter," says his father, "but he's no good at arithmetic." His second son, Justin, the Ambassador admitted looked like a poet except for his freckles and a very practical gleam in his eye. "He stands first in his class," the Ambassador tried to say not too proudly.

The youngest son, David, it was no surprise to learn, is a good baseball player.

When Mrs. Hearne was interviewed her luggage had not yet arrived from Ottawa, but she seemed as serene as a native. She likes what she has seen of the States, but she misses a certain leisureliness of Dublin.

"Everyone in Dublin seems to have time to stop just to chat," she said, "and dinner parties go on forever. I find more and more when I go to dinner parties here that everyone has to be amused with bridge or movies. In Dublin we just talk and it's very stimulating."

She has never kissed the Blarney Stone, and she has never been closer than the train to the Blarney Castle. The first fortnight in August, when the horse show is on, is the time to visit Ireland, she says. "Then Dublin really is in gala spirit. People come from all over the world to see our horses, and Dublin becomes very cosmopolitan."

Her former country house Brambles is in County Wicklow, land of the O'Byrnes. Descriptions of Brambles sounds like a displaced Irishman's dream of home. The grass is greener than any place in the world, pretty mountains covered with fir trees slope to the edge of the sea, and flowers in every color form a ribbon-like border around the estate. In summer it is cool, and in winter the countryside is covered with a fine Irish mist.

"Quite a few Americans," she went on, "take country houses during the hunting season and hunt the whole winter. We very seldom have snow. We might have a flurry, but nothing to talk of."

Here in Washington the Hearne family is comfortably lodged in the residence of our Minister to Finland, John Cabot, and his wife. The house on S st. has been leased until an embassy is found.

Queen of Hearts Made Some Tarts On a Summer's Day; in the Deep Freezer She Stowed Them All Away

CAN tarts, cookies and cakes be frozen? That's the question of R. J. S. of Washington, who wants to stow tasty baked goods away in her home freezer for future reference.

The answer is "yes" for all three. Tarts come in the same category as pies, and the Home Service Department of Potomac Electric Power Co. reports fine results in freezing several varieties of baked pies—chiffon, custard and fruit. Fruit tarts or pies can also be frozen unbaked.

To prepare baked tarts for freezing, let them cool thoroughly before wrapping. Then wrap and seal in moisture-vapor proof paper, or pop in a moisture-vapor proof box and seal. Unbaked tarts should be wrapped pan and all.

As to cookies, the power company home economists say that cake types—brownies, coconut bars, petit fours, etc.—freeze particularly well. However, practically all types can be frozen successfully, they add. If you wish, you can freeze the dough for such items as "ice box" cookies, then thaw, slice and bake them later.

Cakes keep beautifully in the freezer, even angel food cakes. Iced ones present no problem. Just package them the moisture-vapor proof way. Defrost them later without removing the paper wrappings. Just place them on the kitchen table for several hours before serving time.

DEAR ANNE:

I have some brown sugar in a cardboard carton which has hardened, making it impossible to measure. How can I soften it for use?

Mrs. E. A. G., Washington.

There are several ways of doing this, all amounting to the same thing—the gradual introduction of just enough dampness to make the grains fall apart. If you want to soften the whole package for immediate use, the refrigerator method is as good as any. Take off wrappings and put block of sugar in dish in refrigerator. Leave a day or so until soft.

If you want to leave the sugar in the package, you can place it with opened top in the refrigerator. Or you can put a piece of cut apple or a bit of fresh lettuce on the sugar, close the top of the package down over it, and leave until sugar softens.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me where to buy a stocking "needle" or hook to mend runs?

B. S. R., Chevy Chase.

A big, downtown 5-and-10 cents store has these. (Telephone number, National 3200.) Also, they can be purchased at the notions counter of an F street department store. (Telephone, District 5300.)

DEAR ANNE:

In Mrs. Harris Ellsworth's Chocolate Potato Cake recipe, which you recently reprinted from the "Congressional Cookbook," ½ cup of chocolate is called for. Does this mean melted squares of chocolate or a cocoa and water mixture?

S. J. J., Washington.

The chocolate she uses, Mrs. Ellsworth says, is powdered sweet chocolate of a type manufactured on the West Coast. Cocoa can be substituted, however, only ¼ cup of cocoa being required.

DEAR ANNE:

What would take out candle grease from dark green table cloth of rayon-cotton mixture? J. J. R., Silver Spring.

First, scrape off excess with dull knife or spatula. Then put the stained area between two white blotters and press for several minutes with warm iron, shifting blotter as it becomes soiled. If stain still remains, sponge with dry cleaning fluid.

Mrs. G. A. Davies Hostess at PEO Luncheon

Mrs. G. A. Davies will be luncheon hostess to members and guests of Chapter B, PEO, at her home, 45 Manor cir., Takoma Park, Md., on April 25, at 12:30 p. m. Assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Warner W. Stockberger, Mrs. F. B. Linton, and Mrs. Willa B. Hammond.

Pushbutton Home Tests Postwar Ideas

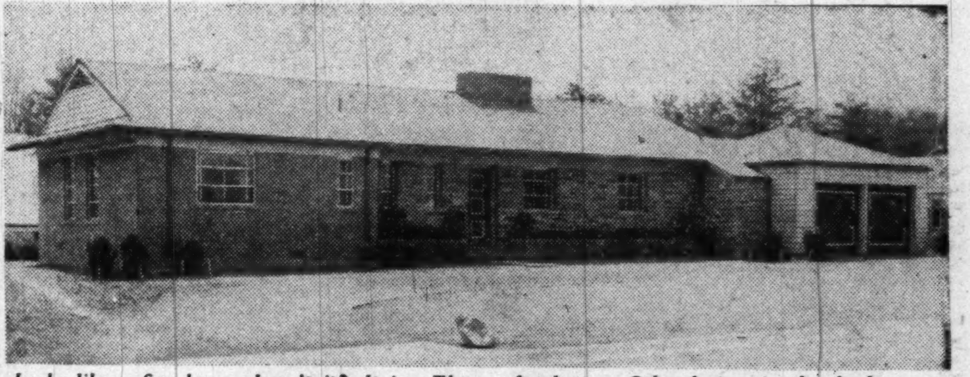
By Robert P. Jordan

ONE of the most unusual homes in the country stands open for inspection today in nearby Maryland—a rambler that reflects the particular philosophy of its builder:

"When it comes to incorporating unproved ideas and products into a new home, why should the buyer be the 'guinea pig'?"

The luxury ranch-type house is jam-packed with ideas and products born largely in the postwar period, ideas and products that are in many instances untested. Builder Paul J. Frizzell's philosophy is to make them prove themselves before he installs them in other homes.

And the best way to do that, Frizzell figures, is to live in it himself. So the house is not for sale. He and his family plan to move in soon.



Looks like a fine home, doesn't it? It is. The garage doors roll up by radio control at the touch of a button. Other features make the house one of the most unusual in America

When they do, here's the sort of thing they'll be up against:

Of an evening, say, when Frizzell is within two blocks of the house, he'll calmly push a certain button on his car's dashboard. At home, Mrs. Frizzell will know he's nearly there. How?

The doors of the double-garage will roll open. The garage light will go on. When the car is inside, a push of the same button will cause the doors to close.

It's all done by radio. Frizzell

New Law Aids Home Building

HOME construction—now hitting new records — is getting an added shot in the arm from the Housing Law of 1950 which was signed Thursday by President Truman.

The law greatly broadens the home purchasing power of families in the $50 to $100 weekly salary brackets.

At the same time, Federal Housing Administration's slash on Thursday of mortgage interest rates—from 4½ to 4¼ percent—is expected by Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) to save new home owners at least five million dollars a year. The new rate is effective Monday.

Equally optimistic were Housing and Home Finance Agency Administrator Raymond M. Foley and Commissioner Franklin D. Richards, of FHA.

In a joint statement, they declared: "After months of thoroughly studying the mortgage money market, it was concluded that this lower rate would be effective in producing a high level of residential construction under the FHA program."

VA Rate Continues

THE NEW 4¼ percent interest rate drops FHA's insurance top halfway to the 4 percent rate the Veterans Administration charges for mortgages it insures. VA is reported planning to continue its rate.

Persons getting the FHA rate will continue to pay an insurance premium of ½ of 1 percent, adding up to an overall maximum annual cost of 4¾ percent.

The newly-signed housing law ties in with the refund of GI

Builder Tests Unusual Home

has a small sending set—fixed frequency—in his car, and a receiver tuned to it in the garage.

And then again, the builder's wife may decide the sun is shining too brightly through the floor-to-ceiling rear glass wall of the living room. She presses a switch at the living room entrance.

The draperies immediately travel across the electric traverse rod, closing out the sunlight. To open, them, she simply presses the switch again.

Fireplace Kindling Out

ANOTHER living room feature is the fireplace. A pierced gas pipe rests beneath the andirons, with logs on top. To start a fire, the gas is turned on. It is turned off after the logs catch. Need for kindling is eliminated.

In the kitchen—a long room placed at the front of the house to permit the living room and screened porch to overlook the rear gardens—Mrs. Frizzell will have counter space to spare and a wealth of labor-saving innovations.

There is no stove, as such, for instance. Against one wall are four electric burners set in a plastic counter. Directly above is a stainless steel hood and ventilating fan.

The oven, also electric, rests opposite the burners in the kitchen's inside wall. It is placed above counter height to eliminate stooping.

Other kitchen highlights are the 8-foot plastic covered breakfast bar, automatic dish washer, sink equipped with garbage-disposal unit, automatic clothes washer, electric clothes dryer, and so on. Plus a plethora of cabinets.

Innovations stand ready for proving in the three bedrooms, too, such as built-in bed bases and cabinets between and at both sides of the twin beds.

Center Cabinet Useful

ON EACH side of the center cabinet are electric outlets for blankets, switches for the overhead light, and switches for airplane-type reading lights concealed in the cabinets.

When it comes to the heating system, the Frizzells will be testing a unit that is the first of its kind to be installed in this part of the country. It works like this:

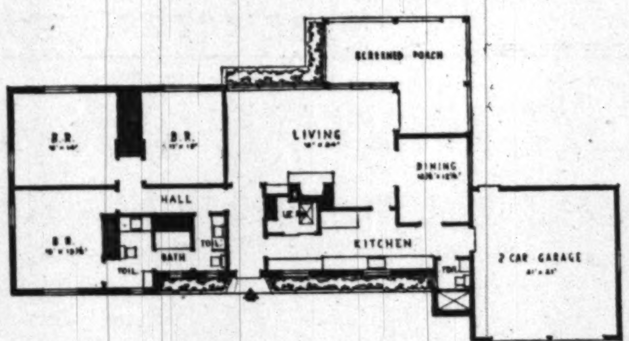
The entire ceiling of the house acts as a radiant heating panel. Heated air, however, is the source of energy, instead of hot water.

A large boiler sends hot water, under pressure, through pipes to two heat exchangers, which are large-finned radiators set in widely-separated locations beneath the floor. Air heated by radiators goes through two 12-inch pipes to the space beneath the ceiling, where it is radiated throughout the house.

The rambler is located in his White Hall development off the 6900 block of Bradley blvd. in Bethesda.

It will be open from 1 p. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, starting today, and from 1 p. m. to 6 p. m. on weekdays. The builder is charging $1.50 per person admission fee, adults only. Proceeds will go to Suburban Hospital and the Bethesda fire rescue squad.

Frizzell has slapped the admission price on, he said, to avoid "the damage caused by thoughtless visitors."



Here's the way builder Paul J. Frizzell has laid out the rooms of his ranch-type home. Note kitchen to the front of the house, living room in rear to permit a view of the garden insurance money, which is expected to add 2.8 billion dollars to personal incomes by the end of this year.

New Law Boosts Home-Buying

According to a survey of the Construction Research Bureau of New York, some 19 percent of veterans plan to use GI insurance refunds to buy and furnish homes of their own. Close to 40,000 applications per month are now being made for GI home loans, the survey also shows, as compared to a low of 20,500 in March, 1949.

Home buying by veterans is expected to increase greatly under the new law because of the 30-year mortgage provision. Monthly payments, under the 30-year payoff plan, are much less than present mortgage arrangements.

The National Association of Home Builders says the law provides strong incentives for home buyers in the $6000 to $9000 price range.

New homes financed with FHA-insured mortgages can be purchased under a plan calling for $500 cash down on a $10,000 four-bedroom house for nonveterans, NAREB says.

The association will watch closely the results of FHA's new interest rate. A spokesman had this to say yesterday:

"Builders can build only what they can finance. It is hoped that the present flow of funds into 4½ percent FHA loans will not diminish. If it should, the whole problem of parity between 4 percent VA and 4¼ FHA loans must be studied.

Fingers Crossed

"THE building industry can only wait with fingers crossed to find out the reaction to this cut.. We are currently embarked on the biggest home building program the world has ever seen.

"It is imperative that a sound financing solution be found so that this volume can be continued at its record pace."

The law provides a maximum mortgage of $6650 on a two-bedroom house. The owner puts down a minimum of 5 percent cash. Another $950 is added to the mortgage for each bedroom up to four. The FHA has the authority to raise the mortgage limits in high-cost construction areas.

Construction standards must measure up to the regular FHA specifications. Complete mineral wool insulation, for example, is one quality of construction to be desired.

However, the new law liberalizes other items. There is no requirement as to paved streets, curbs and sidewalks, or landscaping, proximity to schools and transportation, or other standard FHA requirements for higher cost homes.

Forty-Home Project

Forty brick and cinderblock dwellings are planned for erection in the 4700 and 4800 blocks of Eastern ave. ne. by Howard Homes, Inc., of 1012 5th st. ne.

The houses will be two-story, with basement, and 25 by 28 feet in dimension. Permit application has been made.

Permit Issued

Glen Realty Co., Inc., 103 S. Kensington st., Arlington, will build eight homes in the 5600 block of 5th rd. South, Arlington. The houses will be one-story, brick and cinderblock dwellings. Permit has been issued.

Low-Cost Home Building On Increase, League Says

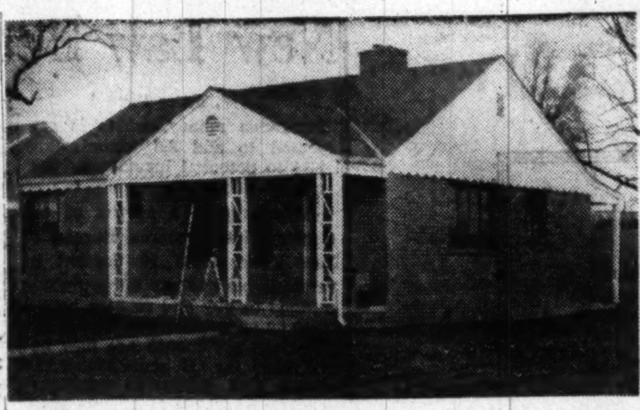
AN UPSWING in construction of low-cost homes is under way, according to a survey released yesterday by the United States Savings and Loan League.

Two-thirds of savings association managers surveyed said that the lower-priced home accounts for a "larger proportion" of total building now than a year ago.

Here are other findings of the survey as reported by the league:

There is little change in building costs from six months ago. Half of the savings officials polled said no change had occurred, and the remainder disclosed only slight variations up or down.

The market has tightened considerably for both high and medium-cost homes. The low-cost new home, however, is in strong demand.



This three-bedroom brick rambler is the first of 100 to be built this year by Joseph Light Construction Co in Montgomery County a mile south of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory on New Hampshire ave. extended. Open for inspection, the home features a modern kitchen with automatic washer, garbage disposal unit, and exhaust fan. Prices start at $12,950

The Case of the Unstarted Fire

Gifford, Ill. (AP).—The fire department had a fire (small) and a mystery (big) on its hands. The fire was in a feather bed in the home of Alvin Ackerman. The bed was the only thing in the room. Nobody had been in the room for several weeks.

Firemen put out the fire; then began guessing about what caused it. Best guess: lightning traveled down a chimney and then jumped to the steel frame of the bed.

FHA to Assist With Slum Clearance

ALL facilities of Federal Housing Administration field offices have been pledged to assist communities in carrying out federally aided slum clearance and redevelopment programs.

In a joint statement, FHA and the Housing and Home Finance Agency announced that field officers are being instructed to follow slum clearance programs in their localities.

They are to be ready to make studies and surveys necessary to determine whether proposed redevelopment sites are eligible for FHA mortgage insurance, the statement said.

Builders Install More Northern Hardwood Floors

FLOOR layers this year will install an estimated 80 percent more northern hard maple, beech and birch flooring in new homes than they did in 1949, predicts the president of the Maple Flooring Manufacturers Association.

W. C. Abendroth, speaking at a group meeting in Detroit recently, said statistics of his organization show an increase of 76.3 percent in new orders for the first quarter of 1950 over the same period in 1949. A 93 percent increase was reported in March, he said.

He called the demand for birch flooring the "big surprise of the year." Surveys indicate it is moving to all parts of the country for large-scale housing projects, Abendroth reported.

Product Previews

THIS young lady's winning air springs from sheer confidence. When her husband and his boss arrive for the fish dinner she's readying, they won't catch the first whiff a block away—or even in the house. She's about to plug in an "Odor-Ban" electric deodorizer. With it in operation, she can tackle onions, cabbage, garlic, or whatever—working the while amidst only the "fresh, delicate fragrance" substituted by the device. The Hecht Co. stocks it.

NOW that the weather is more or less suitable for that paint-up job, United Lacquer Manufacturing Corp., of Linden, N. J., is producing a fast-drying synthetic enamel which it says cuts finishing time 40 percent.

The company says the new synthetic protective coating provides extreme hardness previously obtained only by baking. It dries in a few minutes.

IF PLANTING lawn seed has proved an arduous task in the past, here's a new method: try shooting it into the ground with a gun.

The T. L. Teweles Seed Co. of Milwaukee is making such a gun. It's a pump affair loaded with 1½ pounds of perennial lawn seed. And the gun can be refilled with seed, insectide or fertilizer.

NOW that summer is almost upon us, a New England manufacturer has come up with a snow-making machine. The Tey Manufacturing Corp., Milford, Conn., is developing the device. it forces compressed air through a nozzle to form a super-colled spray that turns into snow.

Snow is used by skiers, bobsledders, and snowball throwers. But you'll have to wait until winter to use it. The machine doesn't work above 30 degrees Fahrenheit.

HERE'S one for fishermen: A flexible trolling line made of wire braided around a nylon monofilament core is being produced by the Braided Wire Products Co., Grosse Pointe, Mich. For use in salt or fresh water fishing, the nylon core prevents kinking or flattening of the metal braid. The line is being introduced in 30-32 and 45-50 pound test.

A PLASTIC canasta scorer, with the score kept with pegs, is being turned out by Classic Products, Inc., of New York. It is designed for outdoor playing, but can be used any place.

TALK about versatility: Ekco Products Co., Chicago, is producing a four-way can opener that cuts off can tops, punches holes in beer cans, lifts bottle tops, and prys open vacuum lids. Tagged in the low-price field, it also can be used as a lifter for hot cans.

A VALVE that acts like a policeman has been designed for use in milk pasteurization plants by the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co. in Philadelphia.

The valve will halt operation of the plant if it isn't being operated according to public health laws. It works through a system of internal contacts and electric switches.

B. F. GOODRICH of Akron, Ohio is making a koroseal sheeting for use by greenhouses in sterilizing plant beds. The beds are covered with the sheeting while steam is shot underneath to sterilize the soil. Cold areas remain dull while hot areas turn shiny. The sheeting can be used a number of times.

Dentist Says Radio Hurts Teeth

Melbourne (AP).—Blood-curdling radio serials and horror films are ruining children's teeth, says Dr. G. E. Philpots, Melbourne dentist.

The growth of teeth in young children depends on the health and efficiency of the nervous system, Dr. Philpots told a meeting of the Radiant Health Club. He said the system cannot function normally in children whose nerves are jangled by late nights, glaring electric lights and the nervous excitement of crime stories.

New Homes Record Set in March, U. S. Says

MARCH was the biggest home-building month in history, the United States Department of Labor's bureau of labor statistics has just reported.

Builders started 110,000 new nonfarm houses during the month—an increase, the bureau said, of 30,000 (38 percent) over February and 40,600 (59 percent) over March, 1949.

During the first quarter of this year, it was announced, 270,000 new housing starts were made. The number is 59 percent larger than the volume of the same period in 1949.

For the past nine months, builders have surpassed "by an ever-widening margin" their work for the same month in the preceding year, according to the bureau.

Public Housing Gains

FINAL 1949 reports show a total of 1,025,100 new dwelling units started. Of that total, the bureau said, 4 percent of the new housing was publicly owned, compared with 2 percent in 1948.

Increased interest in apartment house construction last year was reflected by the proportion of units started in multifamily buildings, it was said. Units in two-or-more family structures comprised 23 percent of the entire total of 1949, compared with 18 percent in 1948.

In 1946 and 1947, the bureau said, apartments accounted for about 12 percent of the yearly total.

The bureau reported little change in the past three years in the proportion of new nonfarm housing begun in rural and urban areas. About 57 percent has been started in urban areas, it is said.

Of houses started last year by private builders, seven out of ten were within metropolitan districts. In 1948, about two out of every three dwelling units were begun in metropolitan areas.

Greatest increases in building-permit volume during March were found in Los Angeles, Boston, Detroit, St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Dallas, Houston Fort Worth, and Milwaukee, the bureau disclosed.

Psychology Designs Highways

Los Angeles (AP).—Psychology helps design highways, says Dr. T. W. Forbes of the University of California Institute of Transportation. Before the highways can be designed something must be known about the people who use them, he says. How long does it take a driver to read a traffic sign? How fast can he act to use the controls of his car after he sees the sign? These are some of the questions that psychologists study which are a vital factor in highway design, Forbes says.

Color TV At Home Show

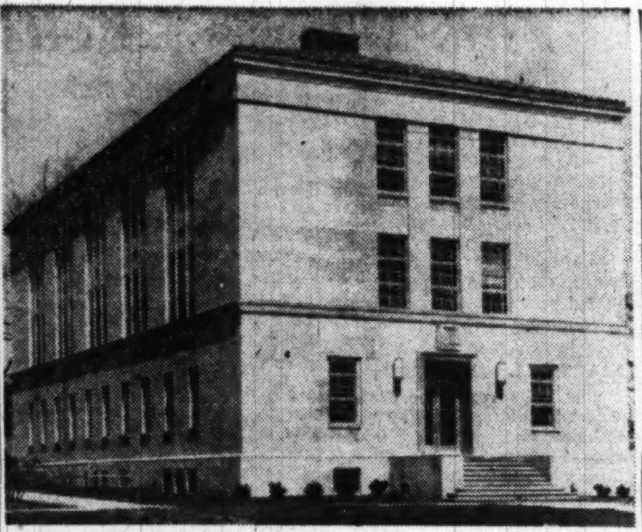
COLOR TELEVISION, little more than a rumor so far as the general public is concerned, will be unveiled for the first time during the home show next month.

Visitors to the annual home builders' exposition at the National Guard Armory will witness special color television transmissions daily from Station WNBW, it was announced yesterday.

The video broadcasts will be shown on the new RCA all-electronic color receivers. The receivers recently were demonstra'ed to the Federal Communications System, but have never been presented to the public.

The FCC is conducting hearings to decide on technical specifications for any color system offered to the public. Since January 9, Station WNBW has been broadcasting color programs five days a week. The programs are seen in black-and-white on typical sets.

Dates for the home show, put on by the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, are May 12 through 21.



This is Catholic University's Shahan Hall, new classroom and administrative building of the National Catholic School of Social Service. The hall and two other new buildings were dedicated in ceremonies Thursday by His Eminence Edward Cardinal Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit

Frame Homes Planned

Twenty 1½-story frame homes will be built by Atlantic States Construction Corp., 4010 Lee hgwy., Arlington, in the vicinity of 20th st., N. Vermont, N. Vermont, and N. Woodside sts., Arlington. Permit has been issued.

Veterans Receive $2,262,545 in Home Refunds

A TOTAL of $2,262,545 had been obtained as of March 25 for veterans in refunds of corrections of deficiencies in construction or equipment of homes built under priority construction, according to the Office of the Housing Expediter.

Of the amount, $1,962,309 was obtained through compliance settlements negotiated between the Office and builders involved, it was reported. The remainder came in the form of judgments and settlements resulting from litigation.

Compliance settlements were made on 13,349 homes, an average restitution of $139 each, the office said. Figures were not available for the number of houses involved in court proceedings.

Arlington Development

Snell Construction Corp. will construct 21 houses in the 1900 and 2000 blocks of S. Quincy st. and the 3600 block of 18th st., Arlington. The homes will be one-story. Dimensions are 33 by 26 feet. Permit has been issued.

Edison Had Early Radio Patent

New York (AP).—Records indicate that what might be termed the "first radio broadcasting patent" in this country was issued to Thomas A. Edison on December 29, 1871.

His application, granted as patent No. 465,971, said: "Signaling between distant points can be carried on by induction without the use of wires connecting such distant points." This is an apt description of today's method of radio transmission.

Perfect Forest Far in Future

Berkeley, Calif. (AP).—California foresters have been working 50 years but are still babes in the woods, says Prof. F. S. Baker, dean of the School of Forestry at the University of California. And the ideal forest is a long way off, he asserts.

In his opinion, it would be one that would furnish an even quota of wood every year—forever. Only the oldest would be cut, the age classes would be distributed properly, and cut areas would be reseeded so that normal growth would continue, he says.

Building Quality Hits New Level, Official Says

QUALITY of construction in housing and other building has reached a new high level for the mass production age, according to Charles M. Mortensen, managing director of the Producers' Council.

Mortensen, in a statement, yesterday cited greater use of mechanized equipment in on-site building, new and improved construction products, and continuing improvements in design as contributors to the "greater efficiency, utility and value found in today's building operations."

He also noted that mass production methods are being adopted by small builders, especially in residential and commercial construction.

The Producers' Council is a national organization of building product manufacturers.

PALS—Henry C. Bates, left, head of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union of America (AFL), and Clarke Daniel, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, exchange good will. Occasion was a banquet Monday at the Mayflower Hotel at which the local bricklayers' contract was signed. Both were guests of bricklayers union No. 1 and No. 4, D. C.

ROBERT P. GERHOLZ, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, has taken a look at socialism in operation in England—"the straitjacket which bureaucracy has placed on private industry."

In a speech Friday before a group of real estate boards in Palm Springs, Calif., he called for redoubled opposition to socialism in this country.

PRACTICAL BUILDER magazine, in its April issue, declares the home building industry "must quit hiding its light." The magazine proposes a "constructive public relations program" to put a halt to "attack from uninformed groups."

Its No. 1 suggestion: a special commemorative stamp citing the record amount of home and apartment starts. Pointed out is that the American Bankers Association was recently honored by a special stamp.

THE WYATT BUILDING, for which excavation is nearly completed at 14th st. and New York ave., is named after Joseph W. Wyatt, attorney for the Virginia Hotel Corp. It will have about 123,000 square feet in rental area. Shannon & Luchs Co. will manage the building.

MISS MILDRED POMPONIO, rental agent of Pomponio Realty, Inc., Arlington real estate firm, left yesterday with a Washington pilgrimage party for a two-month trip to Rome, Switzerland and Germany.

THE Arlington County building report for the month of March shows a total of 271 building starts (all types) valued at $2,318,288.

So far this year, according to Andrew Jensen, chief building inspector for the county, 1878 starts have been made with a total worth of $18,996,917.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REAL ESTATE BOARDS says that although Congress knocked the Government mortgage lending plan for cooperatives out of the housing bill, the issue apparently is not dead.

Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.) told mortgage bankers, NAREB says, that he is convinced the country will get this type of legislation sooner or later.

APRIL issue of the National Real Estate and Building Journal lists the names and addresses of 43,990 realtors and their local board affiliations. The issue is the largest in its history.

THE demand for new housing because of marriages continues to drop, although still very high, the Housing Institute reports. During 1949, marriage licenses fell to 1.6 million and from 1948's 1.8 million. December was the thirty-seventh consecutive month where the number of licenses were below those of the same month a year earlier.

MORE than 1350 hospitals over the country have been inspected for fire and casualty hazards since the start of the Nation-wide inspection program being conducted by the capital stock insurance business, according to the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

'Smoky City' Tag Fades

Sunlight Beams on Blinking Pittsburgh, City Without Smog

By James L. Holton

PITTSBURGH, April 22.—Like a great blind giant whose eyes have been stripped of a lifetime veil, this industrial metropolis today stands blinking in unbelievable sunlight.

Pittsburgh's emergence from the atmospheric gloom which inspired the "Smoky City" tag has been gradual, costly and unobtrusive—but miraculously near complete.

The city's pioneer bureau of smoke prevention totes up these results of its eight-year struggle for clean air:

1. The atmosphere today is 65 percent more free of dirt of all kinds than in 1945.
2. No smog (mixture of smoke and fog) for two years.
3. Visibility conditions for aircraft improved 75 percent.
4. Reduction in atmospheric dust reduced nearly as much last year as in the 10 previous years.

Weather Bureau Helps

THE bureau bases its figures on data obtained with the help of the U. S. Weather Bureau in day-to-day checks of the atmosphere since it began its functions in 1942.

But the most eloquent testimony to the great air purge comes from housewives and visitors.

Sumner B. Ely, who heads the bureau, said he has received scores of letters from Pittsburgh housekeepers telling how much less cleaning is necessary now than a few years ago.

Many out-of-town residents—particularly former Pittsburghers—write of their amazement at the big change they noticed during recent visits to the "Smoky City."

Cleaner air long has been a popular subject in Pittsburgh. But it was not until the formation of the smoke prevention bureau in 1942 that anything really constructive was done.

THE project's initial efforts met with skeptical opposition from industries as well as smoke-hardened citizens, but by 1947 the smoke purgers finally had started to tug the great blanket from the skies over Pittsburgh.

Those first meager results tipped the scales in favor of the clean air barriers. Skeptics, including the big industries, swung their weight behind the campaign.

The bureau's first task was collecting resarch data. It learned, for example, that Pittsburgh's great gray pall was generated by 122,613 exhaust outlets ranging from towering mill stacks to simple chimneys on homes. These stacks spewed forth the residue of 6,250,000 tons of soft coal annually.

Experimentation produced this important principle: Smoke from coal can be eliminated without eliminating coal. It is merely a matter of more complete combustion. But few householders or even experienced janitors are sufficiently skilled or can spare the time to do the job properly.

Smoke Problem Solved

THE bureau finally hit on two solutions. In one, automatic furnace equipment could insure proper combustion even of highly volatile fuels. The alternative was the use of nonvolatile carbons, such as mixtures of soft and hard coal.

Initially the clean air crusaders were armed only with good wishes and their data. They took these into city council chambers and the courts and forged laws that provided:

1. All heating equipment must be of the antismoke type. Such as stokers, down-draft double grates or smokeless magazine stoves approved by the bureau; or
2. Smokeless fuels, like coal mixtures, coke, gas, oil or anthracite coal, must be used in hand-fired furnaces.

Policing the city's furnaces to insure compliance was relatively easy. The bureau has 12 inspectors who watch for telltale smoke. Most effective, however, is the control of coal sales. Inspectors maintain careful watch over the city's 30 retail coal yards.

The legal restrictions are in operation; the studies and inspections are methodically complete. Pittsburgh, the bureau concedes, is not the cleanest city in the Nation.

But it definitely has lost claim to the "Smoky City" title.

Engineers Pull Heat From Icy Air

FREDERICK, Md., (AP).—The winter is coming, engineers here believe, when you'll be heating your home by chill breezes outdoors.

Engineers of the General Electric Co., in cooperation with the Potomac Edison Co. are testing an air conditioning unit in Frederick that may revolutionize home and commercial heating.

The testing involves the mechanical means of moving heat in or out of a home, depending upon the temperature desired. When perfected, engineers say it will be an important step toward the ultimate dream of an all-electric home.

The apparatus under study is called the "Heat Pump," which produces heat or cold.

Installed in a local men's clothing store last May, the machine is under constant check by engineers. Result will help determine the machine's performance with laboratory accuracy, under conditions normal to any commercial installation in the area.

Essentially, the heat pump consists of two three-horsepower refrigeration compressors. Valves control the direction of flow of the refrigerant to an indoor or outdoor coil. The outdoor coil disposes of unwanted heat in the summer and procures the needed warmth in winter.

The heat pump is controlled by a special residential-type thermostat inside the store, sensitive to an extremely small temperature change.

When the store is too cold, the pump extracts heat from the outside air and brings it inside. Conversely, when the store is too warm, heat is collected inside and discharged outside, lowering the store's temperature.

Heat From Cold Air

HOW can heat be secured from the cold outer air in wintertime? Marc Whitmore, commercial representative of the Potomac Edison Co., explains it this way:

"If the outside temperature should be 32 degrees, for example, the coils cool it to an even lower temperature, extracting heat from the air in the process. When you make anything colder, you take away heat. This is the warmth from the outside air that is sent by ducts and discharge grills into the buildings."

Although the heat pump principle is not new to scientists, operating data is limited. To collect and check the required information, a unique testing method has been devised.

Cameras have been arranged so that the heat pump's instrument panel is photographed automatically whenever the machine starts or stops, giving engineers a complete record of its operation.

Whitmore explains that at this time sufficient data has not been compiled to term the tests conclusive. Officials hope that sufficient information will be recorded by the end of this year to give an accurate idea of the economics of this type of heating system.

Two New Homes Go Up Over U. S. For Each New Duo

ADD to the lengthening columns of housing statistics: Two new homes are being build over the country for every additional family tacked on to the population.

This was reported yesterday by C. B. Sweet, president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association.

Sweet said that new nonfarm homes are being built at a more-than-a-millios-a-year clip. The number of households, however, is increasing at the rate of only 500,000 annually. He attributed the latter figure to the United States Department of Commerce.

Government Tackles Home Problems—Dinettes Included

By Clarke Beach

"TELEVISION has thrown an entirely new problem upon the architects," remarked Dr. Richard U. Ratcliff.

Dr. Ratcliff is director of the Government's new housing research division. Its purpose is to find ways for builders to put up better homes for less money.

"Television tends to monopolize the room," Ratcliff continued. "The noise, distraction and darkness make it difficult for people not interested in television to read or do whatever else they want to do."

The research projects which Ratcliff's unit will sponsor will try to find answers for such problems. As for television, his guess is that it will create a demand for an extra room where either the television watchers or the rest of the family can have privacy.

It might mean building a true dining room, instead of a dining alcove. Or it might mean cutting off part of the living room to make a den or music room.

Under the research program authorized in the Housing Act of 1949, the Housing and Home Finance Agency is farming out a great number of scientific studies to universities, Government laboratories and other research agencies.

Government Foots the Bill

THE Government will provide the money for the work. The agency has $1,325,000 for such contracts for the present year and is seeking a larger sum in the 1951 appropriations.

The primary purpose of the work is to find ways to cut home-building costs. Half the money is to be spent trying to find cheaper materials and more economical ways to put them together. The other half will be devoted to research on housing and economics and finance.

Here are some of the problems which will be tackled under the latter heading:

1. Small builders—who erect most of the Nation's housing—have trouble getting money to finance construction work. Banks often consider building loans as bad risks. The division of housing research will try to find ways for small builders to borrow money more easily and at lower interest rates.

Profits Guessed At

2. Many small builders are unable to afford expensive cost accounting systems which enable business concerns to tell whether they are making money. Without such systems, about all they can do is guess at their margins of profit and wait until the year-end to see if their bank accounts balance.

The University of Michigan is now trying to work out for them a simple cost accounting system. Ratcliff believes that this will be the first important practical research project.

On the technological side, the studies will include:

1. Finding better quality concrete slabs as foundations for houses without basements. Slabs laid on the ground now tend to crack or curl. Also they present a heating problem, and they are heavy to handle.

2. The whole field of lightweight concrete is being studied. Scholars are trying various mixtures with cement, instead of gravel and sand—such materials as sawdust, fibers, crushed shale, slag and vermiculite.

If a good quality of lightweight concrete can be thus developed, it can be more easily and economically handled. It might be poured in forms on the ground and then be lifted to compose walls or roofs.

3. Efforts will be made to find new and cheaper ways to put the same old materials together.

4. The division will contrast for studies of the "livability" of a house. Are its owners getting the most for their money? Does it have features which are driving young Johnny to the tavern or causing Mom and Pop to get on each other's nerves?

Are the new wall-size "picture windows" easy to live with? Do they cost more? What structural problems do they present? How about their effect on heating?

Raymond M. Foley, administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, said recently of the research program:

"I feel that over the years this may well be the most significant part of the Housing Act of 1949."

Plan Permits Tailored Home At Less Cost

A BETHESDA firm has set up a plan which permits construction of custom-built homes in the medium-price range.

The firm is H. J. Korzendorfer Co., Inc. Homes are being erected under the plan, beginning at $17,950, at Alta Vista Terrace and Chevy Chase Manor, in Montgomery County.

Here's how it works, according to a company official:

The prospective buyer inspects sample homes of the company or blueprints of houses already sold. He chooses the design most suitable to his needs as a starting point. Then additions, deletions and changes are made as he directs.

When all changes are settled, new drawings for the individual home are made and the future owner is given a set in order to make decorating and furnishing plans.

Buyers have control over the cost of the house either up or down, according to the additions or deletions they make from the basic plan, the spokesman said.

Group to Work For Industrial Development

THE Society of Industrial Realtors will launch a national campaign soon pointed at promoting industrial development.

Fact sheets being prepared will stress the potentials of teamwork with industrial realtors by railroads, utilities, banks, chambers of commerce, and groups interested in industry expansion.

Such groups will be encouraged during the campaign to work closely with industrial realtors, according to Charles H. Slayman, of Cleveland, chairman of the society's rail-utility committee.

Globe Theater Lives Again at Folger

By Richard L. Coe

"THIS WOODEN O," "That virtuous Fabric"—Shakespeare's Globe Theater—will be the center of this afternoon's 386th anniversary of the playwright's birth, at the Folger Library.

John Cranford Adams, president of Hofstra College, will present his model of the Globe to that unique building behind the Library of Congress. The Folger attracts some 65,000 visitors yearly from all parts of the world and this unusual addition speaks for the efforts of Director Louis B. Wright to keep the library and its exhibition rooms increasingly stimulating.

Eight years ago, after over 10 years of untiring research, Dr. Adams published "The Globe Playhouse: Its Design and Equipment." Scholars had long called the Globe "The Lost Playhouse," for it was destroyed by fire in 1613 and no plans, drawings or specifications remain.

This meant that Dr. Adams' research had all the aspects of a mystery yarn. Though he and Irwin Smith, who helped him in the final stages, employed records of the period faithfully, they make no boast that this is exactly as the Globe must have been. This is about it, say they.

Extraordinary Model

AND IT IS an extraordinary model to see, on the scale of ½ inch to one foot. It's thought that the Globe was 84½ feet wide across its basic frame, which means the model is 42¼ inches wide.

Several years ago, Dr. Adams' research led to the discovery that the yard of the Globe—where most of the audience stood—had been paved with brick. This led him to Lloyd's "A History of English Brickwork," which described a charter of 1567 for all the bricklaying trade in London. Tracking down the charter, he found that the standard size for bricks at the time the building burned was 9 by 4½ by 2¼ inches. Working on scale, that meant Dr. Adams' bricks would have to be 3/8 by 3/16 by 3/32 of an inch in size. It also meant at least 8600 such minute bricks would have to be made.

Eberhard Faber, the pencil people, solved this by furnishing sheets of pink ink-eraser rubber. It also meant a dogged search for some kind of stickum that would keep the bricks in place. A New York firm figured out an adhesive and chipped the stuff in for free as its part in speeding along the project.

That brick flooring was but one of many materiel problems in Dr. Adams' war for "The Lost Playhouse." To lay the plaster, a teaspoon and medicine dropper became the tools and walnut was used for oak, since its markings closely approximate in miniature England's traditional building oak.

Speaks Today

THESE DETAILS and more, Dr. Adams will discuss at the unfortunately limited ceremony this afternoon. Attendance is limited because of the size of the library's theater, a matter Dr. Wright exceedingly regrets, for he's been plagued for several weeks for tickets to the event.

Dr. Wright took over directorship of the library nearly two years ago. A former newspaperman of the Carolinas and more recently of California's Huntington Library staff, he's imbued with the notion of keeping the Folger gift alive for both scholars and public alike.

The library is the final home settled upon by Henry Clay Folger and his wife, Emily, for the Shakespeariana they had collected since their college days in the late '70's and early '80's. This man, originally without the means to continue his college studies, rose to presidency of the Standard Oil Co. of New York, building a

Man of Substance (235 Ringside)

Arch Always Get the Check

By Sonia Stein

WHENEVER Arch McDonald goes into a restaurant—whether he's with four people or 24—the waiter always hands him the check.

Since a waiter's pourboires depend on his astute snap judgments on who is a man of Substance and who is a man of No Consequence, it seems like strong evidence that WTOP's sports director is a man who commands attention.

Part of it is physical. Arch stands 6 feet 1 inch and weighs in at 230 to 235 pounds. He has what is sometimes called in the theater, "presence." Other sports writers and broadcasters who make bets—with odds of 5 to 1—that Arch will get the check wherever they go, say he gets it because he presides at table. "He dominates every gathering," says one sports writer. "He's a charmer, a politician, a salesman."

Specially Built Hats

IN Orlando, Fla., where he goes each spring to watch the Nats train, and where he was recently tendered a testimonial dinner and a silver ice bucket, Arch is called Colonel McDonald. And he looks like a Kentucky plantation owner as he stalks majestically along the street in his light-colored suits and his expensive, light-colored hats (worn brim down all the way around) which are made especially for Arch and bear a golden legend in the sweat band saying so.

"I'm too heavy to wear just any old hat," claims Arch. He even owns a $50 top hat, something he won from a sponsor who bet him a hat. "I told him I wore good hats and I ordered the most expensive one I could get," he chuckles.

Or he looks—and sounds with his thundering, rumbling voice—like a Congressman. (He had a near miss on that, running in 1946 for Congress in the Sixth District of Maryland and losing in what he calls "the black year" for the Democrats. He has since moved to Falls Church, Va., not out of pique but to be nearer the studio, and doesn't contemplate running again. And that's too bad, as he has great talent for filibustering, having once—when a relief man failed to show up—talked steadily for 6 hours and 50 minutes, recreating a doubleheader from Western Union reports received in the studio.)

Or he looks the actor he has always wanted to be—and sometimes is in amateur theatricals.

He looks, in fact, like anything but the popular conception of the newsman—the wiry, nervous, barking man with a much abused hat perched on the back of his head.

Racing down the street in his siren equipped car (hangover from his deputy sheriff days), he makes an impressive sound, too.

Heavy Schedule

ARCH is known—and nationally—as a sportscaster, being currently involved in a schedule something like this: At WTOP, two 10-minute sports shows at 6:30 and 11:20 p. m., at WWDC, WASH-FM, television station WTTG and five radio stations in Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, all the Washington Nats games plus "Dugout Chatter." The games he does for radio and television are divided, Arch taking some innings on radio and some on TV, and Bob Wolff and Howie Williams alternating conversely.

Arch can't settle on just one medium because a Nats game in either medium without Rooter No. 1 McDonald would be unthinkable. So unthinkable that it has been said Owner Clark Griffith would never OK anybody else. "McDonald comes with the Nats," explain the radio men. "It's not quite that way," says Arch. "It's just that Mr. Griffith likes to play pinochle and I know how."

Card games are his best sport, Arch says, although he once tried hard to be an athlete in between the times he tried hard to be an actor.

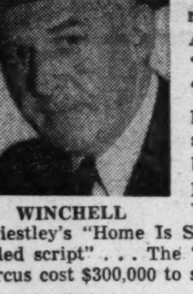
Though Critics Raved, Eliot's Revising 'The Cocktail Hour'

YOUR New York correspondent:

The Broadway lights: Although "The Cocktail Party" is a main stemint (it was crowned with the New York Critic Circle's annual halo), Author T. S. Eliot continues editing it . . . He has revised the third act almost completely since the premiere . . . Eliot keeps rewriting the hit, albeit three reviewers called it "A MASTERPIECE" . . . Quite a criticism of critics . . . Three of the five longest running Broadway musicals received divided notices . . . Critic Atkinson of the Times brushed off the flop, "Cry of the Peacock" (two nights), with this: "Very likely the play isn't as bad as it appears to be" . . . Huh? . . . Tryout town sentinels report that "Tickets, Please" could be a click, but that it needs polishing before lighting up a BROADWAY marquee . . . Variety's deputy in Pasadena buried J. B. Priestley's "Home Is Sorrow" with this epitaph: "Tedious, cliche-filled script" . . . The "When Dreams Come True" number in the circus cost $300,000 to stage.



WINCHELL

BETWEEN the acts: Critic GEORGE JEAN NATHAN (who walks out on more opening nights than anyone) became a rabid baseball fan only last season. He was telling a colyumist: "The first time I went to Yankee Stadium I knew it was for me."

"I s'pose," said his listener, "you never saw a place with so many darling exits before."

QUOTATION marksmanship: KANT: Never hurt anyone consciously; you do it too often unconsciously anyway . . . TONY LANE: The honeymoon is over when you start complaining about the hotel service . . . JILLA WEBB: With all the pro-Nazi admirers gaining entry to the United States, our shores seem to be wide open to riff-raffugees . . . M. R. ELIOT: She looks for trouble as though it paid her a salary.

VIGNETTE: Judy Parrish of the Katharine Hepburn hit, "As You Like It," had a visitor the other after-curtain time . . . A former schoolmate from Dubuque, who came to New York to get her name in lights . . . "Where are you living?" asked Judy . . . "Where you lived when you came to New York," said the stage-struck lass . . . "I know!" explained Judy. "It's the house between the beauty parlor and the Chinese restaurant!"

"Oh, no!" was the retort. "It's just around the corner from KIT CORNELL!"

STAIRWAY to the Stars: MP Michael Foote's complaint that IRENE DUNNE'S portrayal of Queen Victoria in a film "is the greatest insult to Great Britain" is still the talk of the Poppycocktail set . . . The Britisher apparently forgets the grand tribute to that Queen when HELEN HAYES played the role in "VICTORIA REGINA" . . . Maurice Evans, one of the superior greasepainters, groaned in an interview: "I loathe long runs" . . . Oh, sure. And DiMaggio abhors homers . . RIPLEY would have pounced on this news: Peter Garey, rehearsing for the touring troupe of "S. PACIFIC," resigned to join a carnival as a barker.

THE cinemagicians: The star of the new Jean Cocteau Film, "The Terrible Children," is Melvin Martin . . . A former Roxy theater chorus boy . . . Now that SHIRLEY TEMPLE is being romantically linked in the Papyrus again, her last film (withdrawn because of the divorce notoriety) will be released . . . When INGRID appeared in "For Whom the Bell Tolls" her beloved in it was also named ROBERTO . . . Startling to spot OLIVER HARDY (of Laurel & Hardy) playing a minor role in Bing's "Riding High" . . . The SATEVEPEE offers: "BETTY GRABLE: The World's Most Popular Blonde" . . . Soddy to shatter their illusions, but Be ! ! y's blonde fronds are strictly from peroxide.

THE aristocrats: Patricia Ferris is the name of the talented actress whose name was not mentioned in her Teevy debut when she emoted adroitly opposite Franchot Tone on the Studio One program . . . She's 19 . . . They are calling her a "Young Margaret Sullavan" . . . Lenny Herman's rhythms from the Village Barn are breezy . . . MILTON DRAKE is the lad who wrote "Mairzy Doats," not Al Trace, as the erratum had it . . . The ditty named "Choon Gum" may be a juke box pet, but not over at these ears.

THE intelligentsia: HOLIDAY magazine will start its own movie awards in January, 1951 . . . Jon Whitcomb, the illustrator, ends his search for four new Whitcomb girls on the 30th . . . The winners will be announced in July . . . Simon & Schuster will unveil a book of 100 caricatures of famed folks sketched by the late opera star CARUSO . . . "The Company of Men," by Roman Gary, insiders predict, may enjoy only a modest sale, but "approaches great fiction." John Gunther's "ROOSEVELT in RETROSPECT" comes out May 31 via Harper's. Worked five years on it. Advance proof-witnesses call it a "Work of FDR/t" . . . A novel titled "Double Door" (Creative Age is publisher) will lift eyebrows. Especially churchmen's . . . The Book of the Month for July will be Catherine D. Bowen's "John Adams and the American Revolution" . . . The tax collector should read "A Measure of Freedom," page 80, anyhow. Gives the exact incomes for J. KAMP, MERWIN K. HART, GERALD P. U. SMITH & Co.

Kirk Gets Ten Times What He Once Made

HOLLYWOOD.—Kirk Douglas reports to Paramount for "The Human Interest Story," in which he'll play a rugged newspaper reporter who has a touch of violence in his nature. Billy Wilder will direct the film, which starts next month. Kirk, one of the hottest bets in Hollywood, turned down nearly 100 scripts before he and Billy got together on this one. His salary as star will be around 10 times the amount he received for doing his first picture on the Paramount lot four years ago.

Jan Sterling and Paul Douglas became engaged while cruising with the Humphrey Bogarts over the weekend. Jan said, "We decided to make it official, because people were going to be marrying us off anyhow. The Bogarts exerted no influence. They just furnished the boat." Jan has just taken a six months' lease on a house; the marriage will take place in late summer. Both have pictures to do first.

BUSINESS AND PLEASURE: Jack Carson remains in New York to do "Mr. Universe," a picture dealing with wrestling. But he'll play a manager, not one of the grunt-and-groan boys. Lola Albright made a quick trip east to see him. . . . Jim Davis, whose career took a nosedive after the Bette Davis picture, "Winter Meeting," is talking a term deal with Republic. He's just finished "The Golden Tide" and is set for two more pictures there. So the studio figures it would be cheaper to put him under contract.

Peggy Cummins, back from Europe, has taken up where she left off with John Dall. . . . Lloyd Nolan will do a six weeks' tour of the West Coast with the play, "The Silver Whistle." . . . One of our leading women's magazines is citing Claudette Colbert as the best actress of the year for "Three Came Home."

Jack Benny opens his two-hour personal appearance show in Pasadena, May 10. Then he'll take it to 21 cities in 21 nights, closing with a big benefit for the Damon Runyon Cancer Fund at Carnegie Hall in New York. Phil Harris, Rochester, and Vivian Blaine will accompany Jack on the road.

ON HIS WAY: Alan Nixon, who's married to Marie Wilson, has finally got rolling on his acting career. He and Beverly Michaels are scheduled to do another picture for Hugo Haas to follow "Pick Up." . . . Arthur Kennedy will likely direct some of Tennessee Williams' one-act plays at Westport, Conn., this summer.

Dorothy Lamour won't wear sarongs for her Palladium appearance, but she's taking along several for the shows she'll put on for our troops in Germany.

Joan Crawford is using Spike Jones' Charleston album and a portable phonograf to supply mood music for "Harriet Craig." In the old Metro days, Joan usually had her phonograf going in her dressing room between scenes. First she had a crush on Bing Crosby's music, then it was opera.

The John Wayne comic book, isued only last December, has sold almost a million copies already. Insiders figure that merchandise indorsed by our Western stars will gross around 100 million dollars in sales this year—with Gene Autry, Roy Rogers, and Hopalong Cassidy products getting the biggest slices of the business.

Close-Up: Paulette

'Travel Light and Don't Be Late'

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenberg

"THE Perils of Paulette" is the title of a weekly comedy travelogue on film, in which Paulette Goddard would like to star, and then sell to William S. Paley or Niles Trammell or anybody else with a television network. She wants to travel the rest of her life—but she would like to be paid to do it. The first trips she ever made to Hollywood, she was haunted by this warning:

"Paulette, every man out there is a wolf. Don't get near one! Don't give anybody your phone number—not even your agent!"

She followed that advice right down to the last exclamation point: "Not even Myron Selznick, my agent, knew my phone number my first year in Hollywood.

Icy Shoulder

"SOON after I arrived, I was dancing one night at the Cocoanut Grove, when a distinguished-looking gentleman approached me and said, 'Excuse me, Miss Goddard, I'm Mr. Ginsberg of Paramount Pictures, and I wonder if you'd be interested in a screen test?'

"Immediately, I thought to myself—'That is it! Tis is what they warned me about!' So I gave Mr. Ginsberg my iciest shoulder, and this I said to him . . . oh, do I remember this line!

"'I don't know what you are talking about!' And that's how I didn't get a Paramount contract."

Warners Next

"MYRON, my agent, was beginning to get a little discouraged. But he sent me to Warner Brothers to see a new producer . . . who shall be nameless. I went into his office, with my head still whirling with all those tales about Hollywood wolves—and sure enough, there it was—a couch! Right in his office! And there was Mr. So-and-so, kind of leering up at me from his desk. Then . . . he said: 'Hello, darling.'

"That was enough for me—I knew this was a wolf! I grabbed one of the four telephones off his desk, and I bounced it right on his head!

"Sure, he howled bloody murder—'HELP! SHE'S MAD! LOCK HER UP!' And his secretary came racing into the office and said, 'What's happened, darling?'

"And he spluttered to her, 'Why . . . this . . . this mad woman here, just threw a telephone at me, darling!'

"And then I began to catch on—all this

Matters of Morals Scare Hollywood

By Bob Thomas

HOLLYWOOD, April 22 (AP).—Movieland's public relations are at their lowest point since the early '20s.

Back in those days, the movie industry was also threatened with Federal regulation. The narcotics death of a star, a murder involving two actresses and a manslaughter charge against a comedian brought on a torrent of public criticism. The scandals, plus a cycle of loose-moraled films, were denounced on the floor of the United States Senate.

Now it is 1950 and another Senator—Johnson of Colorado—is blasting Hollywood.

In the '20s the industry solved its problem by hiring Postmaster General Will Hays from President Harding's Cabinet. Hays policed the movies, just as Judge Landis whipped organized baseball into shape after the Black Sox scandal.

Baseball has not had a major scandal since. Hollywood has. And moviedom's bad publicity has mounted to an alarming degree in the last two years.

Town's Worried

HOLLYWOOD is worried—concerned not only about the scandals, but about the Nation's attitude toward the movies as a whole. The reason is simple—theater business is not good.

Hollywood believes its pictures are as good as ever. Then what is the reason for the falling-off box-office? Television is part of the answer. A larger part is public relations, many film men believe.

"Hollywood has never made an attempt to sell itself to the public," a distinguished star told me. "It has always been too concerned with selling its Jane Russells.

"And it doesn't even know how to sell stars and pictures any more. It is still using the same hoopla methods it used a quarter of a century ago. All the other big industries—soap concerns and department stores, for instance—have the latest surveys on what is selling and how to sell it. But the movies are still using antiquated methods."

Wheeze Doubted

A SAYING as old as Hollywood goes: "Any publicity is good publicity." People are beginning to doubt this proverb.

Have you heard of "Stromboli"? It is the most publicized picture of all time. But after the first day of its showing, people stayed away in large crowds.

This turn of the public mind has Hollywood scratching its head. The filmsters have learned that bad publicity can mean bad business at the theaters.

The front-page antics of Ingrid Bergman, Rita Hayworth, Robert Mitchum and some others do react against the movie business (although some people claim the news adds glamor, too).

Not Entire Answer

BUT scandal is not the whole answer. Many observers claim Hollywood has worked too hard for publicity and hardly at all for public relations.

There's a difference. Publicity is concerned with selling products—in the movies' case stars and pictures. Public relations means making friends for the industry as a whole.

Hollywood also has been lax at answering its critics. The town gets knocked everywhere from Pravda to the United States Senate. The industry usually has fortune which enabled him to compete in book collecting with such as W. A. White, Henry E. Huntington and J. P. Morgan.

Kept in Vaults

THROUGH their 50 years of collecting, the Folgers never got around to getting all their collections under one roof. These—first folios, priceless manuscripts and prompt books—rested in safe deposit vaults and warehouses.

After mulling over what to do with their by now unparalleled collection, the Folgers decided that Washington, already a mecca for scholars at the Library of Congress, should be the home of their possessions. Two weeks after the cornerstone was laid in 1930, Mr. Folger died.

But his widow was able to supervise the early years of the building. She died in 1936, four years after the building was opened, adding her fortune to the sum bequeathed by her husband for the upkeep of the building.

The trustees of Amherst College are now the trustees of the library. First director was the late Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, who slowly added other books of the period, both English and American, to the collection.

Now the building has become the center for research on other literary figures than Shakespeare. Among scholars working there you'll find Prof. Donald L. Clark, of Columbia and Prof. William Haller, of Barnard, whose life work is the study of Milton. Prof. H. T. Swedenberg, of U.C.L.A., is researching on Dryden and all qualified scholars are welcome.

Great Collection

TO NONSCHOLARS, such as your reporter, the library is especially fascinating because of its collection of costumes and props used by celebrated performers in their productions.

To visiting actors the prompt books and annotated directions of such players as Garrick, Kemble, Kean, Macready, Forrest, Cushman, Booth, Irving and Terry are the subject of fascinated study. I've seen John Gielgud go over his Aunt Ellen Terry's notes and I've watched Cornelia Otis Skinner gaze affectionately at a dagger her father Otis once used as Macbeth.

So this afternoon's birthday party continues the great Shakespearean story, reflected in this morning's book columns. There you'll find Dr. James G. McManaway, the Folger's consultant in bibliography, reviewing the latest in the unending stream of Shakespeare books, Marchette Chute's "Shakespeare of London." It's a Book-of-the-Month selection. The Bard of Avon's still going strong.

"THE LOST PLAYHOUSE:" Dr. John Cranford Adams and his model of Shakespeare's Globe Theater, to be unveiled this afternoon on the poet's birthday at the Folger Library

Glen Echo Square Dance

Thursday nights are sacred to square dancing this season in the Spanish Ballroom of Glen Echo Park. Ralph Case, who taught Margaret Truman the art and has called for dances at such diverse spots as Madison Square Garden and the Congressional Country Club, calls the dances, with Zeb Turner as featured singer. Sammy Ferro and his temporarily renamed "Kountry Kousins" supply the bandwork.

Shriners' Circus Starts Tomorrow

THE ninth annual Shrine Circus takes over Uline's Arena for a week's engagement starting tomorrow night with six matinees and seven evening performances scheduled.

Seventeen European acts will be offered, highlighted by Myriam France, aerialist, who was featured at the Circus Medrano in Paris before being brought to this country by Hamid-Morton, producer of the 38-act show.

Another popular aerialist, Francine Volante, will do her spectacular "Leap of Death."

Matinees start at 2:15, evening shows at 8:15. Tickets are at Almas Temple, 1315 K st. nw., Stabler's, 1322 F st. nw. and Uline Arena, 3d and M sts. ne.

Children's Studios Presenting Unique Program of Plays

ROSE Robinson Cowen's Children's Studios of speech and dramatic arts are presenting a unique program of international children's plays, inspired by International Theater Month.

The series is being presented at the studios, 3815 Livingston st. nw.

All the plays were chosen by the children, from kindergarten to high school age.

One group, aged 4 to 8, created their own play, "The Owl and the Pussy Cat." This was composed by the youngsters last year, improvising lines which were jotted down by an inconspicuous stenographer. Thus, the improvised play was captured for future classes. This year's age-group has made its own revisions.

Among the offerings on future programs will be "Little Women" Wednesday evening at 8:30, "Beauty Is Fled," stemming from German folklore, Thursday and Friday nights; "Martina and Perez," a Puerto Rican legend on Saturday night. For the following week English, Mexican and Czech plays are planned.

Musical 'Lucky Day' Opens at C. U. Friday

Catholic University's drama department will present its annual musical comedy Friday night for a run through May 13.

"Lucky Day" is this year's event, with book and lyrics by Leo Brady and music by Edward Cashman. Father Gilbert V. Hartke is directing, with Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan coaching the performances.

The dances will be staged by Barbara Cole, back in Washington with the Lisa Gardiner school.

Fairlington Revue Opens Thursday

"Swingin' Along," the Fairlington Players' original revue, will be presented Thursday and Friday nights at the Arlington Farms Recreation Hall.

Under the direction of Sue Evans and Richard Purser and production management of Anette Flugger, a revue employing 100 members of the Fairlington group has been conceived.

Seats will be on sale at the door both evenings and may be reserved by phoning Overlook 0871 or Temple 4634.

'The Winslow Boy' At Leland Junior

The Montgomery Players will present Terence Rattigan's play, "The Winslow Boy", Saturday night and May 1 and 2 at Leland Junior High School.

Jane Plummer Rice and Hilary Knapp will direct and play two of the leads. Others in the cast will include Marshall Smith, William Vance and George Grizzard.

Reservations may be made at WIsconsin 4685.

'School for Scandal'

The Port Tobacco Players of Charles County will present Sheridan's "The School for Scandal" Friday and Saturday nights at the La Plata High School auditorium.

National Symphony

Good Musical List Marked First Year Under Mitchell

By Paul Hume

THE most widely varied list of music yet heard in a single National Symphony season was given during Howard Mitchell's first year as conductor.

More music hitherto unplayed by the resident orchestra was programmed, and there was less repetition of familiar items of the standard repertoire than previously.

The orchestra's library was enriched by the playing of a Mozart violin concerto in G, not heard here before, by the same composer's Sinfonia Concertante, also a novelty on the lists, and by the sixth symphony of Shostakovich, the fifth of Prokofieff, and the first of Mahler.

Other concertos not heard here before, though not in the novel class, were the A minor for violin by Bach, and the third piano vehicle of Rachmaninoff. The Britten piano concerto was a new work to Washington of recent vintage.

Other standard items added to the National Symphony's listings included music by Faure, Moussorgsky, Barber, Vaughan Williams, and others. For variety of mood, period, and styles, it was a rewarding season.

American Music?

IN ONE respect, it was a serious disappointment. This is, as you so often read, the Nation's Capital. And there was not enough American music on the programs of the National Symphony last season.

On the 20 Wednesday programs, of which Mitchell conducted 15, there were only six pieces by American composers. Six compositions, whose total playing time is not as great as that of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony!

To those six, you may add four more played on the Sunday afternoon series, plus the repetition of one work, Paul Creston's symphony, from the Wednesday list.

That is not the kind of representation American music deserves, on the programs of this or any other orchestra in this country.

Great Music

THERE is as much good music being written today in this country as in any country in the world. There is no reason why a concert today should list only music by Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms. Why not Bach and Brahms, with some such name between them as:

David Diamond, Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copland, Walter Piston, Leo Sowerby, Robert Sanders, Henry Cowell, Howard Hanson, Samuel Barber, Norman Dello Joio, Wallingford Riegger, Virgil Thomson, Douglas Moore, Quincy Porter, William Bergsma, Randall Thompson, Elliot Carter?

And why not some music by an American on every concert, unless it is a rare occasion when a work such as the Verdi Requiem requires the entire time? Nor do we need all-Tschaikowsky programs. Tschaikowsky can be heard on the radio almost every day in the week.

Instead of all-Tschaikowsky programs, why not half Tschaikowsky, and half something else, with some solid American music included?

Millions of people will see "The Heiress" on motion picture screens across the country. The score for that picture was written by Aaron Copland. It is typical of his style—a score of enormous power and skill. His music for the concert hall is the same kind.

Look Afar

THIS is a serious matter—in France, the government subsidizes certain outstanding musical organizations. The programs of these institutions include French music on every concert!

In England, the British Council of Fine Arts aids in commissioning and having performed the music of British composers. We are happy in America that we do not have Government subsidy. Must we continue to be ashamed of our music, or shall we have a chance to hear it, and hearing it, come to know and appreciate it?

In other matters, the programs of the National Symphony Orchestra were satisfactory. There was good representation of contemporary music from Europe—though actually little of it was written less than 40 years ago.

We are now sure of hearing a reasonable mixture of standard and new concertos. The programs from week to week gave change and variety. But we must hear, regularly, the music of our own composers.

The Music Box

It'll Be a Big Week for Choral Music

THIS is the year's richest week for choral music.

Tonight at 8 and 8:30 four choral programs are competing for your attention. All four are free:

(1) Bach's Magnificat at First Congregational Church; (2) Stravinsky's Symphony of Psalms in National Presbyterian Church; (3) a Bach cantata, and local premieres of music by Diamond, Piston, and Vaughan Williams, at Catholic University; (4) the Centre Choir of Centre College, Kentucky, in the National Gallery.

Nor is that the week's quota of choral music. Thursday night the Westminster Choir under its famous director, John Finley Williamson, comes to Constitution Hall.

ALIMONDA SANROMA

OTHER outstanding events include the Budapest-Curzon recital at the Library of Congress, an illustrous combination any time; John Jacob Niles today at Phillips Gallery; the composers' forum Wednesday, open to the public, with fine music and musicians; and Karl Doktor, playing viola Thursday on the Georgetown Concert Series. Jesus Maria Sanroma is Wednesday's soloist with the Army Band.

Monday night's annual dinner of the Washington Music Teachers Association will hear music by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School Singers, a trio by Riegger, and Mary Howe in reminiscences of the MacDowell colony.

Richard Bales will open his seventh American Music Festival on May 7, with a violin-piano sonata recital. Further details will be given next Sunday.

FOLLOWING Tuesday night's song recital by Mary Adams, the new organ in St. Clement's Church, Alexandria, will be demonstrated by Lyman McCrary.

As usual, the Pan-American Union concert this week is announced in our calendar. Heitor Alimonda is the visiting pianist. These concerts are open to the public by invitation from the Union.

Clubs: The Monday evening Club meets tomorrow at 8:15 to hear Sophocles Papas discuss the Romance of the Guitar. Throughout the week the Washington Boys Club will present nightly concerts in its auditorium in its second annual music festival.

Amparo and Jose Iturbi . . . play tomorrow night in Constitution Hall

Father-Son Banquets

Next Sunday night will bring a revival of the Father-Son banquets sponsored by the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation. Sidney B. Lust is chairman.

Circus folk and settings will be the keynote for the Mayflower banquet, with circus and carnival acts from the Johnny J. Jones Exposition. Ted Mack and a bevy of his Amateur Hour performers will appear.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld and Rabbi Hugo Schiff are honorary chairmen.

A Single by Flagstad

RCA Victor announces a single of a recording (from England) by Kirsten Flagstad, her first issued here in some time, of Elizabeth's prayer, from "Tannhaeuser;" and the signing of Margaret Truman to a record contract, with the first issues scheduled in the fall.—(AP).

Eddie (WTOP) Gallaher ON RECORDS

ALTHOUGH cornball novelties are currently riding the crest of popularity, a harbinger of better things to come has just appeared on the scene. Let those who decry the musical intelligence of the popular record fans note that a song of genuine merit has recently caught the public fancy, and is growing in popularity by leaps and bounds. I refer to that refreshing bit of enchantment by Richard Rodgers, known as "Bewitched."

Rodgers is best known today as the composer of the music to "South Pacific," this being the only portion of that fabulous show to which most ordinary mortals have been able to gain access. Years before he fashioned the melodies for that show and for its happy predecessor, "Oklahoma!", however, Rodgers was involved in a Broadway show called "Pal Joey."

This divertisement is best remembered because it contained a leading man, on whom fortune was smiling for the first time, named Gene Kelly; and it also gave employment to a young chorus boy, to whom fortune was paying no attention whatsoever at the time, named Van Johnson. If Johnson had any qualms just then about his failure to receive recognition in "Pal Joey," he could derive a measure of consolation from the fact that some of the most sparkling songs of a great American tunesmith were also languishing unnoticed in the show, being considered too good for the popular taste. "Bewitched" was one of those songs.

BILL SNYDER, a Chicago pianist and arranger whose orchestra plays in the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman, finally brought attention to "Bewitched" this year through his Tower record. Snyder's instrumental version deals with the melody in novel fashion, with playful imitative passages between the piano and orchestra.

Synder would seem to be a newcomer of considerable promise, my only reservation about him being the fact that he changed one note of the release in his record of "Bewitched," for some unaccountable reason, and the fact that he is the possessor of a piano named Oscar. This latter piece of whimsy, while rather dubious, is explained by Snyder on the grounds that it calls special attention to his piano, a custom-built job which, among other things, requires no tuning.

Having received its initial impetus from the Bill Snyder recording, "Bewitched" has been speeded on its way by a new Capitol record by Mel Torme. Torme, like Oscar, manages to stay in tune at all times; but his vocal equipment, as he would be the first to admit, is rather meager. In its place, he substitutes an impeccable musical taste, and a style which has never been more happily engaged than in "Bewitched."

NOT SINCE Artie Shaw's saucy arrangement brought lasting popularity to "Begin the Beguine," which had hitherto been considered too pompous for public consumption, has there been a case to equal "Bewitched," a song of distinctly superior musical caliber finding favor so many years after its introduction in a Broadway show.

The lesson from this is clear. Let's have more of these fresh and ingenious settings of the great, but uncelebrated, songs which are clamoring for recognition. I can think of no better way to lend permanent enrichment to the pleasure we receive from popular music.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9:30 a. m.; Moondial, 11:20 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The Record Player

Weissenberg's Piano Has Hard, Fast, Fiery Tone

PROKOFIEFF: Sonata No. 3 in A Minor; Suggestion Diabolique; also: Scriabin: Etude, and Nocturne for left hand alone. Sigi Weissenberg, pianist. ML 2099. $3.95.

Young Weissenberg came to this country several years ago, and promptly won some high-flying prize money. His Columbia record debut is a superb sample of his talents.

His tone is hard, fast, and fiery. He can make the octaves and intricate passages of Prokofieff's sonata seem easy, and at a fantastic speed. The same is true of his account of the famous study. His piano is well recorded and sounds as handsome as such technique allows.

He understands the music well, but I would not yet want to hear him in a recital that included classical or romantic music.

In Scriabin he produces a good singing tone without much penetration into the real beauty of the phrases.

SATIE-DEBUSSY: Gymnopedies 1 and 2. Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussevitsky. Victor 49-0771. 95c.

We still need some real Satie music on records. Aside from the Casadesus' two-piano album and a few foreign recordings of some of his better songs, this genius of the intimate and exquisitely fashioned is neglected on records. Yet records are the most satisfactory place for his fragile but clear art.

Debussy orchestrated these two slender impressions. They call to mind ancient Grecian dances. Koussevitsky and his former charges play with beauty and utmost restraint. The surfaces are quiet, but the tone is a bit lacking in liveliness. HUME.

Orchestra Signs Soloists for '51

With one season just over, the National Symphony is already planning soloists and repertoire for next year.

For advance information, here are the names signed thus far:

Guest conductors: Leopold Stokowski, Ernest Ansermet, Leonard Bernstein, Paul Callaway;

Pianists: Novaes, Arrau, Earl Wild; Margaret Tolson, Hess, Jambor, Bolet, Levant;

Violinists: Tomasow, Stern, Francescatti, Morini;

Choruses: Washington and Cathedral; Washington-Lee, Florence Booker, director.

Stokowski and Bernstein will conduct two Wednesdays each, with Ansermet the same, plus one Sunday afternoon.

To Present Wilde Play

Woodrow Wilson High School's drama group will present Oscar Wilde's comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest," Thursday and Friday nights at 8 in the school auditorium.

Miss Cross Spoofs Portraiture

By Jane Watson Crane

EVEN at her most serious, one always knew that Bernice Cross had a sense of humor. Her current exhibition at the Whyte Gallery reveals some keen satire. "The Ancestor" is a handsome canvas; it is also a take-off on the whole field of portraiture wherein sitter and artist are so obviously anxious to live up to their responsibility to posterity, to provide future generations with an antecedent of distinction.

Deftly handled are the studied pose, the regal manner, the angular face and figure. Conveyed without the accents of caricature or exaggeration are the dignified aloofness, the utterly impersonal air which are hallmarks of formal portraiture.

In the current show, the artist conveys more with greater economy of means than in any of her previous exhibtis. Sometimes it is through a simple representational figure, as in "Stone Angel," a small, vertical painting in which is suggested the feel and character of carved stone and also something of the spirit animating it. The painting "From Li Tai Po" leads the spectator into an entirely different mood, as does "The Shore," which should be a child's delight. The paintings combine two attributes which are often not well blended—imagination and restraint.

THE CARVED teakwood figure by Heinz Warneke, "Peasant Mother," presented to the Corcoran recently by the Washington Society of Fine Arts, is actually the first piece by the artist to come into possession of the gallery, although many of his works have been exhibited there on loan.

The sculptor, who ranks among the best in the country, has been teaching at the Corcoran for several years. Although he has executed a number of monumental works on commission, his popularity and reputation rest to a great extent on his animal figures and groups.

This month, when the Baltimore Museum opened its new children's wing with a "Barnyard Zoo" display, Warneke sent over a sizable group of sculptures.

AN EXHIBIT of unusual interest opened this week at the United Nations Club, where a series of works by Jules Pascin are shown for the first time in Washington. They are lent by Wood Gaylor, one of the artist's friends and admirers in this country.

The painter, whose reputation is in the ascendant, had a tragic life, terminated by his suicide in Paris in 1930. Born in Bulgaria, Pascin was a wanderer most of his life, never settling in one place for long. In his journeys he came to the United States, leaving it for the last time in 1928.

His work is distinguished for the subtlety of his low-toned palette and above all for his sensitivity of line. A half century ago, he had a wide influence among his fellow artists, particularly in this country. Writing of him in the Arts in 1931, Forbes Watson remarked of Pascin's approach: "The lonely heart in Pascin kept him from ever attempting to delve too far into actualities. His racial and living complexities could only find consolation in speed, subtlety and unimaginable lightness. Quality, not greatness, was Pascin's. But for quality, the rarity, we should be sufficiently thankful."

McDonald Thinks He Has Talked to Everybody

Winner of a number of awards for his sportscasting, he is considered by his fans to be such a compendium of sports knowledge that he had to have his home phone privately listed to stop midnight and 3 a. m. calls about who won the pennant in 1920, or what the world's shot-put record is.

Arch McDonald—in his only non-Stetson hat—with Arthur Godfrey. Picture was taken in the late '30s when both boys clowned around at WTOP. One gushing fan mistook this picture of Arch for Elsa Maxwell. He'll join sidekick Godfrey on WOIC this Wednesday at 8 p. m.

Hot Spot

BUT Arch has had a checkered broadcasting career. He's broadcast from a diving bell in the bottom of the Potomac to make the first such broadcast in history. "That's the hottest place I ever broadcast from," he remembers, although he thinks the little hot box he works from at the ball park runs it a close second.

He's broadcast from the ladies' room at the Willard Hotel, when through some mixup the station was unable to set up its equipment in the main ballroom, where some awards were being given.

"I think I've seen or talked to everybody there is to see or talk to," says Arch who once talked to the President for 35 minutes after the Chief Executive had extended their chat from the usual five-minute appointment. And Arch has talked to a murderer, put him on the air, in fact, on a man-on-the-street broadcast the same day the man hit the street fresh out of Lorton.

Dislikes Mice

OUT of his 17 years of experience at WTOP (formerly WJSV), Arch remembers vividly the time he let a punch-drunk fighter he had been interviewing take a peek at Mrs. Roosevelt, who was rehearsing in a neighboring studio. The fighter gawped through the plate glass of the control room and when the First Lady smiled at him he got so excited he started to shadow box like a mad man and clasped his hands over his head in the sign of the winner.

Arch grabbed him, threw a quick explanation to the CBS director of special events, and fled.

That's not the only thing that's ever made Arch flee. He's afraid of mice, and like the lumbering elephant will go nutty with a mouse around. "I'd jump on that table as quick as any girl," says the bulky man of Substance.

He's also got a "thing" about peach fuzz and once pasted a friend smartly in the eye when he insisted on rubbing some on him. "I really didn't do him any good," he says remorsefully.

Snakes don't bother him. He's owned several, including Buford and J. Rufus. He's also owned a monkey named Godfrey. In the early days Arch and Arthur Godfrey used to share an office at WTOP, and they've filled in for each other hundreds of times.

To Visit Godfrey

THIS Wednesday (WOIC, 8 p. m.) Arch will be on Godfrey's television show with Yankee Player Tommy Henrich. "What time shall I get there for rehearsal?" Arch asked a member of the Godfrey staff. "You? Rehearse with Godfrey? Don't be silly. You get there just in time for the show," he said, remembering the time the two boys ad libbed about old times for 20 minutes when a five-minute shot had been planned on the radio show.

McDonald's interests other than sports—and this may explain the snakes—are circuses and rodeos. "I've never missed a circus in my life," says Arch. He travels miles out of his way to see any circus. "One ring or five, it makes no difference," he says. "I know all the animals by their first names."

And Arch would have been a circus man, if he hadn't been a broadcaster. If he hadn't been an actor instead. If he hadn't been a politician instead, that is.

What Became Of Banned Giveaways?

A plaintive little note in the mail wanted to know what happened to all those headlines about giveaway programs being banned. Well, that's a long, unfinished story, one chapter of which follows.

Tomorrow morning WWDC will begin giving away $100 to anybody, part of whose social security number or D. C., Maryland or Virginia driver's permit number is called on the air—at the dazzling rate of one an hour for 12 hours a day six days a week.

WWDC has been doing this twice a day for a couple of months, and once a day since July when the idea started on the Jon Massey show.

How It Works

THE gimmick works like this: every hour—but not on the hour—a four or six digit number will be read on WWDC. If the digits exist in the same order on your SS card or driver's permit, all you have to do is drop by the station within 24 hours with your proof and pick up the cash.

Although WWDC is potentially offering $1200 a day, they stand to lose nothing like that amount, since the laws of chance rule against the numbers turning up very often.

The numbers will be read at varying times within each hour from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m., with the clear intention of keeping you glued to 1260 on the dial or suffer the consequences. Is clear?

Hard Way

IF you happen to have no SS card and are utterly starving and are unable to collect unemployment compensation and are utterly starving and simply don't care how you earn your living and are utterly starving, you can still get in on this the hard way.

You might do as a man does in Tulsa, Okla.—one of the 50 cities already airing this particular numbers racket. Charge other people a small fee of $1 apiece to listen to the radio for them. With a little list of your clients' SS numbers and drivers' permit numbers at your elbow, all you have to do is sit at home, feet up, shoes off, collar unbuttoned and listen to WWDC for 13 hours every day. Finance your own way into St. Elizabeths. Why be a charity case?

Radio to Observe Israel Birthday

Three special programs honoring the second anniversary of Israel as a state will be aired today.

At noon on WQQW the weekly "Jewish Life" program, written and directed by Larry Frommer, will have as its guest Ambassador Eliahu Elath of Israel. Ambassador Elath made his radio debut on this program two years ago.

At 12:30 p. m. on WRC, the weekly "Eternal Light" program will dramatize "On Wings of Eagles" by Sylvia Berger, marking the second anniversary with a story of mass migration. Cantor David Putterman and Saul Gamliel will sing and Jack D. Weller, vice president of the United Jewish Appeal, will speak.

At 5 p. m. on WTOP, Quentin Reynolds will narrate "Israel—Year II."

Nancy Osgood Launches New Shopping Show on Video

Nancy Osgood, director of women's activities for WRC, has begun a "Shop by Television" program on WNBW. The program, to be seen Thursday nights at 8, will show merchandise from the Hecht Co. Ray Michael works with Miss Osgood on the show.

NANCY

A group of models are on hand to answer the phone and accept mail orders. Similar programs are also being produced on WMAL-TV and WOIC with Ruth Crane.

Miss Osgood, who celebrated her sixth anniversary as a broadcaster on WRC last Monday, is also now appearing daily except Sunday on WNBW's 2 to 3 p. m. "TV Shopper's Review."

She is continuing her daily radio program on WRC (9:30 a. m.).

The first Washington woman broadcaster to appear on Washington television, since WNBW was the first commercial TV station here, Miss Osgood has covered special events assignments for NBC-TV network, including coverage of the woman's angle at the two major political conventions at Philadelphia, and the inaugural ball in Washington.

Big Radio-TV Show May Be Brewing

A giant annual radio and television festival in which broadcasting's best talent and finest features would be combined in an all-network, all-station two-hour show is proposed by Robert K. Richards, NAB director of public affairs.

The purpose would be to show off to the listening and viewing public in one package just what broadcasting offers.

The Stamp Column by William M. Stuart, and the Crossword Puzzle will be found on Page 10 of the Garden and Homemaking section today.

TB Experts Meeting in D. C.

Authorities on tuberculosis will describe the over-all control of the disease in a panel discussion over WMAL tomorrow night at 10. Dr. Robert J. Anderson, chief, division of tuberculosis, United States Health Service, will be among the featured speakers.

The broadcast will be among the highlights of the joint annual meetings of the National Tuberculosis Association, American Trudeau Society and the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries being held April 24-28 at the Statler Hotel.

Dr. Esmond L. Long, director of the Henry Phipps Institute of Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. James E. Perkins, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Association; and Dr. H. McLeod Riggins of New York, committee chairman on medical research and therapy, NTA, will also speak.

Other radio broadcasts this week on tuberculosis will include an address by Dr. Herbert L. Mantz, past president of NTA, on WRC, 9:30 a. m., Tuesday; a broadcast on WTOP, 9:30 a. m., Wednesday; and an address by Dr. R. D. Thompson, president of NTA, on WMAL, Thursday at 11:30 a. m.

A panel of experts will discuss rehabilitation on WINX, Thursday at 8:05 p. m.

RCA Color TV To Be Shown At Home Show

The first showing to the general public of the new all-electronic color television system developed by the Radio Corporation of America will be a highlight at the Annual Home Builders Exposition of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, to be held at the D. C. National Guard Armory, May 12 through May 21.

RCA's new color receivers, recently demonstrated to the Federal Communications Commission in Washington, have never before been shown for the general public. They make use of a multicolor tube.

Special color television programs broadcast by television Station WNBW (Channel 4) will be received at the Armory on a daily schedule, so that the public can view the system. These same color broadcast transmissions from Station WNBW will be seen on ordinary black-and-white sets in black and white since the RCA color system is entirely compatible with present receivers to that extent.

Since January 9, NBC's Station WNBW at the Wardman Park Hotel has been broadcasting color programs five days a week

Print Annual Opens Here Tomorrow

ON THE heels of the controversy over the last award in poetry, the Library of Congress discontinued its policy of giving awards in any field of the arts. Evidence that the decision did not discourage the artists is seen in the response to the print annual, which will open at the Library tomorrow. Interest shown was greater than at any time since the first show in 1943, with a total of 1410 works submitted, from 35 States, the District of Columbia and Hawaii. From these, 199 prints were chosen, by 184 artists. The jury of admission this year was composed of Ernest Roth, etcher, J. J. Lankes, wood engraver, and Benton Spruance, lithographer.

The show is open to all printmakers in any manual technique in black and white or color, although limited to work done within the year preceding. As in the past, a number of prints will be purchased by the Pennell Fund Committee for the Library's collection. The fund was left to the Library by the late Joseph Pennell, print-maker and illustrator.

On Sunday, April 30, the Arts Club will present a special exhibition of religious fine arts, to include painting, sculpture, enamelware, embroidery and books. Members of the Village Art Center in New York will be among the exhibitors, others to include Clare Fontanini of Catholic University, Richard Goethe, wood carver, and Lucy Mackrille, specialist in ecclesiastical embroidery.

The second Annual Art Show of work by Montgomery County artists opens this afternoon at Ginn's, 8614 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md.

Berle to Do Better

Last year Milton Berle did a 16-hour continuous telecast on behalf of the Damon Runyon Cancer fund via NBC-TV. This year he's going to try to do better. Date for the stunt has been set for April 29, with the schedule calling for it to run from noon Saturday through 10:30 a. m. the next day.

Kentucky Derby Next On Radio Sport Slate

By C. E. Butterfield

NEW YORK, April 22 (AP).—Next on the broadcast roster of national sporting events is the Kentucky Derby, May 6. Again it will go via CBS radio.

Television will be local only, because network connection to Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., is lacking. Louisville's WHAS-TV, a recently opened station, will carry the race this year. The rest of the video audience get a chance to see it the next night—May 7 at 10:30 p. m. (Eastern local time)—by means of a film over the CBS-TV network.

Besides the actual running of the race, CBS radio will have two 15-minute previews, one the evening of May 2 and the other just ahead of the race. The actual derby broadcast is to run 30 minutes. The regular sponsor of such events (Gillette) is picking up the tab.

Meanwhile, NBC reports that its 2½-hour combined Jack Carter and Sid Caesar shows continue to get high viewer ratings. Because of the development of an unanticipated sponsor deal, a change is being made in the summer schedule. The Caesar section will go off as planned May 20, but the Carter hour will remain three weeks longer to meet the sponsor contract.

Two other shows which previously had gained a foothold on the Saturday schedule are going as strongly as ever. They are Dumont's Cavalcade of Stars and the Paul Whiteman Teenagers on ABC-TV, both of which have been on the air about a year.

The Report Card

Planeview Is One of 600 Towns Which Need U. S. School Help

By Elsie Carper

PLANEVIEW, Kans., is a wartime boom town that has refused to become a ghost community.

Three thousand demountable and temporary housing units thrown up during the war still are occupied by employes of aircraft factories in the vicinity of Wichita.

The wartime problem of providing schooling for the community's children has become a permanent and nagging financial crisis.

A Federally owned housing community, Planeview lacks the taxable industries and real estate to support schools. It must depend on the taxes it levies on personal property, State aid and inadequate handouts from the Federal Government.

Before it became a Federal city, Planeview consisted of 592 acres of Kansas prairie, three farmhouses and no schools. Today it has a growing school population of 3000.

PLANEVIEW is one of 600 communities throughout the Nation now seeking Federal school aid. The areas have financial problems brought on by the war and postwar expansion of Federal activities.

Representatives of these communities will participate in a public meeting to be held in Washington Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the auditorium of Western High School, 35th and R sts. nw.

The meeting will direct its attention to H. R. 7940, a bill to provide Federal aid for operation of schools in communities where military or civil activities of the Federal Government have placed unusual burdens on the school districts.

C. F. COLVIN, superintendent of schools in Planeview, told what his district is up against in providing schooling when he testified before a congressional committee holding hearings on the bill.

The cost of educating each child last year was $173. All available tax sources and State funds brought in only $72 for every child.

With not a single privately owned house to tax, the total in revenue the community could raise was $9491, an average of little more than $3 a child. Residents doubled the valuation placed on their personal property and upped the levy to the maximum allowed by the State of Kansas to produce the sum.

Payments made by the Federal Government in lieu of taxes amounted to $94,866, or about $35 a child. State assistance added another $34 per pupil.

The community was left with a deficit of $100 for each child in school.

During the war years the Federal Government met the deficit with Lanham Act funds. Since the end of the war the Government has been aiding the community which it owns lock, stock and barrel, with sporadic appropriations.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT COLVIN testified that the Planeview schools have had a day-to-day existence, never knowing at the beginning of the school year what the budget would be.

"I can cite you several months when the day before the payroll was to go out, I have received money to meet it," Colvin said.

"Of course, that information has to be kept within the office of the superintendent or you know what that will mean for teachers. If they knew that, I would not have any teachers."

COLVIN said that frequently he has met the payroll deadline by borrowing ahead on Federal and State payments. He said that he has never been able to offer his teachers contracts. As a result they leave the Planeview schools for permanent and better-paid jobs in nearby Wichita.

Provisions of the bill introduced by Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.) would give continuing aid to Planeview.

The community would be assured of sufficient Federal funds each year to pay the difference between the cost of educating each child and the amount it receives in State aid.

Francis Comes to a Dubious End

The spokesman turned to me. "Lieutenant, we have constructed a special platform. We are all hoping the mule will say a few words." I looked at Francis. The mule shook his head in protest

Synopsis: Yesterday Francis, the talking, flying mule, meant to keep his mouth shut when the newspaper showed up, but somebody insulted him and he gave them a tongue-lashing. It was the greatest story of the age.

By David Stern

NEVER had I seen such a sight. People as far as the eye could see—cheering, yelling, hysterical people.

Four generals were approaching the foot of the ramp. I came to a salute. Francis wabbled to attention.

The generals looked nervous. One of them stepped forward and half bowed.

"Welcome home to America," he said to the mule.

Francis didn't move.

The spokesman turned to me. "Lieutenant, we have constructed a special platform in front of the administration building. We are all hoping the mule will say a few words."

I looked at Francis. The mule shook his head in protest.

"Yes, sir," I said.

The mule and I walked up the ramp onto the platform. At the front was a railed enclosure. Before it were two dozen microphones.

The multitude removed hats, stood in silence.

A general spoke briefly. He said America was proud of its fighting men, and his voice reached a crescendo as he roared " . . . and America is also proud of her fighting mules!"

Francis Speaks

"AND NOW," said the general, "I want to introduce to you a great hero, a great soldier, a great mule, Francis!"

The mule stepped forward.

The masses were silent.

Then Francis spoke.

"Morons!" said the mule. "Stupid, ignorant collections of clucks . . ."

"For Christmas sake, Francis," I hissed, "are you nuts!"

"Shut up," whispered Francis. "I'll handle this my own way."

The mule turned back to the microphones.

"A half a million people here, they tell me. All gawking and staring and flapping their ears in the wind. Bah!"

The thousands were too startled to move.

"Yes," said Francis, " a sorry-looking collection. . . ."

There was a long pause. The mule looked around the field. "But," and suddenly Francis' voice rang out strong and clear, "by the tail of my great-aunt Regret, who won the Derby, you are Americans! you are my people! You are the finest collection of human beings on the face of this sorry old world! I love every damned one of you, so help my mulish hide!"

Pandemonium broke loose. Even the generals were cheering. Hats sailed into the air. People were pounding each other on the back. Husbands were kissing their wives and other men's wives. Hysteria reigned.

Tough Schedule

I HAD been granted a seven-day leave. I was to proceed to my home, spend a week with my family, then meet Francis in Chicago, where the mule was to make his first speech at Soldiers' Field.

I walked into the stable to bid Francis goodby.

"You ought to be fairly comfortable here," I said.

"Everything I want except peace of mind," said Francis.

"What's the matter?"

"Have you seen the schedule they've planned for me? Speeches, public appearances, more speeches. All the way across the country and back again. I'd rather be shot. I'd rather do KP for the rest of my life . . . I wouldn't be surprised if I didn't run out on the whole show," snorted Francis.

"You mean you'd desert?" I asked.

"It's quite a hill," said the mule. "But I might go over it. Where are you going?"

"Home," I said. "I have a seven-day leave."

"Damn it all, lieutenant, there must be something the matter with me. I hate to see you leave."

I went over and put my arm around the mule's neck. "It will only be for a week, Francis," I said.

"You're really not a bad guy, lieutenant. You're really not."

"Take care of yourself, Francis."

'Read About It!'

I ARRIVED in Chicago two hours before the mule's plane was due. Then I heard a newsboy yelling!

"Extra! Extra! Read all about it. Mule killed in plane crash!"

I staggered. Grabbed a paper. There it was:

FRANCIS KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

I must have been crying. I could hardly read the story. Over the Kentucky hills the ship had run into a thunderstorm. Lightning struck the right wing. Two motors were dead.

The crew said Francis had taken charge, ordered the men to jump. The pilot reported that as he was about to abandon ship the mule had smiled at him and said, "Carry on, I am giving my life for my country."

The Air Corps officers were more than understanding. Fifteen minutes after I arrived at their field, a reconnaissance plane was gassed and warming up.

Three hours later I was in the control room of an airport in Kentucky, only 10 miles from where Francis' plane had crashed.

A cavalcade of jeeps set out for the scene of the disaster.

We had to climb the last half mile on foot.

At the end of a swath of crushed and burned trees we came upon the wreck.

A forest ranger stood guard.

No Bodies at All

"DID you find any bodies?" I tried to keep my voice steady.

The ranger looked at me quizzacally, spat some tobacco juice. "Wasn't no bodies," he said.

"Was there a mule?" I asked.

The ranger speculated a moment, spat again. "Wasn't no bodies at all."

Suddenly it struck me!

All those heroics of Francis, . . . ordering the crew to jump . . . "Carry on. I am giving my life for my country . . ."

Had it all been a build-up?

Hadn't Francis always claimed he could fly?

Hadn't the mule told me he was going over the hill if the opportunity presented itself?

Was I just dreaming? Was the broken, lifeless body of the talking, flying mule lying somewhere in the Kentucky hills?

Or was this just another of the mule's fabulous stunts?

That's all I know about Francis.

Since the day the plane crashed I've spent my time trying to find the mule.

Is He AWOL?

WHETHER Francis is alive I do not know.

But if he is, then undoubtedly, at this very moment, the mule is standing contentedly in the shade of some sassafras tree, his tail swishing listlessly. While he indulges in the delicious satisfaction of being AWOL.

Me?

I miss the animal so I'm almost beside myself.

In the wee hours of the morning, lying in my warm bed, I suddenly leap up, sure I've heard a voice saying. . .

"Lieutenant, by the tail of my great-aunt Regret, who won the Derby, why the Army ever commissioned. . . ."

I'm going right on searching for Francis.

Because, in my heart, I feel sure the mule is alive.

Absolutely sure.

Filmland Acts To Improve Its Reputation

answered too late, too little or not at all.

Wheels in Motion

IN the past year, Hollywood has become acutely aware of the effect of public opinion. High-echelon confabs have been held in New York, Washington, Chicago and Hollywood, and bigwigs are plotting means to give the film industry more dignity.

One thing Filmland hopes to do is show the constructive side of the industry. It points out that a great many Hollywood people stay happily married for life—although the divorces get more news space.

Hollywood is citing the record of the war, when the city took on—without pay—a large part of entertaining the fighting forces. It mentions the town's unstinting effort for worthy charities.

But Hollywood realizes that all this constructive talk can be overshadowed by one juicy scandal. Studio bosses are pressuring stars who appear on the verge of making unpleasant headlines.

There is an economic pressure against erring stars, too. While some of them prosper, most do not. It is noteworthy that none of the 10 top box-office stars has been in a major scandal.

Hollywood seems destined to lose some of its circus element in an effort to achieve more dignity.

Offering 'Dodsworth'

The Masquers of Roosevelt Center will present Sidney Howard's "Dodsworth" Thursday and Friday nights in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School. The play is adapted from Sinclair Lewis' novel, originally acted by Walter Huston and Nan Sunderland.

'Safari on Wheels'

A color documentary film of an 11,000-mile African trek will be shown as "Safari on Wheels" Wednesday night by the Central Branch of the YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., at 8 o'clock. Also on the program will be "Welsh Magic," from Britain and a March of Time on "Americans All."

Petworth Minstrel Show

"The Petworth Minstrel Show and Revue" will be presented by the senior choir of the Petworth Methodist Church Wednesday and Thursday nights in their fellowship hall, New Hampshire ave. and Grant Circle.

'Peter Pan' Tomorrow

On Monday a revival of Barrie's "Peter Pan" will be presented at the Imperial Theater in New York with Screen Star Jean Arthur in the title role. Boris Karloff is cast as Captain Hook.

Paulette Really Socked Them

'darling' business didn't mean a thing—it was just another friendly expression, like 'bud' or 'Mac.' I wised up fast, but what could I do at that point—apologize? 'Course not—so I walked out, and I was barred from Warner Brothers for three years!

"That was the only place I was ever barred from, though—that's because I'm not temperamental—am I, Jinx?"

Don't Be Late

FROM a bull-ring to Saigon to Warwick Castle, Paulette is "at home," and she has her own rules for traveling: "The first rule is—never be late. If you're late, a whole day or a whole trip can be fouled up. I have never missed a train or a boat or a plane in my life!

"You want a thorough analysis of my theory of travel?" Here, she stands up: "I travel light"—and here she sits down, for emphasis: "And I travel alone!

"And I will not take a trans-Atlantic phone call! Romance gets rusty on long-distance. The only thing I like to hear a man say on a telephone is . . . 'I'll be there in five minutes!'"

Nassau's Outer Isles Sparkle

IN INCREASING numbers, visitors to Nassau are discovering the once-remote Out Islands of the Bahamas.

Scattered over 70,000 square miles of seas, these picturesque islands, accessible once only to yachtsmen or adventurous souls prepared to rough it, have been brought within easy reach of the capital as a result of the post-war development of inter-island air service.

Some of the islands—like Bimini, 50 miles from Miami and famous for its big game fishing, and exclusive Cat Cay, a private club with its own island on the edge of the Gulf Stream—are already well known. Walker Cay, one of the northernmost islands in the Bahamas, is another island which has famous fishing, too, and regular transportation from West Palm Beach.

The most spectacular development taking place in the Out Islands, of course, is William Butlin's $8,000,000 vacation village at Grand Bahama, 65 miles from Palm Beach.

Eleuthera, site of the first republic in the New World, is another island which is developing. At its northern tip, about 60 miles from Nassau, is Harbour Island. Half-way down Eleuthera is Governor's Harbour, which has grown almost as much in the last few years as it did in the 300 years preceding. At the southern end of Eleuthera is a new resort development, Three Bays.

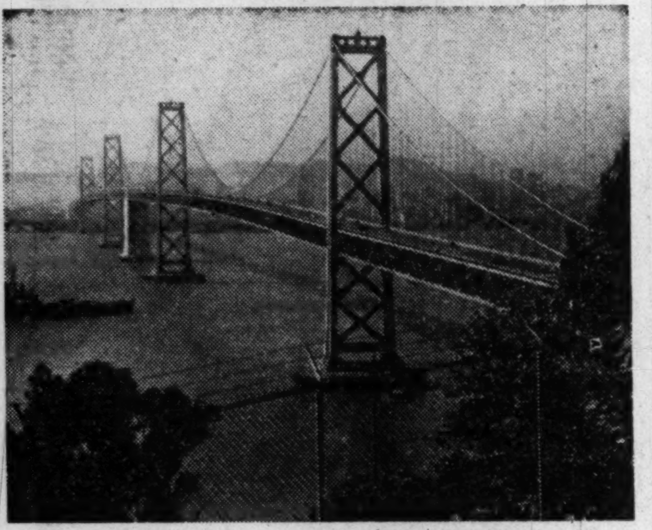
Camp Bang Bang, a fishing camp on Pot Cay, Andros, had so many requests for reservations last winter it has been enlarged.

There is a boat service to most of these islands, and air service by Bahamas Airways, which operates out of Nassau.

Fashion decrees these high-crowned, broad-brimmed hats of native hand-woven straw for beach wear at Nassau. The pretty lass here is established at Paradise Beach

Bay Was 'Unspannable'

San Francisco Bridges Would Astonish 49ers



The San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge

SAN FRANCISCO'S two magnificent bridges are outstanding attractions among the many with which the city is blessed.

There weren't many early residents of the city who believed the bay would never be bridged. But American ingenuity made a dream a reality when, on November 12, 1936, civic dignitaries and others gathered to cut a ribbon and open the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge to traffic.

Six months later the dignitaries cut another ribbon, and the famed Golden Gate Bridge spanning that storied seaway was dedicated.

The San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge — popularly known as the "Bay Bridge"—links San Francisco with Oakland and other cities on the east side of San Francisco Bay, and gives access to the rich San Joaquin Valley and Southern California. The structure cost about 80 million dollars, including interurban facilities and approaches, and was more than three years in the building.

Of cantilever and suspension type construction, the Bay Bridge proper is about 4½ miles long and pierces Yerba Buena Island near the center of the bay. From one end to the other, the structure is 8¼ miles long. It is double-decked, the upper deck being for passenger vehicles, the lower for trucks and buses. No pedestrians are allowed on the bridge.

Passengers using the Santa Fe Railway are carried across the structure by motor coach, and from their windows get a splendid view of the San Francisco skyline both at sunset and at night.

The Golden Gate bridge links San Francisco with the Redwood Empire and other regions to the north. It is the longest single-span suspension bridge in the world, and its cost was 35 million dollars. This structure has only one deck, which is used by all types of vehicles. Pedestrians may also use the Golden Gate Bridge, and countless residents and visitors have walked across to Marin County and back to admire the view.

Film Warns Of Car Deaths

"LAST DATE," a prize-winning movie about "teenicide"—killing oneself with an automobile before the age of 20—will be shown to District high school students beginning Monday as part of traffic safety week sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The film, produced by the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co., was named by the National Committee on Films for Safety as the outstanding movie of its type in 1950.

Cochairmen of the Junior Chamber subcommittee which obtained the film are Bernard M. Levy and Joseph Gichner. Arminger L. Jagoe is chairman of the subcommittees planning the Chamber's annual "parade of wrecks" during the week. Other committeemen are David Allentuck, Richard B. Magurn, George George, Walter Mess, Charles Burton and Sam Bowden.

"Last Date" dramatizes the story of four teenagers whose lives are tragically affected by the wreckless driving of one.

Tommy Dorsey to Play At Charleston Ball

Charleston, S. C., April 22.—Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra will play for the opening ball of the Azalea Festival the night of April 28 at County Hall.

Among the feature instrumentalists and vocalists will be Charlie Teagarden, Ray Bauduc, Shorty Sherock, Clarie Hogan and Kenny Martin.

The ball will be attended by Miss Jean Anders, the reigning "Miss Charleston," her court, and all the visiting candidates for the title of "Queen Azalea XII."

Israel Favors Tourists

Tel Aviv, Israel, (AP).—Some Israeli hotels, restaurants and cafes soon are to start serving "dollar-getting" meals. Tourists won't have to eat frozen fish on the four meatless days weekly. If they spend the equivalent of $11.20 daily in this country they will be entitled to special "non-austerity" meals in restaurants specifically authorized to serve them.

Bird Walk, Garden Tour Slated Today

Members of the District Audubon Society will conduct a bird walk at Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens, to begin at the parking area for the gardens near Douglas st. and Kenilworth ave. ne., at 7 a. m. today.

Garden tours through Dumbarton Oaks Park will begin at the park gate one block down Lovers Lane from R st. between Avon pl. and 31st st. nw., at 11 a. m., 2 and 4 p. m. today.

Holy Year Trip Offered for $777

AIR ROME, INC., has what it believes is the answer to the problem of how to get to Rome during Holy Year in a first class manner at a reasonable price. The price is $777.

Using scheduled airlines and traveling the New York-Rome journey via Bermuda, the Azores and Malta, Air Rome offers 15 days of all-expense, first-class travel, with 11 days spent in and around Rome. Four days of tours within the city—including visits to the four major basilicas — and three tours outside Rome are included. A 24-hour stop in Bermuda also is scheduled.

Flights will originate from New York at the rate of several per week, scheduled to start May 16. Daily flights will begin June 1, Air Rome reports.

Dutch Advance Date of Voyage

The maiden voyage arrival at New York of the new Holland-American liner Diemerdyk has been advanced one week, and the vessel is due on July 10.

Her first eastbound departure from New York will be July 26. She will carry passengers in the Red Star Line service of the company to Antwerp, Belgium, and cargo for both Antwerp and Rotterdam.

South America Cruise Has $760 Minimum

A 38-day summer cruise to the East Coast of South America is now available at a minimum cabin class rates of $760 on board the Good Neighbor liners of Moore-McCormack Lines, sailing fortnightly from New York.

States Offer Pamphlets

MORE than 250 events of interest to visitors to Virginia are listed in the Virginia Calendar now available in pamphlet form. The folder gives dates and places for festivals, sports tournaments, horse shows, boating regattas, theatrical performances and other celebrations.

The calendar is free upon request to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, 111 N. 5th st., Richmond. Also to be had are highway maps, scenic maps and a 74-page guidebook, "Travel Seasons in Virginia."

A new 24-page booklet designed to give a "preview" of a vacation in West Virginia's mountains is also available.

The booklet is available from the West Virginia Industrial and Publicity Commission in Charleston on request.

From Passports to Road Signs

U. N. Smoothing Traveler's Path

By Adelaide Kerr

LAKE SUCCESS (AP).—The United Nations has launched a round-the-world campaign to make travel simpler, smoother and faster for you.

U. N. regards your travel dollar—and the money which people of any other country spend in foreign travel—as valuable assets in building a more prosperous world. Travelers' money brings more business to countries where it is spent and gives them foreign exchange to use in international trade. A thriving international trade contributes to prosperity.

So U. N. embarked on one of the most nerve-wracking jobs of its career, working with its own groups, member governments and national travel organizations to slash red tape stiffened with centuries of use and to improve awkward modern methods that have grown up since the war.

The work already has untied a lot of travel snarls—reducing passport and visa requirements, cutting time-wasting procedure at international airports and speeding up health inspections. Right now a U. N. commission here is studying a mass of travel subjects which can simplify customs problems, immigration and health regulations and road signs. There are other plans in prospect, taking consideration of the traveler's pocketbook, time schedule and weary feet.

Passport Waivers

U. N. RECOMMENDED that its members draw up agreements with other countries waiving passport requirements and abolishing visas where possible. Since the end of the war, at last 63 two-way agreements and 10 passport agreements have been concluded—some before U. N.'s action. Most of these are in Europe or Latin America and, in general, substitute an indentity card for a passport and abolish entrance visas. In addition, there have been some one-way agreements.

The United States has two-way agreements with Canada and Mexico eliminating passports and has abolished entrance visas for short-term travel from Cuba. Belgium, Denmark, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Sweden have abolished entrance visas for United States citizens. Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador and El Salvador admit American citizens with tourist or indentity cards. Some admit other nationals on a similar basis. Haiti has abolished passports for American tourists.

A lot of time-wasting procedure in air travel has been cut down by an agreement which went into effect in March among member nations of the International Civil Aviation Organization, a U. N. agency. It cuts down sharply the number of documents which airlines must prepare on passengers and crew, and this reduction in paper work is expected, in time, to cut down the cost of air travel.

The agreement provides for an embarkation-debarkation card which in many cases eliminates visas for passengers who are merely passing through the country. The agreement asks governments to accept an international certificate of innoculation and vaccination instead of a variety of national forms, and provides for facilities to exchange passengers' currency. ICAO members have the right to make certain exceptions if they notify ICAO.

Health Clearance

WORLD Health Organization experts drafted a new set of international sanitary regulations which try to give the greatest possible amount of security against international transmission of disease with the least possible amount of interference with world traffic.

Travelers in many European countries will find much easier going through customs as a result of a draft international customs convention on touring, prepared under the auspices of the U. N. Economic Commission for Europe and now provisionally in effect pending ratification by commission members. It permits them to bring in temporarily private cars, clothing, cameras, jewelry and certain other personal belongings and articles "of an everyday kind in actual use." The convention is wider in scope than the draft Geneva convention of 1937 which never was applied.

Many European countries have cut delays in railway travel by having passengers and luggage examined on moving trains and by having customs officials of two neighboring countries examine luggage jointly at one frontier station.

Efforts to get a uniform world-wide system of road signs and signals have not yet succeeded, because of the great difference between European and American systems. But efforts continue to get a world-wide system which all travelers can understand.

Open House at Virginia Landmarks

HISTORIC Garden Week is Virginia's declaration of open house, an invitation to people everywhere to join citizens of the Old Dominion in a springtime pilgrimage through a State rich in the tradition of hospitality.

From the Eastern Shore to the Shenandoah Valley, from the Potomac to the border of North Carolina, mellow houses of tradition and gardens bordered in ancient box will be open to visitors through April 29.

Highways and paths will be a riot of redbud, dogwood, rhododendron, fruit blossoms, daffodils and narcissi. The magnificent display of azaleas, 75,000 blossoming at one time, is the major attraction in the Roanoke district.

Gunston Hall in the Alexandria district is just off Route 1 on County Road 600, well worth a bit of sightseeing to visitors, along with Mount Vernon, historic Pohick Church, Wellington and Woodlawn, the latter now a national shrine.

These gardens at Morven, near Charlottesville, some of the loveliest in Virginia, are open to the public today and Monday

One-Day Trip

DOWN Winchester way, Front Royal, the northern gateway to the Skyline Drive, and the Piedmont District combine for an easy one-day motor trip. Magnificent estates in Winchester such as Holly House, Grey Gables and the famous Rose Hill Farm built in 1790, are to be open today and Monday. From Winchester, Leesburg is just a short drive, and on Route 15 Rockland, the estate of Mr. and Mrs Stanley N. Brown, Morven and Belgrove are to be open the same two days.

Six miles south of Leesburg, still on Route 15, is Oatlands, with its towering boxwood and magnificent grove of old oaks, the estate of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis of Washington; Little Oatlands, home of the director of the National Gallery of Art and Mrs. David E. Finley; Oak Hill, built by James Monroe, and Catesby with its fine collection of boxwood, holly and roses.

Beautiful estates are to be open in Warrenton April 25 and 26; Oakwood, standing in a grove of oaks two centuries old and commanding a broad view of the Blue Ridge Mountains and the whole Piedmont Valley; Bellevue, off Route 211, the home of Admiral and Mrs. Neil Phillips of Washington; Prospect Hill, built by Chief Justice Marshall; Balcarres; Whiffletree Manor, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, and Ridgelea.

Those who have never visited the Eastern Shore of Virginia might well plan a two-day motor trip to this picturesque section of the State. From Annapolis, take the Sandy Point ferry to Matapeake, follow signs to Salisbury, Md., then Route 13. Luncheon will be served in the old Debtors Prison on the north side of the courthouse green in Accomac. Visitors will see such famous estates as Eyre Hall, Elkington, Oak Grove, Vaucluse (one of the most beautiful on the Eastern Shore), Crystal Palace, Windingdale, Ayres Lee, built in 1780, and The Haven, typical "big house, little house, colonnade and kitchen" of that section.

100,000 Azaleas

AN interesting trip might be planned for the Richmond and James River plantation districts. Two (or even three) days should be allowed, because many famous houses and estates in Richmond are to be open in addition to places of historic interest. Headquarters of Historic Garden Week are in the Jefferson Hotel.

Famous estates and extensive gardens on the upper and lower James River will be open from April 25 to 28; in Gloucester, April 27-28. The Azalea Gardens just out of Norfolk on Route 13-Y is the only free garden of its size and beauty in the country. In its lakes are reflected approximately 100,000 blooming azaleas. The camellia collection has 10,000 plants in 375 varieties.

Guide books for the entire Garden Week may be obtained free at the AAA and Keystone clubs here, and at the Virginia Travel Bureau, 1731 K st. nw.

Visitors to the various districts are assured of good hotel accommodations if reservations are made in advance, and good food is served in all sections.

On the Cover

THE GARDEN pictured on Page 1 of this section is that of Old Keswick, deep in Virginia. The original house, built in 1715, is now a part of the main building, and the far-famed English elms and boxwood in the garden were planted more than a century ago. The home is now owned by Mrs. G. Carroll Todd. The gardens only will be open all this week in observance of Historic Garden Week in Virginia. To reach Old Keswick, take Route 250 out of Charlottesville to Shadwell Postoffice, then turn left on Route 22.

Old Bone Meal Can't Match A Plant Food

ONE sometimes sees a reference to "enriching the soil with plenty of well rotted manure" or "feed the planting lightly with bone meal once a month."

How many are in a position to follow such recommendations? For well rotted manure and bone meal are difficult for the average city or suburban gardner to find.

Manure is an excellent soil conditioner and a fair source of plant food, though its scarcity and odor make its use next to impossible in town. Bone meal commands such a good price as an animal feed supplement that it has almost disappeared from garden supply stores. The old raw bone meal with its "fragrance" was a source of phosphorus and some nitrogen. What little bone meal that can be found today, however, is the steamed variety and though the fragrance has been cooked away, so has most of the nitrogen supplying power.

The beginning gardener can waste a lot of effort searching for a source of barnyard manure or bone meal. Peat moss or homemade compost will function quite as effectively as a soil conditioner as the manure. If it is plant food he is after, he knows that complete balanced plant foods give him far better results than bone meal ever did in the old days.

U. of Md. to Study Juice Concentrate

The food processing laboratory at the University of Maryland is now installing equipment for preparing concentrated fruit and vegetable juices for freezing. Dr. E. P. Walls, of the University's Horticulture Department, says the equipment is to be used for training students in food processing and for experimentation with tomato juice, apple juice, and some of the citrus juices.

The equipment includes a vacuum pan and pump for reducing juices to the proper concentration for freezing. They are designed to evaporate water from the juices under a high vacuum. This vacuum lowers the boiling temperature of the water and allows the juices to be condensed without acquiring a cooked flavor. The pan is heated by steam. This process is inexpensive, although the initial cost of equipment is high.

Juices processed in this manner and then frozen retain much of their flavor and take up much less volume than the fresh product. Dr. Walls believes that the possibilities for commercial use of this vacuum-condensing process are good. Shipping costs will be lower, he claims, because of the reduced volume. Furthermore, since juices may be kept for long periods of time, this will permit orderly distribution at reasonable prices throughout the year.

Hardy Plants Defy Cold Winds

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

RECENT cold spring weather has made us al the more appreciative of our hardy plants While it has been hard on tender things, the old standbys like forsythia have had a remarkably long season of bloom. The rosy flowering quince, after blooming most of the winter, managed to bring forth a few spring blossoms. Narcissus and other bulbs have more than proven their worth. The wise gardeners who have plantings of them where they can be seen from the windows of the house have had weeks of enjoyment.

The length of the narcissus season of bloom has been amply proved by the fact that The Virginia show in Alexandria and the National Capital show were held two weeks apart and at each there were a wealth of fine blossoms from local gardens. The beautiful arrangement classes which included narcissus and bulbs have given impetus to their use as cut flowers and while the weather has been too cold to enjoy them in the garden they have given much enjoyment in the house.

This year the Virginia Garden Club used the term "daffodil" at its show, while some others used "narcissus." Both terms are correct for all varieties of narcissus. Daffodil is the English term. In America we have used "jonquil" for yellow varieties and "narcissus" for white. The only true "jonquil" is narcissus jonquilla, a small fragrant yellow.

Jonquils are yellow daffodils

To the uninitiated the terms in the narcissus catalogue seem very difficult. In general "trumpet" is used when the centre is as long or longer than the petals of the "perianth." When shorter the word "cup" is used and when very short it is called the "eye." The various classifications are more difficult but the show schedules of both of our major shows carried a complete description of all classes which should be carefully studied in ordering and in planning to exhibit. A full knowledge of these things makes gardening much more interesting.

What to do with narcissus after it blooms is a question often asked. The important thing is not to cut the tops. Allow them to ripen. It is at this time the bulbs store up strength for next year's growth. To give the garden a more tidy appearance the tops can be tied loosely in knots and anchored flat to the ground.

Bulb Time

FALL is generally considered to be bulb planting time, as it is then that bulbs are delivered by the growers. Home-grown narcissus which have to be thinned or transplanted can be moved in the spring when the foliage has ripened. When lifting bulbs, set the large ones in important places and install the small ones, which may not bloom for a year or so, where they will develop and will not be needed for artistic effect. Bulbs can be left in one place four or five years, or until they seem to be producing less bloom.

The primrose is another spring favorite which has already proven to be a valued friend this year. Some of them, in our "June in January" weather began to put out a few blossoms. They have gone steadily through the winter and now seem determined to have their spring as well.

These small lovely flowers are among the most satisfactory garden assets, particularly where there is partial shade. They are not as generally used as they should be. They do not like too dense shade and do not take kindly to hot dry places. Morning sun and afternoon shade is a good location and they should be watered when it is very dry and given a summer mulch. While they like moisture, they do not like soggy spots.

Up From the 'Cowslip'

HYBRIDIZERS have done much with primroses since the old yellow "cowslip" of Grandmother's day. While it is still one of the loveliest things in the yard, its many cousins with their varied forms and coloring can add much to the spring garden. The polyanthus now come in their reds and yellows as of old but may be had in orange, copper white and pinks. The lower growing acaulis are lovely companions for pansies. A beautiful combination is white with lavender pansies or with forget-me-nots.

Primroses are best divided after blooming. They can be divided by hand, separating the different crowns and replanting immediately. Care should be taken that the roots are not allowed to dry. It is best to take them immediately to a shaded spot and shake all dirt off and if the day is warm to sprinkle before resetting. This seems a small thing, but it will result in better plants.

Primroses are well suited to city gardens and many attractive ways of using them will be seen at the coming Georgetown Garden tour, where small city gardens are seen at their best.

Farm Tree Worth $325 Per Year

Trees are worth an average of $325.76 annually to the farms on which they grow according to a survey of 300 Nebraska landowners by University of Nebraska Forester Earl G. Maxwell.

Maxwell breaks this down as follows: fuel saving, $13.53; production of fuel wood, $22.67; posts and poles, $6.44; increased garden production, $13.40; wind protection to buildings and equipment, $29.63; increased crop production, $43.03; and livestock protection, $197.06.

Broadloom Is Broad

BROADLOOM is not a quality of carpet, but a width—generally regarded today as being 9 feet or greater. Prior to the development of broadlooms, 3 feet was the widest width carpeting.

Beet Wage Static

THE Agriculture Department last week set minimum wage requirements for work on the 1950 sugar beet crop at 60 cents an hour for thinning, hoeing and weeding, and 65 cents an hour for pulling, topping and loading. Piecework has been slightly increased.

The basic rates are the same as last year, despite the fact that Congress has voted a higher minimum wage law for other workers, and also in spite of the Government support of high prices for domestic sugar.

Spring Wallflowers

Provincetown geometric document paper (top, left) is used as a dado, with a medallion and stripe motif set on the same background used for the upper walls. Colors are mustard, Van Dyke brown and a deep blue-green. Immediately above, threads of silver highlight a Japanese grass cloth textured paper.

JAPAN, Sweden, China and the Clare's Hospital Representative historical New England sections of our own country contribute some of the newest wallpapers with which homemakers can give their homes a spring tonic.

Textured hemp and grass cloth, some shot through with threads of glitter, and traditionally delicate Japanese block prints of cherry blossoms, pagodas and cypress trees are among a shipment of 50 imported Japanese wallpapers. These papers range in price from $8.50 to $19 for a single roll.

The texture weaves are particularly lovely.

In one lacy hemp paper the warp threads have been pulled by hand after the weaving, so that they are close together in some places, more open in others.

Another interesting textural effect is achieved with metallic threads that are white on one side, silver on the other. Turned in the weaving process, these threads create a horizontal pattern of silver streaks. The block prints, one in red and the other in deep blue, come on a grass cloth ground.

Small-scale prints from Sweden are printed on a durable paper notable for washability and resistance to fading. The Duro line, comprises a group of architectural designs which add pattern to a wall but are small enough to provide a neutral background for paintings and printed drapery fabrics. Soft grays form a background for tiny olive green and yellow flower motifs or for little jigsaw outlines of flame red. These papers are moderately priced. Many are under $3 a single roll.

Document papers are available through decorators.

Boxwood Pruning Time

In the South boxwood can now be pruned.

How to Pot Pips

Purchase lily-of-the-valley pips from your seedsman or florist; pot them in soil, sand or peat moss. Keep them well watered, and set them in the warmest place in the home—even on top of a radiator. They will bloom in a few weeks.

Time to Plant Azaleas Anew

Azaleas bloomed early this year and it will not be long until it is time to set out new plants. The favorite time for planting is just after the bloom is over, although many growers ship them in flower and they are sold on the sidewalks of many towns.

In preparing beds for azaleas the soil should be dug out to a depth of 18 inches. Fill in with a good acid flatwoods soil, mixed with oak leaf mold. If oak leaves are not available, peat moss may be substituted. The soil should be at least 50% organic matter by volume.

After the plants are set, cover the soil with a good mulch of pine straw and feed the plant with ½ to 1 pound (depending on size) of a special plant food such as Vigoro for Azaleas and Camellias, then water in thoroughly.

Protect the Rhubarb

Rhubarb will produce longer stalks if a nail keg with the bottom knocked out of it is placed over the crowns which are beginning to sprout this month. Rhubarb responds beautifully to feeding with complete plant food. Scatter a handful around the crown of each clump.

It's Time to Set Out the Cabbage Group

By James H. Beattie

A GARDEN without cabbage, sprouting broccoli, kale, turnips and occasionally couliflower is an oddity. This is as it should be and mid-April is an excellent time to plant these valuable, hardy vegetables.

Although cabbage is still the most widely grown of this group, some home gardeners are giving first place to sprouting broccoli and there are abundant reasons for their choice.

Other members of this large group, including brussels sprouts, Chinese cabbage, cauliflower, collards, kale, kohlrabi, the mustards and turnips should not be overlooked.

U. S. Department of Agriculture Photo.
Sprouting broccoli—should be planted just about now, although it also may be grown as a fall crop

Similar Needs

SOIL AND fertility requirements for all members of this group are practically identical. They all require a very fertile, well-drained but moist soil. Being gross feeders, they respond to the liberal use of compost and commercial fertilizer.

Even on fertile soil that has been well supplied with organic matter it usually pays to use from 20 to 30 pounds of commercial fertilizer to each 1000 square feet of garden space. About half of the fertilizer may be mixed into the top few inches of the soil while it is being prepared and the other portion applied two to three weeks later to the surface of the soil and cultivated in.

Heavy fertilization during the heading period of cabbage is liable to cause the heads to burst. Some overcome this by loosening the plants in the soil, breaking a portion of the roots, thereby slowing the growth.

Pests of the cabbage relatives are numerous but not too difficult to control. Disease resistant varieties should be used whenever such are available. Aphids may be controlled by spraying or dusting with nicotine preparations, cabbage worms and flea beetles by rotenone dusts or sprays. This treatment is harmless and effective. Don't use DDT except possibly during the early stages of growth of the plants. Methoxychlor is similar in its effect on insects but far less poisonous to warm-blooded animals. Cutworms may be controlled by placing a cylinder of heavy paper around the stem of each plant.

Broccoli Hardy

SPROUTING broccoli is a green that may be grown in exactly the same manner as cabbage. It is hardy to cold and adapted to early spring planting. The plant is also quite resistant to heat. If planted now and given the ordinary cultural care required by garden crops, the plants will soon form large, loose flowerheads and later on smaller ones borne on the fleshy, branching side shoots.

Sprouting broccoli may be grown as a fall crop. For this late summer culture many gardeners sow the seed directly in the garden row following an early vegetable such as peas or potatoes.

For planting at this season of the year, strong healthy plants are needed. Because of their vigorous growth, sprouting broccoli plants should have plenty of room in the garden—at least 18 inches apart in the rows. A dozen plants will usually supply the needs of a family. Early Italian Green Sprouting is a good variety for spring culture and Late Green Sprouting is suitable for the autumn.

Cool Days Best

CAULIFLOWER is extremely sensitive to weather and one of the most difficult of the vegetable crops to grow succesfully. Relatively cool, moist weather during the growing season is very favorable for this vegetable. Thus far this spring the freezing weather has made it inadvisable to set cauliflower in the garden. Now that the severe freezes are probably past, prompt planting is necessary, otherwise hot weather is liable to interfere with the crop.

Cabbage must be included in any discussion of this group of garden plants. It may be planted and successfully grown at any time from early spring until autumn; indeed, many gardeners in this locality set the plants in a protected place during autumn and they usually live over winter and yield a crop during early spring. While there are two main seasons for planting cabbage, early spring and midsummer for summer use and the storage crop, respectively, the plant is so elastic in its requirements that planting may be done at almost any time.

Yellows resistant varieties should be selected for most gardens. For early planting, Jersey Queen and Marion Market are quite satisfactory. Wisconsin All-Season, Wisconsin Ballhead and Wisconsin Hollander are late season yellows resistant varieties.

Detailed information on all the members of this group of vegetables is contained in Miscellaneous Publications 538 and 605 and Farmers' Bulletin 1673, all obtainable from Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

Sprouting Broccoli Increases in Use

Sprouting broccoli is a crop which is increasing in use for freezing and fresh market production in Maryland. A late crop may be grown in all parts of the Free State, states Edward K. Bender, extension specialist in vegetable crops at the University of Maryland. The recommended varieties for late production are Calabrese, Freezer's, and DeCicco.

Seed for the fall crop of broccoli should be planed in western Maryland during May and in other parts of the State during June. It should be planted in a specially-prepared outdoor seedbed where fertilizer has been added. The seed should be thinly sown in rows 12 to 18 inches apart to allow room for cultivation. Broccoli may be produced on a wide range of soils but best yields are obtained from well-drained soils.

The sprouting broccoli produces one large sprout followed by smaller heads and will furnish a continuous harvest for several weeks.

Wilton Is a Town

WILTON carpets are named after the town of that name in England. A carpet factory was established there in 1740, employing expert weavers imported from France. The Wilton weave allows closeness of weave and delicacy of design. Wilton is much used by manufacturers today in rugs featuring the popular embossed and dimensional effects.

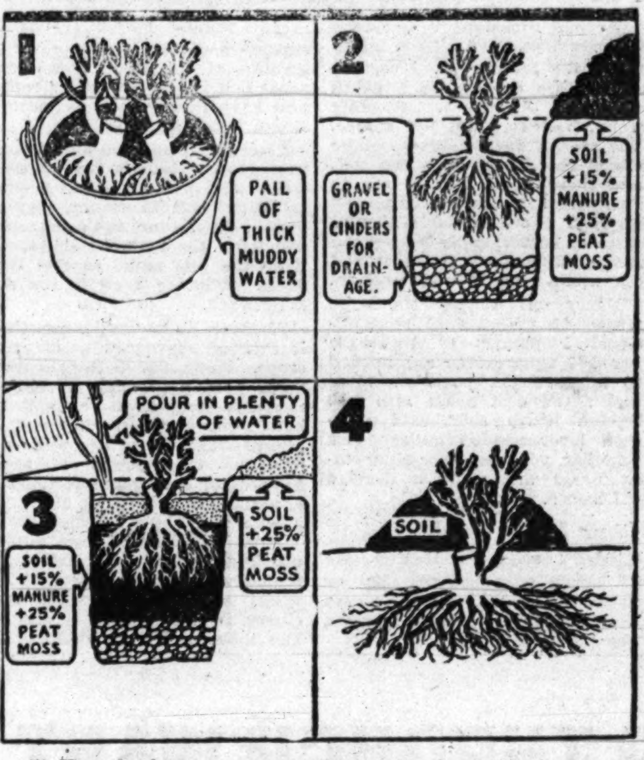
How to Plant a Rose



(1) Unpack plants as soon as they arrive from the nursery and soak the roots in a bucket of thick muddy water for 6 to 8 hours before planting. If planting has to be delayed for a few days, cover roots with soil and keep covered, tops and all, with wet burlap or straw.

(2) Most important points in planting roses are preparation of soil to a depth of 24 inches, dig hole large enough for roots to be spread out in all directions. Roses will grow in soil that grows good vegetables but ideal mixture for finest bloom and growth is soil plus 15 percent rotted manure and 25 percent peat moss, and a cupful of special rose food mixed through the soil.

(3) Plant rose so that graft will be at ground level of the bed. Pack soil firmly about roots and when hole is half filled, pour in a bucket of water, then fill with soil. Top few inches should be soil plus 25 percent peat moss. Space hybrid tea roses 16 to 18 inches apart and floribundas 18 to 24 inches.

(4) After planting, hill up 8 to 10 inches of soil over the tops as winter protection. When the ground freezes, cover bed with leaves, straw or other mulching material.

Low Shelves Cut Fatigue

ANY homemaker who is continually tired after a day of working about the house may have more energy than she realizes. Somewhere along the line she is misusing it. The kitchen or the worker, or both, may be at fault.

One can be tired even when all the labor-saving devices in the world are used. Particularly if the kitchen is arranged poorly. Esther Crew Bratton, home management expert at Cornell University, has just added to the mounting evidence on this subject. She recently completed a study of the energy used by nine young homemakers of medium height and weight while doing kitchen tasks.

High or badly arranged shelves proved to be energy wasters. Her studies showed that it takes twice as much energy to reach a shelf 56 inches from the floor as it does to reach one 46 inches high. Reaching a 72-inch height calls for four times the energy needed to reach 46 inches high.

Mrs. Bratton favors shelves in the 46-inch high bracket for storing objects one uses every day. Having everyday dishes, for example, no higher than 46 inches from the floor saves all kinds of energy as well as wear and tear on dispositions.

No woman should be the victim of a poorly arranged kitchen, believes Mrs Bratton. She hopes that her studies will encourage architects and designers of cabinets, ranges, refrigerators and other parts of kitchens to consider the energy of women who use them.

Good arrangements of shelves, work surfaces and equipment can conserve the energy of kitchen workers.

Don't Blame Soil, You Can Make It Suitable

By Alfred Putz

THERE is nothing quite so convenient as the weather and the soil to blame failures on. So far, man's efforts to control the weather have been much in vain, except he can water if lack of rain is the trouble. Regarding the soil, however, the situation is fairly well under the gardener's control. There are two choices he can make: select plants that will grow in the soil he has or change the soil to suit the plants he wants to grow.

There are many attractive flowers that will give a good account of themselves in a poor soil. Bartonia, clarkia, centaurea, cockscomb, eschscholtzia, godetia, kochia, dwarf French marigolds, nasturtium, portulaca, rudbeckia, snapdragon, snow-on-the-mountain, sweet alyssum and verbena do not require a rich diet.

For perennials select alyssum saxatile, aquilegia canadensis, arabis, artemisia, hardy asters, boltonia, cerastium hibiscus (Mallow Marvels), iberis, bearded iris, lychnis, playtycodon, phlox subulata, sedum, sempervivum and veronica. All these and many more grow well in lean soil, and most of them demand it. By using these freely the gardener can reserve the plant food and organic matter for the plants which really need them instead of spreading the materials thinly over the entire garden.

Start Trees Right

BECAUSE trees and shrubs are the backbone of every garden, start them right by adding to each planting hole from 4 to 6 quarts of well-rotted manure, peat moss, sedge peat or commercial humus and 2 to 4 ounces of a complete commercial plant food. gardeners supplement this with one or two cupfuls of bonemeal, depending on the size of the hole.

With these permanent plants taken care of you may turn to zinnias, African marigolds, China asters and others which require a relatively good soil. Group these together in one bed or border not larger than the garden budget permits putting into tiptop shape.

Select a sunny, well-drained spot and, if at all possible, make a test to determine the soil reaction before doing anything else. Most garden plants grow best in slightly acid soil, about pH 6.5. If the reaction is below pH 6 add lime in accordance with the directions supplied with the inexpensive test kits available for this purpose.

If you make a soil test for fertilizer requirements, or have one made, so much the better; but otherwise you are pretty safe in adopting the recommendations which follow.

Must Be Mixed

IF THE soil is of average consistency add 1 pound of superphosphate and 4 pounds of a complete 4-12-4 or 5-10-5 commercial plant food per 100 square feet to take care of the food supply. In addition, the soil likely needs organic matter. For this you may choose well-rotted manure, peat moss, sedge peat or commercial humus. To secure about 20 percent organic matter after spading 8 inches deep requires about 100 pounds of rotted manure, or one bale of peat moss, or 1 bushel of sedge peat, or 300 pounds of commercial humus per 100 square feet. If peat moss or sedge peat is selected, also add 1 pound of pulverized limestone to offset its acid reaction.

Dig the fertilizer and organic matter into the soil to a depth of about 8 inches. Spading alone, however, will not suffice. The special ingredients must be mixed thoroughly with the soil, and there is no better way to accomplish this than by a second spading. If the available manure is rather coarse, apply it after the first spading because the second one would bring it to the surface.

Heavy soils require the same treatment except that an additional 5 pounds of limestone per 100 square feet are needed to improve the porosity. Sand and sifted coal ashes also will lighten heavy soils, and a 3-inch layer spaded under twice together with all the other ingredients will make a decided difference.

Lime Binds Sand

SANDY soils are treated like heavy ones but no sand or ashes are added. In their case the lime helps to bind together the sand particles.

With organic matter the most expensive of the soil improvers, because of the large quantities needed, it is wise to start a compost heap just as soon as garden refuse becomes available.

Place the heap in an out-of-the-way corner hidden by shrubs which also will shade it. A low retaining wall of stones, cinder blocks, bricks or upturned sod will keep the material in place. Keep the pile moist so that the decay-producing bacteria can do their work.

Another dollar-saving practice is that of sowing green-manure crops. None fits better in the home garden schedule than annual rye-grass sown in September, right between the annual plants—vegetables as well as flowers. One pound of seed suffices for 500 square feet. Just hoe in lightly and forget all about it until it is about 8 inches high.

If it is desired to start a new planting bed for the following year, sow Canada field peas, buckwheat or spring rye with red clover in the area this spring. Dig these under about July 15. Then sow soybeans and dig these under in early September. Follow with annual ryegrass and spade it under in early winter or in the spring.

SLIGHTLY DEAFENED?

THOUSANDS NOW HELPED BY SMALL HEARING AID

People who hear ordinary conversation, but who have difficulty hearing radio and TV, or hearing in church, at meetings, in the movies and other public places do not want to be burdened with cumbersome hearing aids. Thousands of such people are now being helped by a tiny, compact aid designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories and manufactured by Western Electric.

This all-in-one instrument is the smallest ever made by Western Electric, yet amazingly efficient. It can be worn all the time or only when needed. Its small size makes it easy to slip into a handbag or pocket when not in use. It may also be equipped with the new invisible ear mold for additional concealment.

Those interested in getting more details should write for a free booklet mailed in plain envelope.

Garden Club Activities

NARCISSUS enthusiasts in the area are currently being polled about their interest in organizing a club devoted solely to this flower. Purpose of the club, tentatively called the Narcissus Council, will be "to promote interest in and raise critical standards with respect to the narcissus, provide opportunities for enthusiasts to meet and exchange information on their special narcissus interests, and plan an annual narcissus show in Washington." The council pains to work with garden clubs in the area to achieve these purposes.

Mrs. George D. Watrous, jr., 5031 Reno rd, nw., is secretary of the preliminary organizing committee, and is receiving names and suggestions of prospective members.

THE GARDEN SECTION of the Woman's Community Club of Kensington will meet on Monday, April 24, at the home of Mrs. George Menks, 7 E. Washington st., Kensington, Md., at 12:30 p. m. Continued improvements in Ernest Park and other community plots will be discussed.

THE ANNUAL PLANT and bake sale of the Kenwood Garden Club will be held on Tuesday, April 25 from 2 until 5 p. m., at the Kenwood Country Club, perennials, annuals, small shrubs and some woods plants will be on sale, with the proceeds going to charity projects in Montgomery County. In case of rain, the sale will be held on Wednesday, April 26, at the same time.

"HOW TO CARE for Spring Bulbs," will be the subject of a talk given by Mrs. George Fuman today, at 1:15 p. m., on station WBCC. This broadcast is one in a series being given by the committee for the 1950 Bethesda-Chevy Chase Harvest show, to be held September 17. The show is being underwritten by the Civitan Club of Bethesda, which also underwrote the 1946 Harvest Show. Garden clubs in the area which have agreed to sponsor the show include the Bethesda Community Garden Club, the Brookmont Garden Club, the Chevy Chase Garden Club of Maryland, the Community Garden Club of Rockville, the Garden Club of the Glen, Potomac, the Kenwood Garden Club, the Potomac Rose Society, the Woman's Club of Bethesda, the garden section of the Woman's Clubs of Woodside, Kensington, Chevy Chase.

A SPRING TOUR of gardens is planned for April 26 by members of the Bethesda Community Garden Club. The tour, which will cover six of the members' gardens, will be from 1 to 4 p. m. A silver tea will be served at the home of Mrs. Fred Coe, 7301 Overhill rd., from 3:30 to 5 p. m.

THE ANNUAL PLANT SALE of the Takoma Horticultural Club will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 20 and 21, from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Joseph J. Sazama, 9th and Tuckerman sts. nw., one block from Georgia ave.

THE APRIL MEETING of the Takoma Horticultural Club will be held Monday, April 24, at 8 p. m. in the Takoma Branch Public Library, 5th and Cedar sts. nw. Charles A. Logan of the Beltsville Research Center will discuss "Beltsville—Its History, Scope and Works."

Gladiolus Society To Meet Friday

The recently organized National Gladiolus Society will hold its regular monthly meeting at 8 p. m., April 28, in Room 43 of the National Museum, Constitution ave. and 10th st. nw.

A short business meeting will be followed by a bulb auction and the awarding of door prizes. The feature of the evening will be an illustrated talk, "Successful Growing of Gladiolus for Exhibition."

Prospective members of the new society are welcome.

Gift of Evergreens to D. C. To Be Formally Accepted

MORE than 100 evergreen trees, a gift to the Capital from the Garden Club of America, will be dedicated during a ceremony April 27 at the National Arboretum in Northeast Washington.

The trees, worth more than $5000, will be formally presented by Mrs. Herman G. Place of New York City and Millbrook, N. Y., president of the club. Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan will accept the gift, according to present plans. Also participating in the ceremony will be B. Y. Morrison, superintendent of the Arboretum.

The club raised funds last year for the purchase of the trees and presented a check for the amount to President Truman. Since then the trees have been obtained from nurseries in this country and set out in three ravines sloping down to the Anacostia River.

One ravine has been planted in Himalayan pines, a second in Cryptomeria, a first cousin of the Sequoia, with an underplanting of Camellias, and the third in Deodar, Lebanon and Mount Atlas cedars.

Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, chairman of the National Capital Committee of the club, who has helped plan the ceremony, said she expected 170 club members, including a delegation from the New York area, to attend the presentation.

In addition to Mrs. Place, the New York delegation will include Mrs. Samuel Sloane, Mrs. Katherine Fox, and Mrs. Harry T. Peters—all former presidents of the club.

The gift will be in the nature of a birthday present to Washington, since it is timed to coincide with the Capital's Sesquicentennial.

The Arboretum, operated by the Agriculture Department, occupies 410 acres. The act authorizing its establishment was passed by Congress in 1927 and the first funds for the purchase of land were appropriated the next year. A feature of the Arboretum are its 65,000 azalea plants, which will be in full bloom the first week in May, according to Mr. Morrison.

When and How to Sow Vegetables

SWEET CORN always is planted in not less than three rows of a variety, to insure well filled ears.

Hardy vegetables like beets, carrots, lettuce, spinach, radishes and parsley can safely be sown now. Sweet corn and beans must wait until the nights have become frost-free. Tomatoes may be sown about the first of May. Planting them out too early does not do them any good and may harm them.

It pays to treat all seeds with a seed protectant, especially those sown early. The cost is trifling.

It is a good idea to use a bacterial inoculant with the beans (or peas, if you grow them) to make sure the bacteria necessary to vigorous growth are present.

Glass Globes

Flowers keep fresh in a glass globe of water that magnifies their size and intensifies the colors. The seven-inch marine globe has a plastic screw-on cap.

Almost all soils are so exhausted that good crops are impossible without fertilizer. Well rotted manure can be dug under in the spring but fresh or partly rotted manure always should be spread under in the fall.

The radishes are sown very thinly in the rows of beets and carrots. Coming up within a week after sowing, they show where the rows are located and that gives the gardener a chance to cultivate close to the row so much sooner. They will be ready for use long before they interfere with the beet or carrot seedlings.

Spinach is a good crop to sow between the rows of beets and carrots. It comes up quickly and is out of the way before the root crops need the space. Another full crop may be taken from the area where the tomatoes are to be planted later on. Even if not large enough for use when the tomatoes are set out, the two will get along well until the tomatoes have made a good headway.

There also should be a little parsley. Four feet of row is enough to yield all the sprigs needed in the kitchen and for garnishing.

The Washington Philatelist

Nation's Collectors Welcome Stamp Program by NBC

By William M. Stuart

A BROADCAST which has been on the national hookup for the past six months, under the sponsorship of the National Federation of Stamp Clubs, has made wonderful progress. It sets at rest the theory that stamp collecting is just child's play and a hobby of no value. In the short time the program has been on the air 125,000 fan letters have been received, thus establishing a record for publicity hard to equal. The National Broadcasting Stamp Club has undoubtedly taken its place among the most successful programs on the radio. The program is heard in Washington at 11:15 a.m., Saturdays, over WRC.

STUART

The National Federation of Stamp Clubs has a great responsibility to all philatelists and it is its desire to have speakers with highest motives, as well as outstanding programs. With such successful strides in its programs there can be no backward step for the promoters of these broadcasts who are doing a wonderful job in increasing stamp collecting. With thousands of interested listeners to these broadcasts, it is evident the federation's program has undoubtedly been established on a firm foundation.

THE 3-cent commemorative stamp honoring the Volunteer Fireman, first day on October 4, 1948, at Dover, Del., was removed from the list at the Philatelic Agency on April 14. The printing order called for 50 million stamps.

Israel will issue two stamps commemorating Independence Day, 5710-1950. The set consists of: 20-pruta, red brown, designed by Prof. M. Kara, dedicated to the struggle for free immigration of persecuted Jews prior to the establishment of the State, and a 40-pruta dark green, designed by Messrs. Wind-Struski symbolizing the free ingathering of the exiles into the independent State.

THE Postoffice Department has fixed the dates and places of first-day sales of the commemorative stamps for the remainder of the year as follows: 3-cent, Freedom, Washington, D. C., April 20; 3-cent railroad engineers, "Casey Jones," Jackson, Tenn., April 29; 3-cent Gateway to the West, Kansas City, Mo., June 3; 3-cent executive branch of Government, Sesquicentennial, Washington, D. C., June 12; 3-cent Boy Scouts, Valley Forge, Pa., June 30; 3-cent Indiana Territory, Vincennes, Ind., July 4; 3-cent judicial branch of Government, Washington, D. C., August 2; 3-cent California Statehood, Sacramento, Calif., September 9, and 3-cent legislative branch of Government, Washington, D. C., November 22.

AT THE Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., on Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple an auction sale was held. Lieut. J. C. Burgio officiated as auctioneer. At the meeting on Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., Ernest A. Kehr, stamp editor of the New York Herald Tribune, will speak on "The Stamps of Egypt" and display portions of his collection.

The Silver Spring Philatelic Society will meet on Thursday evening in the hearing room of the County Building, Colesville rd. near Georgia ave. Dr. G. C. Frazier will exhibit and talk on his Confederate stamps.

The Capital Precancel Club will meet tomorrow evening at Weeks Stamp Shop, 1229 New York ave.

JOHN FOX: he did the dishes . . .

The Turning Point...

IT WAS A SULTRY AFTERNOON in Hingham, Mass. All that week John Fox had trudged from one house to the next, begging housewives to try samples of frozen concentrated orange juice.

It was disheartening work. The war had been over only a few months. Housewives were tired of substitutes. Hadn't their husbands and sons been grumbling about the Army's powdered eggs and dehydrated potatoes?

"And now 'frozen concentrated orange juice!' No thanks. I'll squeeze my own." The answer was always the same.

Wearily, Fox rapped on the kitchen door of another home.

An angry housewife peered out:

"My maid is sick. I'm waiting for the grocer. I have 14 women for tea. And you! There should be a law . . ."

The door slammed.

Perhaps on any other day John Fox would have walked away. But not today. He opened the door and walked in. He could hear the hostess greeting a guest.

He Takes Drastic Action

Putting on an apron, he tackled a pile of half-finished tea sandwiches. Suddenly, the housewife reappeared. Her look of surprise froze into a glare of anger. There was a chilly pause, and then they both laughed.

Fox made orange juice. It was the break he had been waiting for.

The guests liked the juice. Several women gave him orders. One, a volunteer worker, introduced the frozen juice at a nearby hospital.

Soon the boom was on. And it's still on. You see, the reception these Hingham women gave Fox's product marked the birth of an industry that will sell nearly half a billion cans of frozen orange juice this year! And salesman John Fox? Today he is president of one of this industry's leading companies.

Men on the moon

Film previews day we'll land there

MOST FASCINATING picture of the year may prove to be one made by Eagle-Lion called "Destination Moon."

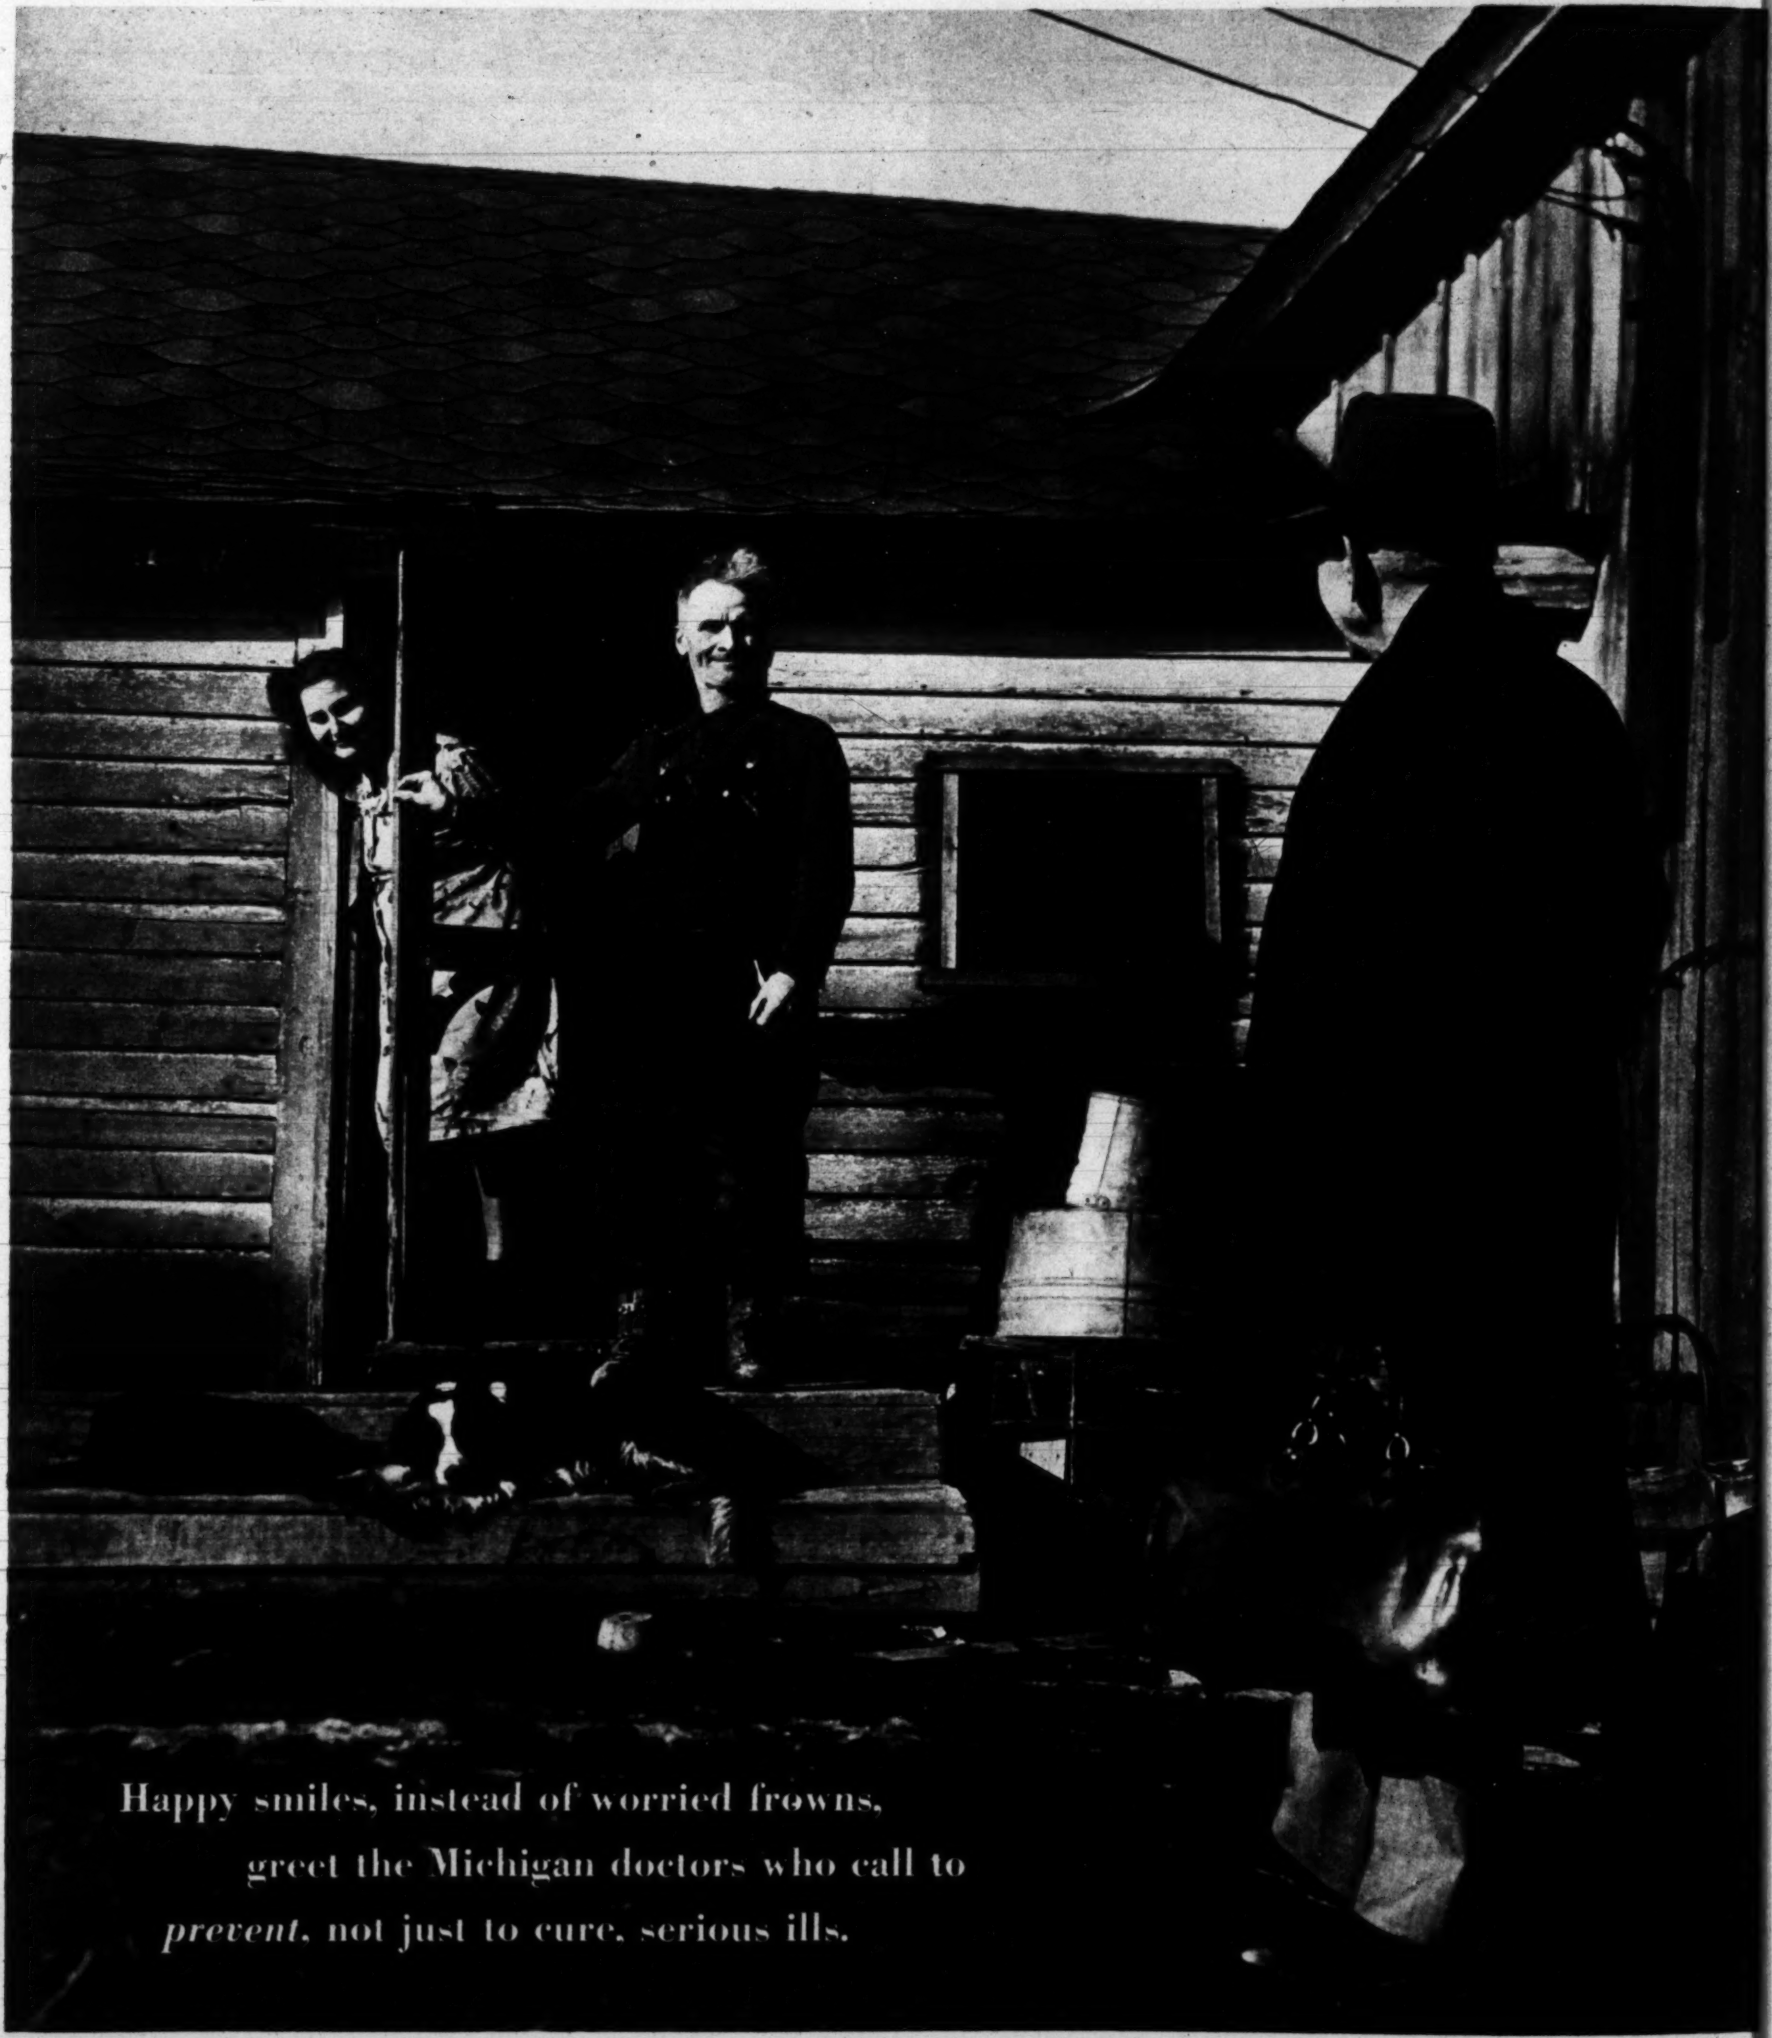
The story concerns four Americans – an atomic scientist, an industrialist, a general and a technician – who make the trip to the moon and back in a 150-foot rocket ship. Movie-goers who travel with them in fancy will probably wonder: What would a walk on the moon really be like?

Any schoolboy knows that the moon's "day" is two weeks long, that there's no air or water, that the temperature ranges 450 degrees.

What is less well known is that a walk on the moon would take you through a desolation of gray rock, rather like coal ash. There would be little dust, and the uneroded rocks would be sharp-edged, so that you'd have to be careful not to tear your space suit. Scientists aren't sure whether you'd find anything approaching life: some say you might find a lichen–or moss-like growth in certain craters.

You'll find much of this reflected in "Destination Moon," for its sets were done by two experts: Chesley Bonestell, artist and student of astronomy; and Robert A. Heinlein, science writer and physicist.

RESCUER goes after scientist who slipped off rocket, floats in space.



Happy smiles, instead of worried frowns, greet the Michigan doctors who call to prevent, not just to cure, serious ills.

FROM MICHIGAN:

An answer to Socialized Medicine?

MICHIGAN IDEA: through schools, get everybody to work for better health.

BY ROBERT GOLDMAN AND SAM PETOK

DETROIT.

SOMETHING IS HAPPENING here in Michigan that may change the whole face of American medicine.

Not its theories, nor its treatments, nor its high professional ethics. Rather the human side of doctoring—the fine, trusting relationship between doctor and patient that means so much to both—but which sometimes simply doesn't exist.

Michigan's doctors have a grassroots medicine program that is really a new idea about the doctor's responsibility to the community. While other people have been debating who should take the initiative in medical care, doctors or government, Michigan's doctors have gone ahead and taken it! And with remarkable results.

The good health of the people, they feel, is the doctor's responsibility – not the government's. People, they feel, turn to the government only when they (1) can't get a doctor or a hospital bed quickly when they need one, (2) find they urgently need medical care that costs more than they can afford. Americans, they think, like to choose and pay their own doctors.

The Public Can Complain

And so the Michigan docs, members of the Michigan State Medical Society (MSMS), are going ahead with good old American aggressiveness to make Michigan the healthiest state in the union. They are trying to make all Michigan people interested in health. They have set up complaint centers. They even use slogans: "Your future is healthier in Michigan!"

They have aggressive cancer, rheumatic fever and rural health programs.

They are trying to get more people into the medical profession—now sadly short of nurses and doctors.

They are boosting Michigan's health.

And their ideas are taking hold in other states.

Other States Now Do It, Too

Colorado doctors were among the first to adopt Michigan's "complaint center" idea. Committees of doctors will hear complaints of people who think they have not had proper care or have been given a "raw deal." From Colorado the idea spread to Indiana, and other states now are planning similar groups.

Michigan claims to have started the "rural health conference" idea—assignment of medical college graduates to small town hospitals for training and resident work. Now Connecticut and Virginia have similar programs.

MSMS members have turned to the newspapers, radio, movies and schools to discuss with the public almost every conceivable health problem. Even such subjects as how to care for a charley horse, and why the fingernails should be kept clean, are taken up.

Four hundred movie houses have shown MSMS films whose message is: your health is up to you; don't procrastinate.

The MSMS compiles lists of towns that need doctors—and doctors that need towns.

Aggressive doctors have set up a program which in one Michigan county has turned every doctor's office into a cancer detection center. The 16 doctors in the county offered low-cost cancer examinations. Then with the help of the MSMS they saw to it that every single resident of the county knew of the new service. Result: 1,600 people turned out for checkups.

Why It's Called the 'Hillsdale Plan'

This is known as the "Hillsdale Plan" because, when it was started in 1948 rural Hillsdale County in southern Michigan was chosen for the experiment.

Proof of its success lies in the fact that in Hillsdale County today nearly four times as many people get early warning that they have cancer as in the rest of the country! And with those warnings many more lives can be saved.

The doctors, working with the Michigan Society for Crippled Children and Adults, have set up thirty stations for detecting and helping rheumatic fever cases. There, because diagnosis is difficult, a board of three or four experts examine the youngster. There is a charge only for laboratory tests, not for physicians. If even these are too expensive, state and private organizations help out.

Lastly, the doctors are working energetically to train themselves in up-to-date methods. And Michigan's Health Council has set up special committees to work on sanitation and other specialized problems. Now being organized are 18 "health information centers" where you can go even to find out how to get an artificial leg.

Michigan's program is going to be worth watching—for what it may mean to America!

What Michigan people think of the 'Hillsdale Plan':

MANAGER Ferris P. Kneen of Hillsdale Tool & Mfg. Co.: "The regular checkups are excellent. Keep workers from worrying about cancer."

DR. H. F. Mattson, co-originator of plan, agrees with Mrs. Ben Freed: "Patients are co-operating to prolong the useful span of their lives."

HOUSEWIFE Mrs. L. G. Crandall: "By such regular checkups doctors are helping us detect signs of ailments in time for early treatment."

FARMER Harold J. Reilly: "My neighbors and I have regular examinations every six months. I consider the plan a real safeguard."

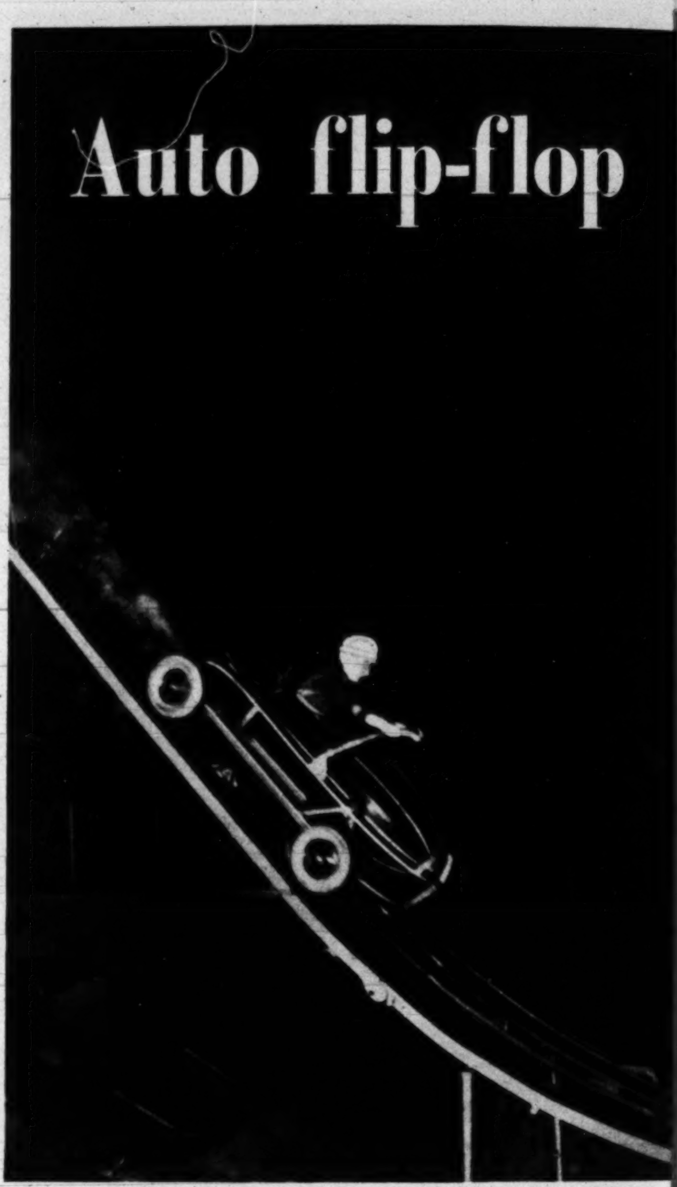
Auto flip-flop



1 At 40 m.p.h., Inge Frankony, strapped into seat of special auto, speeds down track before beginning her somersault.

An 18-year-old girl flips car over in mid-air

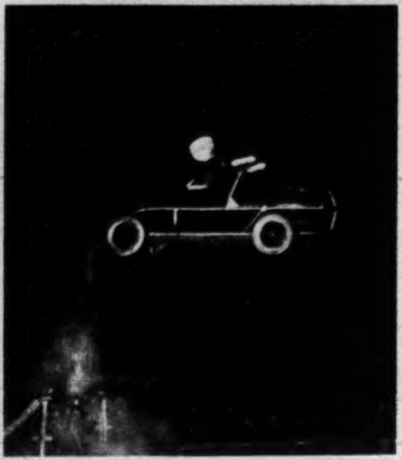
Several men have been killed in the auto somersault being performed in these pictures by an 18-year-old girl.

The somersault is a nightly feature at a Paris circus. Driver of the tiny car is Miss Inge Frankony, who is paid $112 a performance. She was taught the stunt by her father, a fellow performer who has seen it kill three men. (He makes $168 a performance for being shot out of a cannon.)

18-year-old Inge Frankony.

Each night, while the band blares and spectators fidget uneasily, Inge fastens her crash helmet, climbs into her precision-built car. She speeds 40 feet down a set of rails at the end of which auto and driver are flipped into the air. Three seconds and 55 feet later—after describing a complete forward somersault – they land upright, and unharmed, in a waiting net.

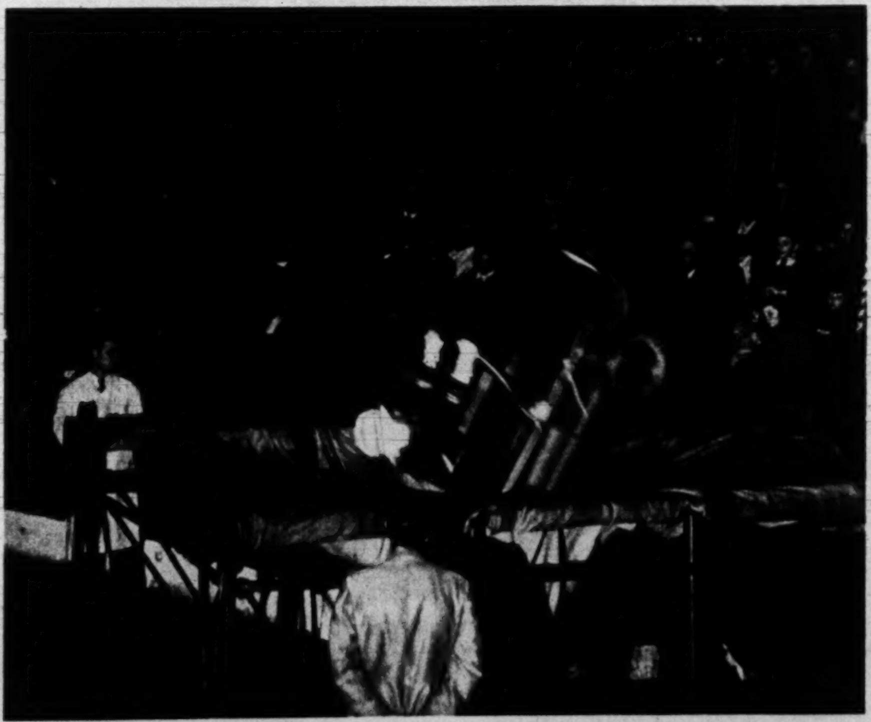
2 Takeoff is helped by a booster which flips the rear wheels up.



3 Sagging arms have caused her injury, so Inge keeps them stiff.

4 It takes a strong safety belt to hold Inge in as car goes over.

5 Up and over she goes. Inge sits perfectly still during the ride.



6 Inge and her car land safely in net. Balance is so important that when Inge gained six pounds, distance from rails to net had to be changed.

GAY SCOTT'S new green taffeta is "absolutely divine." Her mother, who sews all her clothes, designed this frock.

Teen-Agers are TERRIFIC!

Gay Scott leads a happy life

WHAT'S HAPPENING to our teen-agers? From all parts of the country come conflicting stories, some tragic, some crazy, some wonderful.

In California, a teen-age girl goes wild and shoots her twin; in Texas, high school boys shave their heads in Apache style and wear pastel felt hats; in Florida, a teen lad saves three adults from drowning.

GAY sets off to school with brother Tommy, and walks 19 blocks.

But to judge today's 15,372,000 teen-agers by headlines is about as sensible as telling time by the spinning spokes of a wagon wheel. Despite the headshaking of elders, despite the tremendous freedom afforded them by the modern pattern of living, teen-agers reveal a heartening appreciation of the complex problems unfolding before them.

Most universal change in teeners is the fact that they know where they're going. They have definite ideas about morals, God and politics. Their weird fads and fancies, their everchanging jargon, their loud love of extremes—fast dancing, slow dancing, and their gargantuan appetites, disguise the fact that the average high school student is amazingly poised, alert and ambitious.

There are no "typical teen-agers" any more than there are "typical thirty-year olds." Yet the girl in these photographs, Gay Scott of Northwood, Pa., displays a broad understanding that belies her 15 years, and in this respect, she is typical of many of her fellow teens! Dusky-haired, sweet-faced, with a radiant smile, she is a favorite with her classmates at Harding Junior High School. She is a dependable worker for her community and her church and has been singled out for her beauty. (A Philadelphia photographer has used her as a model.) She has two sisters, a small brother.

Gay knows just what her future will be. She has an idea she would like to be an opera singer (she has never seen an opera but listens constantly to the broadcasts and records). And when she finishes college she hopes to marry a "tall, blond" husband and raise a big, happy family as her parents did!

GAY'S love for music is a family trait; every night Scotts gather around piano for harmonizing.

Shepherd's Pie

Mother, this is a downright thrifty dish. And so delicious your family will make it disappear like magic!

That wonderful flavor shows you the magic of Hunt's Tomato Sauce. Why, it gives even your low-cost recipes a flavor boost like no other tomato product! For Shepherd's Pie you'll need:

2 cups diced cooked meat
1½ cups cooked leftover carrots
1½ cups cooked leftover string beans
½ cup leftover gravy
2 cans Hunt's Tomato Sauce
2 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ tsp. salt

Combine these ingredients and place in greased casserole. Then you'll need:

3 boiled potatoes, thickly sliced melted butter or margarine

Brush potato slices with butter or margarine. Arrange in over-lapping layer around edge of casserole. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes or till heated through and potatoes are lightly browned. Serves 4 to 5. Thanks to Hunt's—they'll love it!

Hunt's Tomato Sauce gives you such grand cooking results because it's all tomato. Seasoned just right. And no starchy fillers! Costs you only a few pennies a can. So cook it into your stews, meat loaf, spaghetti, gravies. Look for the Hunt red label!

WHAT MAKES HER LIFE SO HAPPY

What gives Gay Scott her unusual charm and self-confidence? Perhaps her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott. They have wisely treated her as an adult since childhood.

The Scotts (he is a lawyer) have always had rules for Gay to follow, but have never chastised her. She has been wearing lipstick, dating since she was 13; she always tells her parents where she will be and is home by midnight, except on special occasions. Boys flock to her side but she treats them in a good-natured, off-handed, giggley way. In her diary she writes about the places she goes; not who her dates were. Her personal standard is this: "Would mother like it?"

She Has Security

Quick-minded Gay is in the upper third of her class. Although she helps her mother with the dishes and minds her baby sister, she is not an enthusiastic housekeeper. Her particular charge is her bedroom. (Sometimes her mother has to check to see if she really made the bed or just draped the spread over it!) However, she did paint the basement herself so the gang could dance there.

At 15, the world is happy for Gay. She is secure in the love and companionship of her family!

GAY has dates Fridays or Saturdays, like Cinderella, must be home by 12.

FOR Northwood teens, dancing must be slow; or peppy, like Charleston.

MAKING fudge with schoolmates offers chance to discuss "dream men."

The church plays an important part

ON SUNDAYS Gay's clear voice rings out from choir of Presbyterian Church of Frankfort. She volunteered to sing, considers it "most important thing that I do."

So easy! Here's all you need to know...

This is a combination jingle-and-mystery contest, one the whole family will enjoy!

Everybody uses light bulbs, so everybody can enter this contest. Present users know—and new users will find—that Westinghouse bulbs are bright and long-lasting, the best that money can buy, so get your Westinghouse bulbs and your contest blank now.

1. How To Enter. Buy three Westinghouse light bulbs and get an entry blank from your dealer. Send as many entries as you wish but for each entry you must certify that you bought three Westinghouse bulbs and give dealer's name and address. Mail to Westinghouse Miss Wink Contest, Box 74, New York 46, N. Y. Contest closes midnight, May 31, 1950.

2. Complete The Jingle. Write a last line for this jingle, which is printed on entry blank:

Put Westinghouse bulbs in your sockets today
And have better lighting tonight.
You'll notice the difference at work or at play

(last line must rhyme with tonight)

Prizes for best jingles will be awarded on basis of sincerity, originality, and aptness. Judges' decisions are final. Duplicate prizes in case of ties.

3. Name Miss Wink. Clues are given below her picture. HOWEVER, DON'T SEND US THE NAME OF MISS WINK YET! Here's why: The writers of the best 477 jingles will automatically receive the prizes listed in Prize Column #1. Then, each winner will be notified and asked to identify Miss Wink, in order to receive the Bonus Prize. The first prize jingle winner is eligible for the first bonus prize. No "DENTURE BREATH" for me*

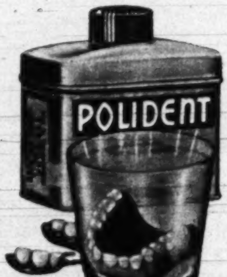
YOU know what Mr. R. means—don't you! It's a wonderful feeling to know that you're not offending friends with Denture Breath. And it's great when your plates feel clean and cool and fresh—from their Polident bath.

Soak your plates in Polident every day. It's so easy and quick. And Polident soaks into every corner and crevice—places brushing never seems to reach.

Remember—those dental plates of yours need the special care of a special denture cleanser. Don't brush them. Soak them in Polident (for only about a cent a day) to keep them sparkling with the original natural look—and free from Denture Breath! So get a can of Polident tomorrow, sure.

FREE! Generous Polident Sample. Write: Hudson Products, Department 153, Jersey City 2, N. J.



NO BRUSHING

Soak plate or bridge daily—fifteen minutes or more—in a fresh, cleansing solution of Polident and water.

SCOUT Edward Skarda, 8, pulled Charles Rilling, 6, from ice in a Long Island pool.

WHEN IT COMES to downright coolness in crisis, it's hard to beat some American 9-year-olds.

Take an incident in Chicago recently. A quick-smiling youngster named Dennis Trojan, 9, was in his mother's kitchen while she was doing the washing in the basement.

Dennis was munching a cookie when he heard his two brothers, Peter, 5, and Richard, 4, cry out. He ran into the living room, found it filled with flames and smoke. Then he thought fast. He snatched up sister Sandra, 14 months, and—smart kid—told his confused brothers to hang onto his clothing while he led them to safety. Without Dennis, all three could have lost their lives.

A Truck Bore Down

Things like this have happened before, but if anything, examples of small-fry courage and brilliance seem more frequent than ever.

You'd like to meet Philadelphia's Howard Freeman, 13. One stormy day recently he was standing near his home. Nearby, in the street, was a teen-aged girl. Suddenly a huge truck bore down on her. Without taking time to think twice, Howard raced toward her, knocked her down and then lay prone with her as the truck passed over both of them. Real heroism – and smart thinking.

They found a man who looked like Nesbit lurking in a hobo cave. They threw snow in, lured him out to get a good look at him. Sure now, they called police, who investigated, found the youngsters had smoked out Nesbit himself – a murder suspect. Photographed on these pages are other heroes–pint-size.

One way to serve our three-way dessert: a lovely-to-look at and luscious Chocolate Refrigerator Cake.

Three-Way Dessert

THIS IS A RECIPE to keep in a prominent place in your dessert file until you memorize it! And you will, because it's so easy, and because you'll use it so often in all three ways: (1) as Chocolate Fluff, for family meals; (2) dressed up as handsome Chocolate Roll or (3) as festive Refrigerator Cake, for company. Only three ingredients are needed for the basic "Fluff", that's why it is so easy to remember. Try each of these soon; we know you'll agree!

Chocolate Fluff

½ pkg. semi-sweet chocolate pieces
3 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate over hot water; add egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add vanilla. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry; fold in chocolate mixture. Spoon into sherbet glasses; chill. Serve with light cream or whipped cream. Yield: 4 servings.

Chocolate Roll

Use above recipe as filling for sponge cake jelly roll. Top with whipped cream and finely chopped semi-sweet chocolate pieces. Yield: 8 servings.

Chocolate Refrigerator Cake

Double Fluff recipe. Line a small loaf pan with strips of aluminum foil or waxed paper. Split lady fingers; place a layer on bottom and around sides of pan. Spoon in Chocolate Fluff. Top with lady fingers. Chill several hours. Use paper lining to lift out cake; remove paper. Top with whipped cream and chopped semi-sweet chocolate pieces. The yield will be 8 servings.

TOP: Melt chocolate over water. When a recipe says: "separate eggs; add yolks one at a time," an easy way is to keep each yolk in shell, whites together in bowl. MIDDLE: Line pan with 2 strips foil. BELOW: Halve lady fingers; place on bottom, sides of pan.

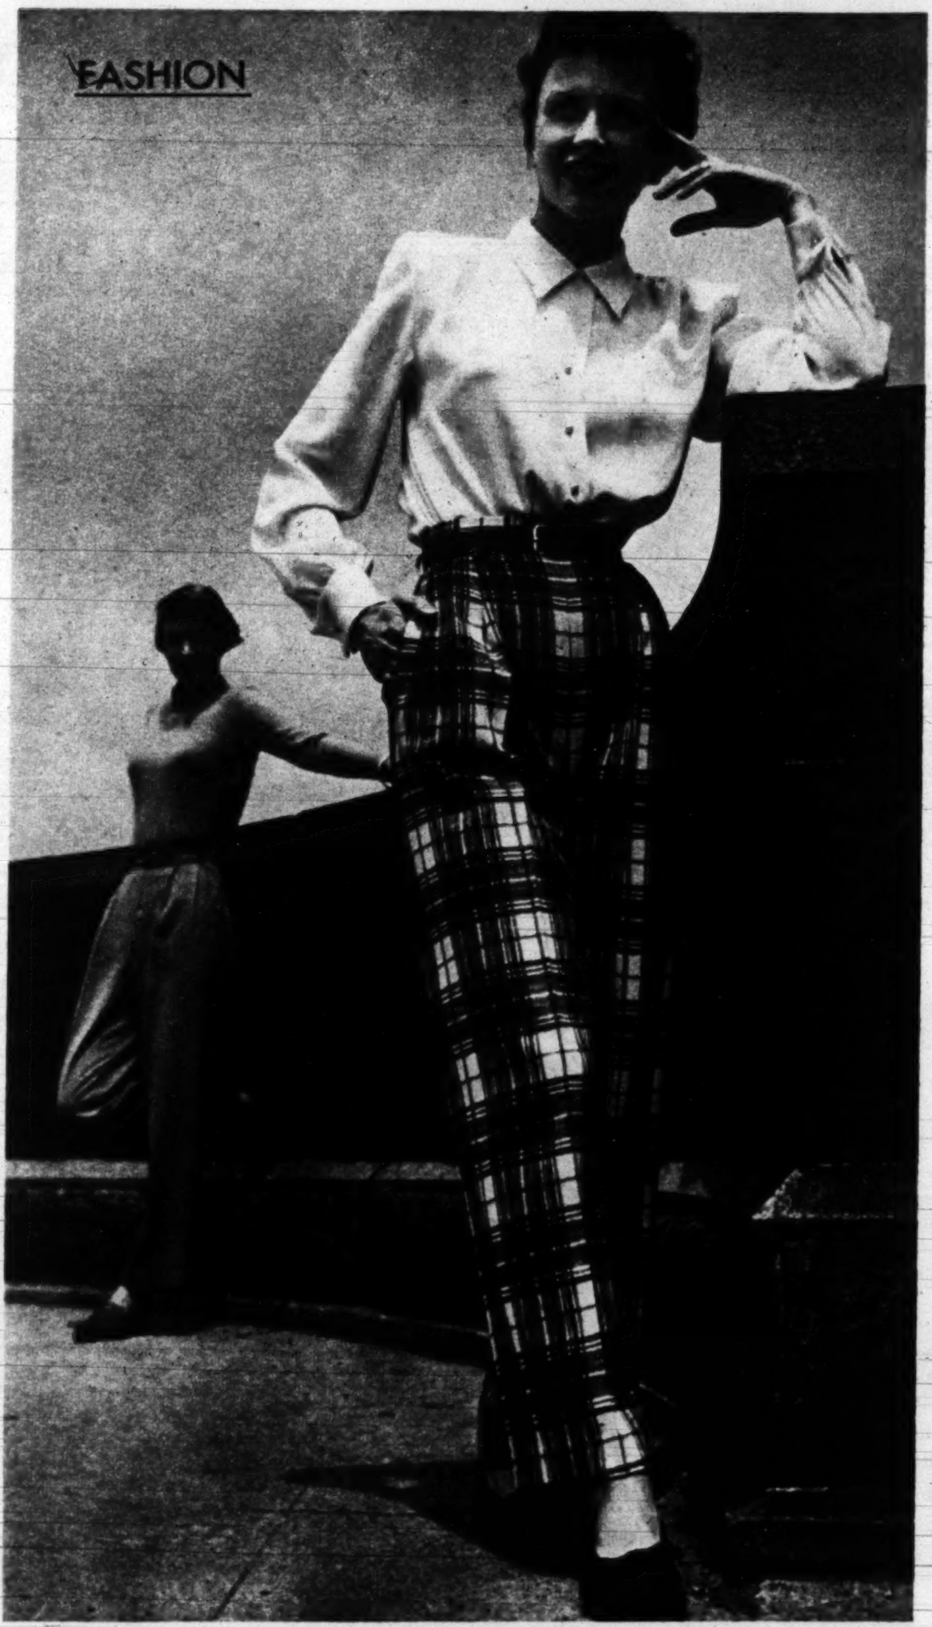
Few men—or women—can suffer for long from sensitive feet and not have it affect their dispositions. That's why it is so important for everyone to use Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder on feet that burn, smart, chafe, perspire or are odorous. Relief comes in seconds! Eases new or tight shoes, helps prevent Athlete's Foot. Your whole family should use Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder daily!



Year-round favorites: the monotone gabardine and gay clan plaid, man-tailored to make hips look slimmer. Styled by Davenshire, Inc., they cost $10.95, sizes 10-20.

Smart Slacks

HIP-CONSCIOUS women who used to shy away from slacks now clamor for more of them. Today's slacks are ingeniously designed to minimize figure flaws, are one of the smartest, most comfortable ingredients of a 1950 wardrobe. Newest notes: slacks of durable sailcloth; slacks of chamois-colored velveteen to match polo coats; light-weight coal-black slacks to wear with white.

Tampax helps to keep girls up-and-active!

Stop envying the freedom many young women have. Why not use Tampax yourself?

Why lose those precious days right out of your life each month? Why be a prisoner of the belt-pin-pad routine, when neat little Tampax will give you the freedom you had as a small girl? That's what Tampax was invented for—to solve your monthly sanitary problems.... No belts, pins or external pads. No odor. Easy disposal; it has much less bulk than the older kinds. Can be worn in tub or shower. No bulges or "edges" can show through light, tight skirts or dresses.... Made entirely of absorbent surgical cotton compressed in slender applicators. Month's supply slips into purse. Sold at drug and notion counters. 3 sizes: Regular, Super, Junior. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Massachusetts.

LEO DUROCHER (right) and Horace Stoneham.

Newsreel

By HY GARDNER

RECENTLY WE REPORTED that if Giant manager Leo Durocher had any problems this coming summer, he wouldn't have to go far to have them solved—John J. Anthony was his next-door neighbor on Park Avenue. Now it turns out Leo may be living in false security. A letter just received from Mr. Anthony says: "Mrs. Anthony and I decided to sublet our apartment for the summer. The first person to take a look at it was Boris Karloff. The elevator boys now treat me with a good deal of dignified respect—or is it fear? Sincerely yours, John J. Anthony." . . .

DOCTORS ARE TELLING this joke about what would happen if we had Socialized Medicine. As Dr. Milton Berliner, NY eye specialist tells it:

After three days of inquiry, a man with a painful abdominal disorder finally finds the clinic. He sees two doors. One has a sign reading "Acute." The other reads "Chronic." The patient opens the "Acute" door and find himself in another office with two doors. "Lower Abdomen" reads the sign on one. "Upper" says the other. Probing the affected area he determines it's the lower abdomen and opens the door designated. Here he finds himself in still another room with two doors, one lettered "Do You Own a Home?"—the second "Do You Rent?" Being a homeowner he walks through that door and enters a fourth room with two doors, one instructing: "Democrats This Way," —the other "Republicans." Being a Republican he walks through the latter door, then looks up to find himself—back on the street.

You can Relax!

By JOSEPHINE L. RATHBONE

Associate Prof. of Health, Teachers College, Columbia Univ.

MIDWAY IN WHAT LOOKED like a successful life, John Jones "mysteriously" cracked.

He began by feeling tired and irritable. His digestion went bad, his nerves frazzled, and he acquired a lingering headache. He became snappish on the job, and to his family. His crackup, when it came, was not "mysterious" to those who knew him. He couldn't relax.

You—office worker, housewife, or tycoon—can become another Jones. Simple bodily and mental fatigue, unrelieved until they become chronic, form the basis of one of the most widespread disorders of civilization.

You—the inner you—are the only one that can help yourself. Physicians and psychologists have some practical suggestions, but they cannot make you relax. Setting-up exercises, vacations and early-to-bed routines are almost valueless unless you relax inside.

Study yourself. If you are showing any of Jones' symptoms, check with your doctor for organic weaknesses. If he reports none, study yourself even harder. What do you do that calmer people around you do not do?

Perhaps you take yourself very seriously. Psychologists tell us that most tense people are self-centered. Do you feel an inner compulsion to work extra hard for extra recognition? Do you feel burdened with your responsibilities? Or do you feel insecure, afraid someone else will step into your shoes, or get ahead of you?

Do You Always Work in a Rush?

A close friend may help you study yourself. Do you hurry all the time? Are you in such a rush that you never take time enough for proper meals? Do you pour coffee into your body at any time of day or night when you are already stimulated enough? Perhaps you frown a great deal and show such other signs of tenseness as hunching your shoulders, sitting forward on the edge of your chair while talking, clenching your fists or biting your lips.

As well as being signs of an inner tenseness, these mannerisms are actually the cause of more feelings of tenseness. Psychological factors lead to physical mannerisms which, in their turn, lead to more nervous tension, in a vicious circle.

Vacations are the best time to break the vicious circle, but they may not be long enough, or possible to take when most needed. Most of us must break the circle and learn to relax in our day-to-day existence.

It can be done. If we plan it, we can have a vacation every hour, every day, every month, of every year.

Relaxation is world's best insurance against breakdown. The mind must relax first.

You may not have a daily schedule that allows you to get out of the office or house any time you like. But you can sit still—and relax—for a brief moment hourly.

Perhaps the time that you can put to work for you most profitably while you rest is the daily lunch hour. Psychologically, you may need laughter then. Tense people do not laugh enough.

If you have the opportunity during the day, throw a blanket on the floor and do some simple exercises. (Caution: too much exercise the first few times will only increase your tension.)

Sleep Is a Great Restorer

As a further aid, you can take changes of position for one minute intervals. Lie flat on your back first, then raise your legs so that your heels rest on the edge of the chair; then sit on the edge of the chair and put your heels where your hips were. Your legs will feel much better.

To gain ability in consciously relaxing, close your eyes and lie as limp as possible for at least ten minutes.

Some people spend fortunes in efforts to regain the ability to sleep. Others try self-medication and gadgets. If they could learn to relax, they could sleep at will.

Try these ideas:

1. Prepare for sleep by cutting down on the intensity of your thinking. Write to a friend, or read mild fiction before bed.
2. Definitely do not mentally take work to bed.
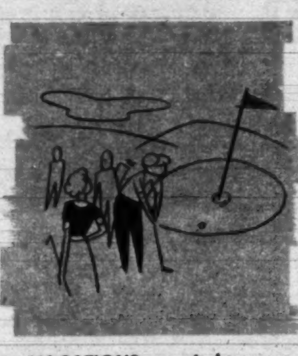
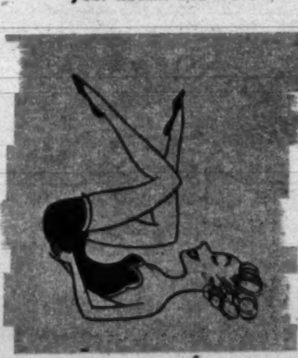
3. If your mind wants to cling to your fears or hates after the lights are turned out, you may have to discipline that mind.
4. Try to induce complete relaxation by controlling the rhythm of your breathing.
5. Lastly, make your body as heavy as possible on the bed. After you are satisfied that one arm cannot relax any more, do the same for the other arm. Then try to eliminate all tension from each leg in turn.

As everyone has observed, sleep taken before one is tired is the most restful and efficient. Upon this principle the last tip is based. Get rested before trying to sleep. If you think you are close to a breakdown, get into bed an hour or more before your regular time of retiring for a few nights, and see what a vast difference it will make.

SLEEP is nerve medicine. Prepare for it gradually.



VACATIONS are vital to your health and work



EXERCISE, while relaxed, relieves mental fatigue.

SUTTER'S CREEK was never like this. Mrs. Osborn Foster of Phoenix was one of 1,300 visitors who flocked to Wickenburg, Ariz., for the town's Gold Rush Day.

EASY GOLD RUSH

An Arizona town hauls ore-bearing earth from the desert so visitors can "prospect" in full comfort

EVER HAD A HANKERING to do a little panning for gold?

The place, pardner, the place for you is northwest a piece from Phoenix, Ariz., at a colorful town called Wickenburg.

Don't have to climb no hills. Don't have to carry no pack. Just drive up in your car on "Out-Wickenburg-Way-Gold-Rush-Day" and start a'panning.

Once a year, the Wickenburg Round-Up Club hauls in gold-bearing earth from the desert, digs an artificial stream and invites gold seekers to try their luck.

This year's Gold Rush still has old-timers buzzing. More than 1,300 "panners" turned out – and they weren't all visitors from the East.

There were grizzled prospectors on hand to show novices the ropes. And a real chuck wagon.

Oh yes, in case you're figuring it's an easy way to make a killing, pardner, the biggest and brightest gold "nugget" turned up was about half the size of the head of a pin.

PANNERS sifted through earth hauled from desert. The "stream" flowed from a spigot.

COFFEE brewed over mesquite fires and food from a chuck wagon added authentic note.

GOLD! Mrs. Eunice Hecox of Phoenix was elated by her find, a minute sliver.

"NOW LET'S SEE. Can this be it?" Something bright is shimmering in the pan.

SAMPLES of native minerals were provided so panners could check finds.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
by GEORGE WUNDER
BROTHERRR! NO WONDER THE HONORABLE MR. YANG IS IN A LATHER. WITH A FORTUNE IN HIS GOVERNMENT'S GOLD RESERVE BOUNCING AROUND IN THE OTHER TEAM'S BACKFIELD, HE'S AFRAID TO TRUST ANYONE.
HE HAD TO TAKE A CHANCE ON US, CHAZZ. THE GOLD MUST BE RETRIEVED BEFORE THE REBELS STUMBLE ONTO IT.
SO FAR THE GAMBLE HAS PAID OFF. THE CONVOY CARRYING THE GOLD ESCAPED FROM CHUNGKING OVER THE ONLY UNCUT ROAD A FEW HOURS BEFORE THE CITY FELL TO THE USURPER'S TROOPS.
UH, HUH... GUESS THIS MAJOR LING, IN COMMAND OF THE CONVOY, REALLY TRIED TO FOLLOW HIS ORDERS AND CROSS THE BORDER INTO TIBET. BUT HE RAN INTO TOO MUCH TROUBLE.
ACCORDING TO THE CODE MESSAGE THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT RADIO PEOPLE PICKED UP, WHAT'S LEFT OF HIS CONVOY, SHOT UP AND OUT OF GAS, IS HIDING OUT AT AN ABANDONED AIRSTRIP NEAR THE TIBETAN BORDER.
LUCKY THE STRIP WAS AN OLD A.A.F. EMERGENCY FIELD BUILT DURING THE WARTIME HUMP OPERATION. AT LEAST WE'VE GOT IT PLOTTED ON THE MAP.
SOME TIME LATER...
ONE O'CLOCK, LOW! LOOKS LIKE WE'VE FOUND IT, TERRY.
SWITCH TO THE WAVE BAND MAJOR LING USED TO TRANSMIT HIS S.O.S. IF THEIR RADIO IS ALIVE, TELL HIM TO STAND BY.
MAJOR LING! FRIENDLY AIRCRAFT... AM COMING IN FOR LANDING... BE READY TO BOARD SHIP WITH YOUR CHARGE AT ONCE. ACKNOWLEDGE... OVER...
SO HAPPY FOR EYES TO BEHOLD RESCUING WINGS, HONORED FRIENDS. PLEASE TO ACCEPT HOSPITALITY BY IMMEDIATE LANDING.

HOW WAS HIS BEHAVIOR?..EVERY TIME I'VE SEEN HIM HE'S BEEN AS MAD AS A FLEA ON A CAST IRON DOG!
I WONDER IF EVEN YOUR SAINTLY NATURE COULD LONG ENDURE..
WELL..HE DID KNOCK A CUP OF SCALDING COFFEE INTO HIS BUTLER'S FACE! LIVING WITH HIM WOULD CALL FOR... PATIENCE!
FRANKLY, AUNT MARY, IF I WERE YOU I WOULDN'T MARRY A CRAB LIKE DRUM GREENWOOD, EVEN IF HE PROMISED TO PLAY SANTA CLAUS TO THE WHOLE HUMAN RACE!
THERE'S SOMETHING WRONG WITH EVERYBODY, BRICK!... BUT THERE'S ALSO SOMETHING RIGHT!
WE COULD ACCOMPLISH WONDERFUL THINGS!..I'VE DONE SO LITTLE.. AND THERE'S SO MUCH TO DO..!
BUT YOU'D BE MISERABLE! THAT TEMPER OF HIS WOULD HAVE YOU WORKING ON YOUR SECOND ULCER WITHIN A WEEK!
HAPPINESS ISN'T THE GOAL IN LIFE! ..CHARACTER IS!
OF COURSE I SOMETIMES WONDER IF IT'S STUBBORN PRIDE, NOT LOVE, THAT DRIVES HIM!
NOW YOU'RE THINKING STRAIGHT!
NO, LINK..I WAS NEVER MORE CONFUSED! I THINK I'LL WALK DOWN TO THE CORNER.. AND TALK IT OVER..WITH A FRIEND!
WHAT DID SHE MEAN, BRICK? AUNT MARY HAS NO FRIEND AROUND HERE!
I DON'T KNOW..BUT SHE HAS OFTEN SAID TO ME, "BRICK DEAR..THERE IS ONE FRIEND I CAN ALWAYS TURN TO"...I SUPPOSE THERE ARE THINGS SHE DOESN'T TELL EVEN US, DARLING!

MICKEY FINN
By Lank Leonard
YOU SHOULD HAVE A PRIVATE PHONE IN YOUR HOUSE INSTEAD OF A PARTY LINE, MICKEY! I TRIED TO GET YOU FOR AN HOUR LAST NIGHT!
I KNOW, SERGEANT! I'VE WANTED TO GET ONE—BUT UNCLE PHIL IS OPPOSED TO IT!
GOOD GRIEF! IT WOULD ONLY BE ABOUT A DOLLAR A MONTH EXTRA! IS HE GETTING THAT TIGHT?
IT ISN'T THAT, SERGEANT! IT'S BECAUSE HE ONCE SAID THAT A PARTY LINE WAS GOOD ENOUGH FOR ANYBODY—AND HE'S STICKING TO IT!
WEREN'T YOU SUPPOSED TO CALL MR. CLANCY BEFORE LUNCH, PHILIP—ABOUT THAT TICKET TO THE FIGHTS?
BY GOLLY, THAT'S RIGHT! IF HE DIDN'T HEAR FROM ME, HE WAS GOING TO GIVE IT TO SOMEBODY ELSE!
WELL, I'M SO GLAD YOU CALLED ME, MRS. McGINTY! WHAT ELSE IS NEW?
DID YOU HEAR ABOUT MILDRED TUSSELBUCKEL? SHE'S GETTIN' A DIVORCE!
WHAT IS PHIL'S OBJECTION TO HAVING A PRIVATE PHONE IN THE HOUSE, MRS. FINN? IT WOULDN'T COST MUCH MORE A MONTH!
IT'S BECAUSE HE ONCE INSISTED THAT A PARTY LINE WAS PERFECTLY SATISFACTORY—AND NOW HE DOESN'T WANT TO ADMIT THAT HE WAS WRONG!
WHAT'S THE MATTER, PHILIP? I THOUGHT YOU WERE GOING TO CALL MR. CLANCY?
I'VE BEEN TRYIN' TO CALL HIM FOR TEN MINUTES, BUT—AH—TWO WOMEN ARE GOSSIPIN' ON THE LINE!
HUMPH! STILL AT IT!
THAT ISN'T THE WAY I HEARD IT, MRS. McGINTY!
WELL, YOU HEARD IT WRONG! I GOT IT FROM THE SWITCHBOARD OPERATOR IN HIS OFFICE—AND SHE OUGHT TO KNOW!
NO, I COULDN'T COME OVER FOR CANASTA TUESDAY, MRS. McGINTY! MAKE IT FOR THURSDAY!
NOT THURSDAY! I'M GOING TO VISIT AUNT KATE ON THURSDAY! HOW ABOUT FRIDAY?
HOW ABOUT SHUTTING YOUR BIG MOUTH AND GIVIN' SOMEBODY ELSE A CHANCE TO USE THIS LINE?
WHO IS THAT FRESH GUY, MRS. McGINTY?
I SURE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW!
OH, YOU WOULD, EH? WELL, THE NAME IS FINN! PHILIP FINN! NOW CLOSE YOUR TRAP AND GET OFF THE WIRE!
OF ALL THE NERVE! GOOD-BYE, MRS. McGINTY.
GOOD-BYE!

YES, I'M MR. FINN! WHO ARE YOU?
MR. McGINTY!
WE'RE GOING TO GET A PRIVATE PHONE?

PIXIE PUZZLE ADVENTURES by Matt Curzon
Copyright, 1950, New York Herald Tribune Inc.
1 THE LITTLE BEAR BOWS BEFORE THE KING AND STIFFLY TELLS HIM, "SIRE, THE PIXIES AWAIT WITHOUT." "BEFORE YOU SEND THEM IN", ROARS THE KING, "GIVE THEM THIS MESSAGE WHICH IS SCRAMBLED AROUND THE HOOP." THE TRICK HERE IS TO FIND THE FIRST LETTER OF THE FIRST WORD OF THE SENTENCE, AND THEN ADD EVERY SECOND LETTER UNTIL THE MESSAGE IS COMPLETED.
2 THE CUB COMES OUT AND TELLS THE PIXIES THAT THE KING IS READY TO RECEIVE THEM. "BEFORE I LET YOU IN", SAYS THE CUB, "I WANT TO TEACH YOU HOW TO BOW BEFORE THE KING!" WHEN THE PIXIES BEND DOWN TO PRACTICE THE "BOW", SPUNKY'S PANTS RIP AND THEY ALL LAUGH. THE HOLE IN SPUNKY'S PANTS TEARS INTO A SQUARE (FIG.1). THE CUB FINDS FIVE PIECES OF GOODS, WHICH WHEN PUT TOGETHER FIT INTO THE SQUARE. DRAW FOUR STRAIGHT LINES IN THE SQUARE (FIG.1) TO SHOW HOW THE FIVE PIECES CAN FIT IN.
HERE IS ONE LINE-DRAW THE OTHER THREE LINES.
FIG.1
3 "GO STRAIGHT THROUGH THAT DOOR", SAYS THE CUB, "START WITH THE 5 AND ADD 4 AS YOU GO ALONG--HORIZONTALLY OR VERTICALLY. I'LL START YOU OFF," HE SAYS, "FIRST GO INTO BOX 5, THEN TO 9, TO 13, TO 17 AND SO ON, UNTIL YOU GET TO NUMBER 65 WHERE THE KING IS SITTING. HURRY UP," HE ADDS, "DON'T KEEP THE KING WAITING AND IF YOU END UP WITH ANY OTHER NUMBER, THE KING WILL BE DISAPPOINTED."
